

Doctor who heals unborn tells of life before birth

By Bob Keefer
Staff Writer

"Working with babies before birth as your patients, it requires a remarkably compartmentalized conscience to say 'this one's important — but that one's marked for destruction,'" said the gray-haired doctor.

New Zealand physician Sir Albert William Liley has had 14 years of professional work in fetology to contemplate this melancholy idea since he developed the first medical techniques for diagnosing and treating diseases of the unborn infant.

Working at the University of Auckland, N.Z., Liley pioneered blood transfusions for unborn infants of parents whose blood Rh-factors are incompatible.

Liley, featured speaker at the California Pro-Life Council's 1977 conference aboard the Queen Mary this weekend, discussed some of his feelings about abortion Saturday morning.

"What one is doing to the unborn child is not only immoral, it would be illegal with any other patient," he said.

Others may quarrel about when human life begins, but Liley himself has no doubt it starts at conception. He calls birth "an arbitrary matter" despite people's "sociological and astrological" attachment to the event.

Liley attacked what he called the "bombardier mentality" of people who support abortion because they "don't know what the fetus is like."

Now, he said, we have both the technique and the opportunity to "invade the privacy of the womb" and see human life as it actually begins.

Liley spoke plainly and simply of his relationship to the fetus, without the crusading fervor of some anti-abortionists.

A fetus is a patient and a human being, in his view, and he smiled wryly at the "do-gooders" he said the movement attracts.

Dr. John C. Willke, a family practice physician in Cincinnati and vice president of the National Right to Life Committee, views abortion in more political terms.

The anti-abortion effort is the "paradigm of a civil rights movement," he said.

Willke, also a speaker at the conference, is fond of comparing the issues of the "pro-life" struggle to those of the abolitionist movement of the 19th century.

Before enactment of the 13th amendment, said Willke, slave-owners had life and death authority over blacks, much as women today can legally choose to kill the fetuses they carry within them.

Willke said that if society allows the destruction of unborn individuals — even to benefit society at large — then it is dangerously close to allowing the killing of other "socially inconvenient" individuals such as the elderly, the handicapped or the retarded.

Defending the Congressional effort to cut off federal funding of abortions for the poor, Willke charged that present practice amounts to genocide.

"We are killing off three black babies for every white baby aborted," he said. "There are people in government who think this is a way of solving poverty."

Like many anti-abortionists, Willke is uncompromising in his position.

The physician admitted that tactics of many anti-abortionists — "the ones who come on swinging dead fetuses" — may not have helped the movement. However, he called himself a "hard-liner" who feels people have to be exposed to the reality of abortion before making up their minds on the issue.

Cuba seeded clouds

... for Weathermen

For a small nation, Cuba gets around. It's just been revealed that Cuban spies helped the Weather Underground sew dissension in the United States in the late '60s and early '70s. So, incidentally, did Hanoi. Page A-4.

Carter credibility

... takes wings

President Carter's credibility has come under much scrutiny since he was elected. Latest gap is in his international arms-curb program. Maybe 140 F-16 fighter planes for Iran don't count. Page A-5.

Trapped

... in folding bed

Folding beds aren't the easiest things to set up. A 70-year-old man found folded up in one Saturday had been enmeshed in the contraption five days. He was hospitalized in serious condition. Page A-6.

Song of Carter

Would you believe that the largest department in the White House is the press room? It employs 45 people dedicated to presenting Jimmy Carter in the best possible light. Page A-8.

Love, hate

... etched in acid

The vandal responsible for defiling priceless paintings with acid in West German museums had a simple explanation when arrested this weekend: "I must destroy what others cherish." Police said he had been emotionally disturbed since his wife, whom he cherished, was killed in a traffic accident about 8 months ago. Page A-14.

Diamond-studded

Half the world's diamonds have for years passed casually from hand to hand along the crowded sidewalks of Manhattan's 47th Street in an atmosphere born of trust. But murder and robbery have suddenly transformed the street of diamonds into a street of fear. Page A-15.

Weathermen blow hot, cold

Chicago Tribune Service

In 1666 a loquacious Londoner named Leeds predicted "something" bad was going to happen. Along came the great London fire; and people decided Leeds either set it or was bewitched. So they hanged him, a point that has not escaped wary weathermen from Poor Richard Saunders (Ben Franklin) on.

But weather is merely a day's worth of climate; and strange and savage global shifts of fire, ice, flood and drought have recently thrust climatologists into new (and often unwelcome) prominence. An almost mystical faith in science demands answers behind the rash of bad surprises that plague the planet as it spins and wobbles its way around the sun.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) reports more weather records set in the last 15 years than the previous 60. Weather continuously makes news now, be it terrible flash floods in Kansas City, Mo., and Johnstown, Pa., the unrelenting drought in the West, the big July heat, the big January cold or worldwide encroachment by deserts.

But do these phenomena portend major climatic change, or just a routine, 700,000-year return to lousy weather as usual?

Despite waves of volatile theories and countertheories, no one really knows.

"Scientists learned how to split the atom before we discovered how rain forms," says University of Chicago geophysicist Roscoe Braham. "Weather always has been taken for granted, and solid research is a very recent state. There's a lot going on, because of the extremely variable weather we've encountered. People want answers."

Braham and other scientists, see extreme variability as the new norm. Over the last 7 million years, they say, the global mean temperature has been as high as it's been this century only 5 percent of the time. The mean temperature marks the touchy balance between the forces of heat and cold on the planet; the forces of feast or famine.

"The record suggests the 1940s-1960s period reflects abnormally steady and pleasant weather in the Northern Hemisphere; which is where most people live," Braham says. "We probably can anticipate extreme changes from now on."

But they tend to average out, he says: "When I evaluate this last year, I think of a guy with one foot in a bucket of ice water and the other foot in a pail of hot water. On the average, it feels OK."

Meteorologists consider long range forecasting just guesswork, and they avoid it. The National

"When the hair is wet on the scalping tent, surely it must rain." —Zuni Indian saying.

Weather Service claims 85 percent accuracy in anticipating major fronts — those great blobs of sudden cold and slower-moving warmer air masses which collide or hang stagnant and cause weather changes.

Even so, the forecasters rate their accuracy quite severely. The American Meteorological Society last year examined the state of its art. For up to 48 hours, "forecasts of considerable skill and utility are attained," the AMS found. The five-day forecast showed "moderate skill and usefulness" for predicting daily temperatures, but precipitation is moderately predictable only three days in advance.

From five days to a month ahead, average temperature can be predicted "with some slight skill," but day-to-day and week-to-week forecasts "have no demonstrated skill." And for more than a month ahead, "skill in daily forecasts is nonexistent, and skill in seasonal outlooks is minimal."

Three months ahead is all the farthest-thinking official source will venture. Federal odds-maker Don Gilman, director of the Weather

Onion, cricket may be fair prophets of weather — or not

By Peter Gerner
Chicago Tribune Service

The American Civil Liberties Union announced this week that it would challenge the constitutionality of the law if Carter signed it. Organizations which have worked for "amnesty" for civilian and military war resisters expressed dismay and bafflement at the president's failure to veto.

In effect, the bill would deny such benefits as subsidized college education to Vietnam-era veterans who received less-than-honorable discharges and had them upgraded under a special discharge review program initiated by Carter, unless they go through another review process based on "historically" consistent standards for honorable discharges.

A controversial provision of the law denies any veterans' benefits to dischargees who had been absent without leave for 180 consecutive days unless they can convince the administrator of veterans' affairs that there were "compelling reasons" for their absence.

While such men are often referred to as "deserters," they do not legally fit that description for several reasons, one of which is that they have not been convicted by a court-martial which proved intent to desert. Instead, the armed services mostly used a system of plea bargaining with such absentees, persuading them to take "undesirable discharges" in lieu of prosecution.

Carter's first act as president was to offer a nearly unconditional pardon to about 8,000 "draft dodgers," or civilians who avoided induction into the armed forces. He later announced his special discharge review program for nearly 500,000 servicemen of the 1964 to 1973 Vietnam era who received "bad" discharges but were not convicted of serious crimes by courts-martial.

Carter's program offered "automatic" upgrading to several classes of veterans, most notably those who served a full 12-month combat tour of duty in Vietnam and subsequently went absent without leave.

Although only a small fraction of those eligible became aware of the program or chose to apply, about 16,000 persons received improved discharges. In most cases,

Q and A

Chief Lion says goal is service

In the weeks before Christmas, Joseph M. McLoughlin of Stamford, Conn. will be standing next to a Salvation Army kettle asking for contributions for the needy. He'll be doing this despite being president of Lions International, the largest service club in the world.

For Joe McLoughlin, that is the spirit of the 1.2-million member group.

McLoughlin, 50, owns a lumber yard, but since being elected in July, he has been traveling the world, meeting with Lions Clubs, foreign leaders and people in need.

He has meetings scheduled with United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and President Carter, who is a Lion. McLoughlin will be discussing the theme of his presidency—"Lions Clubs must care about people."

McLoughlin was aboard the Queen Mary in Long Beach Saturday to address a banquet in honor of the 50th anniversary of the Griffith Park Lions Club in Los Angeles. This was his first trip to California since becoming president. He was interviewed by Independent Press-Telegram staff writer Mark Gladstone.

Q. Are you getting as many younger people joining the Lions in the United States as you would like?

A. No. Not as many as I would like to get.

Q. Why is there a hesitancy on the part of younger people to join, or will they join when they are older?

A. I think that service clubs, and my chief concern obviously is Lions, have to become more aware of the relevant problems in the communities today. If a Lions Club has had a project, and the main project of that community has existed over the past 20 or 25 years, chances are... that need in that community has become obsolete... and I think that it behooves (the clubs) to reassess their activities in their communities, to re-evaluate their projects.

And perhaps today, whereas for the last 20 years they've been supporting the Little League team, and that is certainly a great project... perhaps the Lions should go into the ghetto area of the city and build a basketball court. Perhaps they

2 Russ cosmonauts launched in orbit

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union today launched into orbit a Soyuz 25 spacecraft with two cosmonauts aboard for joint experiments with the Salyut 6 space station launched Sept. 29, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

An official announcement said the spaceship commander, Lt. Col. Valery Kovalenok, 35, and the flight engineer, Valery Ryumin, 38, were "feeling well." It was the first space flight for both men.

Western experts had been predicting a Soviet space spectacular this month or next to mark the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution on Nov. 7.

It was not known what projects the new flight will include, but speculation has centered on space walks or major new scientific experiments in orbit.

Festival's a real-live storybook

LEE PENNINGTON of Louisville, Ky., spins a yarn at National Story-Telling Festival in Jonesboro, Tenn. —AP Wirephoto

Combined News Services

"Doc" McConnell leans forward and, with an "I had this friend named Woody," he's off on another of his yarns at a festival dedicated to preserving the art of story-telling.

The National Storytelling Festival was begun five years ago in Jonesboro, Tennessee's oldest city, by Jimmy Neil Smith, a former teacher who worried that story-telling was becoming extinct.

With the help of grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the festival spawned the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling.

McConnell, known in the East Tennessee mountains as the barker of Doc McConnell's Old Time Medicine Show, is one of 20 featured story-tellers at the festival.

Festival director Brett Harrell said the biggest boost to storytelling in recent years has been Alex Haley's book, "Roots," and the television drama adapted from it.

"More and more people are trying to trace their genealogy, and stories handed down from one generation to another is one of the only few things available to do it with," he said.

A four-block area of Jonesboro restored to resemble the way it looked in the early 1800s is the backdrop for both the festival and for McConnell's story about Woody and his girl.

"Woody had decided he wanted to walk her home after tradin' and swappin' stuff up at the general store. He had a walkin' stick, and had just bought him a No. 2 tub a hangin' on his shoulder. Some fellow up at the poultry house had given him an old hen, and he'd been up at the stockyard and traded his old hound in for a calf.

"... He started walking down the railroad track with her, then started for the woods, and she said, 'I'm not going through those woods with you Woody. You get me back in them woods someplace on a dark path and you'll take advantage of me — because I'm a virtuous woman.'"

"He said, 'Now how in the world could I take advantage of you back in there somewheres? Here I got this No. 2 tub a hangin' over my shoulder, got this walkin' cane and got this old hen under my arms and leadin' this calf.'"

"She said, 'Well you could stick that walkin' cane in the ground, tie that calf to it and put that tub over that old hen.'"

S. Africa paper reprimanded

South Africa's Press Council has upheld a government complaint against a leading liberal English-language newspaper for its front-page report on the cause of black leader Steve Biko's death while in police custody last month.

The three-man council reprimanded the Rand Daily Mail for "tendentious reporting" and ruled it must publish a full "adjudication" — a clarifying story including the council's findings — on its front page as soon as possible.

It was the first time the self-regulatory body handled a major government complaint against the South African press.

Sydney W. Kentridge, who defended the newspaper, called the council's finding that the story had been biased "completely unacceptable."

In the story in question, published Friday, the newspaper quoted physicians who had examined Biko in his final days as saying he apparently suffered brain damage and bruises before his mysterious death on Sept. 12.

Although the doctors would not comment on whether Biko's death was caused by physical assault, they said in the newspaper report they found no evidence that Biko had been on a hunger strike. The front-page headline read "No Sign of Hunger Strike — Biko Doctors."

South African authorities said after Biko's death that the 30-year-old black activist had been refusing food for a week. The findings of a government autopsy on Biko's body have not yet been released.

Hours after the newspaper report appeared, Justice Minister James T. Kruger lodged a complaint with the Press Council and asked for an urgent hearing because he said the matter touched the "national interest."

Kruger, in his complaint, charged that the statements from doctors quoted in the Rand Daily Mail story did not support the sensational headline or the conclusion drawn by the newspaper.

"The fact that emerged from interviews with these doctors and others who had contact with Mr. Biko during the last week of his life contradict points made by Mr. Kruger in the statement that followed the worldwide outcry over Mr. Biko's death."

In its ruling, the Press Council said it was clear that the headline "does not give a reasonable reflection of the contents of the report and gives a distorted view."

Kentridge conceded that the story's headline could have been better worded. "On a certain interpretation, it may be said that it is at least ambiguous."

Singer sues 'mimickers'

Singer Johnny Cash has filed suit in Los Angeles for more than $1 million against a camera company, saying the firm mimicked his voice and personality in a radio commercial without his authorization.

The suit asks Yashica Inc. to stop using the commercial and award Cash $1 million in punitive damages and an unspecified amount in general damages.

The suit said the commercial invaded Cash's privacy by using phrases and song titles that are part of his act and referring to "June and Maybelle," his wife and mother-in-law.

VANCOUVER, Wash. — A twin-engine plane crashed into a home and burst into flames Saturday, killing a woman in the kitchen and three people aboard the aircraft. Six other occupants of the house escaped safely before the two-story building was destroyed by fire.

The Piper Navajo, registered to Mark 50 Machinery, Inc. of Portland, Ore., took off from Pearson Airpark here about 8:30 a.m. and crashed minutes later, police said. Authorities said they believed only three persons were aboard the plane.

The woman killed in the house was identified as Taiko Halgren, 28.

Tris

I have three pairs of children's sleepers that have never been washed. I am afraid they may have been treated with the flame-retardant chemical, Tris, but they were a gift so I can't take them back. How can I tell if they have Tris in them? They are made of polyester and tri-acetate. B.A., Long Beach.

Garments made from polyester, acetate or tri-acetate may contain Tris, said a spokesman for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Although the chemical was banned by the federal government in April and no longer is being used in the manufacture of clothes, there still are garments being sold that contain Tris.

When the commission banned the substance, it also barred further sale of Tris-treated children's sleepwear and ordered manufacturers to repurchase unwashed garments. But in June a U.S. District Court in Columbia, S.C. voided the latter part of the commission's ruling, so Tris-treated garments manufactured before April are finding their way back to retail store shelves.

Tests by the National Cancer Institute showed Tris to be a potent carcinogen in rats and mice and other experiments have shown that Tris rubbed off from clothing can be readily absorbed into the skin. Dr. Bruce Ames, a University of California biochemist whose tests first spotted Tris as a potential carcinogen two years ago, has estimated that as many as 17,000 of every million children who wore Tris-treated pajamas might develop kidney tumors by the time they reach their 20s. Although washing the garments three times can remove some of the risk, traces of Tris still remain after repeated launderings, experiments have found.

Mail disorder

In June I ordered merchandise from Magic Mold Inc. in Freeport, N.Y. and sent them a check for $46.50. They cashed my check on June 24, but I still have not received the things I ordered. I have written letters to the company, but get no answer. By this time I would just like to get my money back. F.B.V., Long Beach.

A refund check will be sent to you. A customer service spokeswoman checked the records at Action Line's request and found that your order never was sent. "I don't know why it didn't go out," she said. "It was quite a large order and perhaps they were waiting for items on back order. In any event, she has waited long enough."

Detreed

Recently a lovely row of trees was planted on Country Club Drive in Lakewood across from Hoover Junior High. While driving by, I noticed that six or more of the stakes holding up the trees were broken down and they stayed that way. I was concerned enough to call the county's roadside tree department and was told that numerous reports about the trees had been called in and they would relay my call to the proper authorities.

Two days later I drove by, and all the trees, the broken and healthy ones alike, were gone. What happened to these trees and why weren't they taken care of? Was this project a total loss? N.M., Lakewood.

Yes. Most of the trees were destroyed by vandals, said Phil Jackson, superintendent of the Los Angeles County Parks and Recreation Department's golf division. The trees were planted as part of the refurbishing of the county-owned Lakewood golf course. Jackson said a crew tried several times to put the stakes back up, but they were always knocked down and eventually most of the trees were killed.

The county decided it was a hopeless situation and removed all the trees. "We're now considering various landscaping plans. We don't know yet if we will put up new trees, but if we do, we'll use larger trees that won't be easily knocked down," Jackson said.

Two birthdays

What must I do to correct the birth date on my passport, which I have to renew soon? I was born at home in Memphis, Tenn., and the doctor who delivered me was late in recording my birth, so my birth certificate indicates that I'm a year younger than I really am. I have a notarized letter from my mother, who is deceased, the 1930 census record which gives my true age at that time and my first school enrollment form. C.R., Lakewood.

You first should get your birth certificate corrected. Elaine Wingfield, a spokeswoman for the Tennessee Vital Records Department, said her office can correct a birth certificate if the applicant submits at least one official document dated within 10 years of the person's birth and an affidavit from a relative who is at least 10 years older than the applicant.

She said it appears the documents you have already assembled would be acceptable, and if you will send them and $4, your birth certificate will be corrected and a new copy will be sent to you. You can submit photocopies of the school and census documents, but you must send the original letter from your mother. Send the material to Elaine Wingfield, Vital Records, Tennessee Department of Public Health, Cordell Hull Building, Nashville, Tenn. 37219.

Once you have the corrected birth certificate, you can get the information on your passport changed. Otherwise, your incorrect birth certificate will always carry more weight than the other documents with such agencies as the passport office and Social Security, so you should have it corrected.

Man dies in shootout after kidnapping cop

WRIGHTWOOD (AP) — A San Bernardino man has been killed in a canyon shootout with San Bernardino County sheriff's deputies.

John F. Schweikart Jr., 23, was pronounced dead on arrival at a Loma Linda hospital Friday night after being flown there by helicopter from Lone Pine Canyon where the fatal shoot-out occurred.

Deputy Sonja Barber said Schweikart had been arrested at a Wrightwood service station Friday after an employee reported that he resembled a robber who had held up the place several days earlier.

Schweikart was taken to the Victorville sheriff's substation by deputies Pat Dailey and Robert Wold, but managed to take Wold's revolver and flee in the patrol car with Wold as a hostage, returning to the service station where he had left his motorcycle, authorities said.

An attendant freed Wold from the car while Schweikart was attending to his motorcycle, officials said. Schweikart then got back in the car and sped off, with police pursuing in a high-speed chase down Lone Pine Canyon Road.

After wrecking the patrol car when he lost control on a curve, Schweikart fled on foot, armed with a shotgun from the vehicle as well as Wold's revolver. Helicopters were used in a search for Schweikart, who was finally located in a brushy area.

Sailor in Cal. after solo trip from Japan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Japanese man who sailed alone some 4,500 miles across the Pacific from his homeland docked safely Saturday at Pillar Point Harbor, 20 miles south of San Francisco, the Coast Guard reported.

Seigi Okamura, aboard the sailboat Cinthya III, hove into the bay at about noon, almost five months after leaving Japan. The lone sailor announced, "both me and the boat are in good condition," according to Coast Guard Lt. Jeff Hathaway.

The ship Fancy Dancer pulled alongside the Cinthya III when it was about a mile offshore and passed over a chart of the California coast and a can of beer.

"That got him into port okay," Hathaway said.

Okamura left Yube, Japan, on May 17. There was no indication of how large his boat was, but he said it had a storm sail and a mizzen jib, Hathaway reported.

The U.S. Customs Service said Okamura had 24 hours from the time he set foot on American soil to report his arrival.

Jet drops part, but lands OK

A Continental Airlines DC-10 made a safe landing Saturday after losing a "leading edge device" on the landing approach to Los Angeles International Airport, sheriff's deputies reported.

Pieces of the device, which alters the shape of the wing to add stability to the big jet, landed in a vacant lot in Walnut near Valley Boulevard and Camino de Teodoro at 11:05 a.m.

Bruce Plauman, a spokesman for Continental, said the 90 passengers and 13 crew members on Flight 959 from Houston to Los Angeles landed on time 10 minutes after the mishap.

Deputies said there were no injuries or reported damage, although debris was strewn over the area.

Plauman said a Federal Aviation Administration investigation is expected.

Crash victim climbs cliff

Associated Press

A 36-year-old North Hollywood woman who crawled up a 275-foot cliff from her wrecked automobile was in stable condition Saturday suffering from shock, cuts and bruises, hospital officials said.

Carol Jucewicz climbed for 20 hours after she lost control of her car and it plunged over a cliff on Mount Wilson Road above Asuza about 5 p.m. Friday, said Officer Dale Dates of the California Highway Patrol.

The woman was found along the road about 1 p.m. Saturday by motorcyclists, Dates said.

Car hits pole; 1 dies, 3 hurt

A Cudahy man was killed and three other people were injured early Saturday when their car struck a telephone pole in Maywood, police said.

Dead at the scene was Ismael Camacho, 19, of 4120 Live Oak Lane.

Two persons were taken to St. Francis Hospital in Lynwood, and another was taken to Santa Maria Hospital in Los Angeles.

According to authorities, the car was speeding north when it left the roadway and struck a pole in the 5300 block of Atlantic Boulevard at about 1:45 a.m.

Judge has suspect over a barrel

A suspected purse snatcher was at the mercy of the judge Saturday night. But there was one big difference—this judge packed a gun.

Gilbert Thompson, 36, a Long Beach lawyer and Compton Municipal Court judge, told police he heard a woman's screams at his nearby home. He said he saw a man running from the parking lot of the nearby Safeway market, so he got a handgun he owns and ran after the fleeing man. Thompson told police he flushed a man from behind a camper a few blocks away, and delivered him to officers who in the meantime had arrived at the parking lot.

Eric Turner, 23, of 2039 10th St., Long Beach, was arrested and booked for investigation of strongarm robbery.

The victim, Ruth Cree, 77, told police she was in the parking lot unlocking her car door when she was pushed to the ground. The attacker tried to wrest her purse from her. She screamed and held on tighter. The suspect let go and ran away with her car keys.

Attempt to scale 'pyramid' foiled

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two men, braving the winds and urban wilds, tried to scale the 48-story Transamerica pyramid, but police tied up their lines and arrested them before they reached the building's peak Saturday.

For Edward Drummond, 32, of San Francisco, the white spire in the heart of the city's financial district was irresistible. Police said it was the steeplejack's second attempt at scaling the structure.

"He got way up there this time," said Police Sgt. Howard Kyle. "We finally got him in on the 21st floor."

Drummond's climbing companion, Robert Zipper, 23, of Los Gatos, was coaxed in on the 11th floor, Kyle said.

Two police units and three fire trucks rallied to the scene Saturday morning when word of scale attempt came into Central Station, Kyle said.

The mountaineers kept climbing and stubbornly refused to come down. Kyle said the men gave up only after police began tying off their lines.

The two were arrested and booked for investigation of trespassing.

Drummond, his wife Grace and Jeff Long, 25, tried to make the Transamerica climb last Jan. 29. They abandoned that climb on the 7th floor after police issued trespassing citations. The citations were later dropped when the building management refused to press charges.

Despite his failure this time, Kyle said Drummond kept up good spirits. "We shook hands when he left," he said. "I wish he would have made it."

Cuba helped Weathermen, FBI report says

By Nicholas Horrock
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Cuban espionage agents operating in the United States and Canada supplied limited support to the Weather Underground, a militant antiwar organization, in the late 1960s and early 1970s, according to a top-secret report by the FBI.

Some assistance also was provided by North Vietnam, the report says, but there was no evidence that the Soviet Union, China or Eastern European nations ever made active attempts to stir up American dissidents.

The 400-page report, a copy of which has been obtained by The New York Times, was prepared in August 1976 after the Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into charges that bureau agents had committed burglaries and carried out illegal mail openings and wiretaps in their attempts to apprehend Weathermen fugitives.

The closely held report — only 10 copies were sent to the bureau director, Clarence M. Kelley — was aimed at establishing that members of the Weather Underground were operating as secret agents of a foreign power and were thus legitimate targets of counterintelligence measures.

THE REPORT disclosed, however, that Communist-bloc nations had given little tangible support to the American antiwar movement. The report was based on information from the Central Intelligence Agency, several foreign intelligence services, a wide range of American and foreign police agencies, electronic eavesdropping and reports of several confidential informers.

The following were some of the key points:

48—Three years before militant members of the Students for a Democratic Society split off to form the Weather Underground Organization in 1970, North Vietnamese and Cuban officials were influencing radical antiwar strategy through foreign meetings. Many of these meetings were held in Communist countries, including Hungary, Czechoslovakia and North Vietnam.

The conduit for contact within the borders of the U.S. were agents assigned to the staff of the Cuban Mission in New York. These agents arranged for American youths to be inculcated with revolutionary fervor and, occasionally, to be trained in practical weaponry through the so-called Venceremos Brigades, nominally sugar cane harvesting units.

After the Weathermen went "underground" in 1970 and many of them were being sought by the FBI on criminal charges, Cuban intelligence officers were in touch with them from both the New York mission and the Cuban Embassy in Canada.

— Cuban officials helped several Weather Underground adherents who feared arrest in the U.S. to travel to Prague, Czechoslovakia, and then to re-enter the U.S. surreptitiously.

The report linked the growing militancy of certain members of the Students for a Democratic Society, which resulted in the so-called Days of Rage in Chicago in 1969, to North Vietnamese advice the year before to choose youngsters who would battle with police.

The North Vietnamese, according to SDS literature of the time, had suggested that the antiwar movement needed not just intellectual protestors but also physically rugged recruits. The Days of Rage, unlike previous antiwar demonstrations, in which clashes seemed to be accidental, was a violent protest.

The report noted that the objective of Cuban intelligence officers in the General Directorate of Intelligence (known by its initials in Spanish as the DGI, Cuba's equivalent of the CIA) was not always the same as that of the young members of the Weather Underground.

EXCLUSIVE

Claims Hanoi also aided militants

IT SAID the ultimate objective of the DGI's participation in setting up the Venceremos Brigades "is the recruitment of individuals who are politically oriented and who someday may obtain a position, elective or appointive, somewhere in the U.S. government, which would provide the Cuban government with access to political, economic and military intelligence."

"A very limited number of VB members have been trained in guerrilla warfare techniques, including use of arms and explosives," the report said. "This type training is given only to individuals who specifically request it and only then to persons whom the Cubans feel sure are not penetration agents of American intelligence."

It also reported that contact with Cubans in the U.S. was made at the Cuban Mission to the United Nations on East 67th Street in Manhattan. Several top officials stationed at the Embassy in 1969 and 1970 were identified in the report as Cuban espionage agents.

A MAN who was publicly described as the most effective informer the FBI ever placed among the Weathermen, Larry Grathwohl, reported to the bureau that a code system for communications had been set up by the Cubans, the report said.

"To do this an individual should use the code name 'Delgado' when referring to himself and the person with whom he desired to make contact," it said.

In another incident, the report said, the Cubans sent four Weathermen back to the U.S. through Czechoslovakia after an explosion at a house on West 11th Street in Greenwich Village killed two members of the Weather group, Diana Oughton and Ted Gold. They feared arrest, the report said, and the Cubans "obliged" them.

On the whole, however, the report appeared to be more significant for the paucity of support by Communist-bloc nations than for the extent of it. There was no firm evidence that senior Communist intelligence services in the Soviet Union, China or Eastern Europe ever made any active attempt to incite American dissidents, the report said.

Carter's arms-curb policy credibility on line

By Seymour Hersh
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The Carter administration, seeking to convince congressional critics that it plans effectively to curb the sales of weapons abroad as promised, faces a major internal debate over the proposed sale of 140 F-16 fighter planes to Iran.

The sale, which has yet to be formally considered by the president, is known to be under serious challenge by some officials in the White House and the State Department who believe that the credibility of the president's arms curb program is at stake.

EXCLUSIVE

Jet sale to Iran spurs sharp debate

That policy, outlined May 19, grew out of a series of Carter promises during the 1976 presidential election campaign. It called for an unprecedented dollar limit on the amount of conventional arms that can be sold abroad each year as well as a requirement that those who support such sales "clearly demonstrate" that they contribute to the national security interests of the United States.

In his May 19 statement, Carter further announced that overseas arms sales would henceforth be considered as an "exceptional" tool of foreign policy, subject to very specific controls and justified only by national security needs.

The proposed F-16 sale highlights a broad dispute over the effectiveness of the president's new arms control policy.

Critics in the House and Senate, already angered by Carter's decision to sell Iran a $1.2 billion airborne radar warning system, have compiled statistics showing that the Carter administration has approved at least 45 foreign arms and services transactions totaling more than $4.1 billion in the four months following the May proclamation.

"I think their intentions are good and sound," Rep. Lee M. Hamilton, D-Ind., said of the White House and its policy pronouncement. "But I'm not aware of any restraint at this time."

In response to their critics in Congress, arms control officials in the White House and State Department acknowledge that there have been few signs of immediate restraint but insist that the administration is "sincere" — a word used by many officials in interviews — in its intention to cut back.

was also skeptical about the administration's commitment to restraint.

"All you can go on is what you've got in front of you," Culver said.

In response to their critics in Congress, arms control officials in the White House and State Department acknowledge that there have been few signs of immediate restraint but insist that the administration is "sincere" — a word used by many officials in interviews — in its intention to cut back.

"You can't imagine the enormous amount of pressure from industry and foreign governments" to continue such sales, a government expert said, adding:

"The problem we're faced with is the problem of how do you turn a 500,000-ton supertanker around?"

"You're not going to see any dramatic change in the military sales for at least 18 months," the official said.

He, like many other government arms control experts, was critical of the language in Carter's May 19 statement suggesting that arms transfers would rarely be used as an instrument of American foreign policy. Such phrasing was deemed by many to call for immediate cutbacks in arms sales.

Despite such presidential assertions, the experts said, the use of arms transfers was widespread and inevitable — and would continue to be.

One official who was directly involved in the White House negotiations over the policy statement in May pointed out that Carter, citing his new guidelines, had stopped some sales of advanced aircraft to Pakistan and Iran.

Of more long-range significance, the official said, is the president's decision to place the burden of persuasion for an arms transfer "on those who favor a particular arms sale, rather than those who oppose it," as he said in May.

"In the past, a sale would come up for discussion and people would say, 'Is there any objection?'" the official said. "Now, those who want it must be able to say that the sale is in the national interest."

Another positive step, administration officials said, has been the establishment of a high-level interagency Arms Export Control Board, headed by Lucy Wilson Bensen, undersecretary of state for security assistance.

The board, which is just becoming fully operational, is responsible for reviewing each proposed arms transfer in light of Carter's May 19 criteria.

"We're still trying to get the machinery in place," a senior State Department official said, adding that the control board members have yet to define terms and policies. "It's going to be another six months before we can show progress," the official said, "but we think it's going to work."

"There seem to be some people," the official added in obvious reference to the many congressional critics, "who think that things are going to change overnight."

One of the export board's key decisions so far, sources said, revolved around Carter's decision in early July to request formal congressional approval for the sale of the $1.2 billion AWACS airborne warning system to Iran.

Some administration officials initially wanted to portray the decision, which was immediately challenged by Congress as conforming to the guidelines set down in the president's policy statement.

Informed sources said that the Arms Export Control Board, at the urging of Leslie H. Gelb, the State Department's director of political-military affairs, eventually agreed to present the AWACS decision to Congress as an exception to the president's policy. Gelb also serves as co-chairman of the Control Board.

In the view of many administration and congressional officials, the congressional debate over the AWACS sale to Iran has set the stage for a major internal test of the strength of the White House's commitment to its stated arms control policies.

OFFICIALS explained that because of the length of the AWACS debate the administration was unable to include that weapons system in its foreign military sales total for fiscal year 1977, which ended Sept. 30.

should become involved with the children in the juvenile courts.

What's really more important? To me, I think that an unwed mother needs as much loving and understanding as a young girl who perhaps is active in the Girl Scouts.

Again, I emphasize very strongly, I am not in any way attempting to downgrade the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts or Little League, but we have to set priorities.

Q. Is this a new opinion, different from what the Lions Club may have expressed five or 10 years ago?

A. Probably, because of my age. I'm comparatively young to hold this office. And having a son who will be 24 in November and a daughter who is just 22, I can see where his generation or the younger businessmen might look to service clubs as part of "the establishment" that really aren't aware of the needs of today.

Giving the credit where it's due, it's these young men and women who made the government become aware of the needs of safety devices in automobiles, of the carbon monoxide problem... the need for protecting our streams, rivers and forests. They're the ones who really did it. They did not have the clout to implement... but they made us aware.

Nazi rally broken up by crowd

SAN JOSE (AP) — Eight uniformed Nazis dodged eggs, tomatoes, sticks and fists Saturday as an angry crowd of 2,000 disrupted an attempted white-power demonstration, police said.

"We're Americans. We should be allowed to speak," cried one member of the National Socialist White Workers Party at the ill-fated demonstration.

"Down with scum! We don't want scum in the valley!" was the shouted reply from the crowd.

Police Sgt. Thomas Seck said there were 17 arrests in the brief melee in St. James Park. One policeman was slightly injured by a flying object and one of those arrested was taken to a local hospital with minor injuries.

Several hundred people had crammed city council chambers Friday, when the council voted 5-2 to reverse its decision to revoke the Nazi's permit and granted them permission to hold the rally.

Mayor Janet Gray Hayes, who switched her stand on the controversy, said in a joint statement with Councilman Jim Self the city was legally bound to grant the permit.

Firemen from 5 cities fight Lynwood fire

Eight fire units from five cities battled a two-alarm fire at Dessler Tire Co. in Lynwood late Saturday, fire officials said.

Nearly five acres of used rubber tires began burning at 10:39 p.m. at Butler Avenue and Alameda Street. Units from Vernon, Lynwood, Compton, Downey and Montebello joined to battle the highly-visible, acrid-smelling fire.

No injuries were reported, and firemen did not estimate a containment time.

2 men shot in La Mirada

A deputy sheriff and another man were shot late Saturday, after deputies answered a "man with a gun" call in La Mirada, authorities reported.

Details were not available and authorities would say only that the deputies responded to the call at 14943 Gageley Drive at 11:30 p.m. After the shootings, the two were taken to La Mirada Community Hospital.

Their conditions were unknown late Saturday. Deputies withheld the names of the officer and the other wounded man until next of kin could be notified.

Q. You mentioned women. Are there women members in the Lions?

A. We have what we call the Lioness program. And the Lioness program involves groups of women in the form of clubs sponsored by Lions Clubs and they in turn work with Lions Clubs and complement the efforts of the Lions Clubs.

Q. As such, are their women Lions?

A. As members of a Lions Club, no.

Q. Have there been any attempts by women to join?

A. Yes, there have been attempts by women to join not only Lions but other service organizations and, to date, the courts have sided with the service clubs—it's within their rights to keep an all-male service club.

Q. Do you think that will change in the future?

A. I don't think anything ever remains the same.

Q. What is the purpose of the Lions Clubs?

A. To give service within the individual communities to those in need. Our motto, "We Serve."

Q. What are the services?

A. One of our primary and one of the outstanding projects in California and Nevada...they have a great sight-conservation program...Any money the Lions Clubs take from their communities, not one penny of that goes to salary or administration. One hundred cents of every dollar goes to charity.

Q. What is the percentage of black membership in the United States?

A. In the United States, I truly and honestly could not tell you because on none of our applications and none of our membership forms do we ask a person what his race is.

Q. Your organization is in 149 countries, but why aren't you in Communist nations?

A. The Communist countries don't have any service clubs. And, when you think about it, a service club is really a complete contradiction to what the Communists think, that the state takes care of everything...They refused to allow us.

Q. How would you describe a typical Lions Club member in the United States?

A. A typical member in the United States is usually a fellow in his middle thirties or older. He's married and has an average of two or three children. I would not say he was middle class. For the most part, he's striving to become middle class. Within a period of time, he does reach the status of middle class or higher. As a rule he has roots in his community...

Q. Would the typical member have a particular political persuasion. Would he tend to be more moderate or conservative?

A. No. Absolutely not. There again, one's political viewpoints and affiliations have absolutely nothing to do with it... We have no political affiliations.

Q. Do you get depressed when you see suffering around the world, knowing that there are many children the Lions can't help?

A. I've been told it affects me... because I love children... I saw a girl in Taipei, Taiwan, 20. She was completely mangled. Her legs in braces and she was on crutches... She'll never dance, she'll never go to a prom, she'll never have children, she'll never have a boy tell her he loves her—only because she didn't have a polio vaccination, because at that time it was just out... it wasn't that plentiful.

Q. Since President Carter has been an active Lions Club member, will you be attempting to get him to do something to help your group when you meet with him?

A. No. I will tell him of the progress we are making in international Lionism. I will advise him of the philosophy of my theme, which is "Lionism taking care of the people."

Folding bed traps man, 70, five days

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A 70-year-old man was hospitalized in serious condition Saturday after being trapped for five days with his upper body snared in the springs of a folding bed.

Police were called to the fourth floor apartment of Leon Colby by his landlord who became concerned when the man hadn't been seen in several days.

"I opened the door to his apartment, saw him sticking out of his bed and I thought he was dead," said Ed Anderson. "His head, one shoulder and an arm were wedged between the springs and the iron edge of the bed."

It took a rescue crew almost an hour to carefully cut the iron and steel bands and springs away from Colby's head and throat.

Anderson said he knocked on the man's door on several different nights but Colby never answered. "He's almost completely deaf," said the landlord, "and I thought I'd better see if something was wrong."

"It's a good thing they freed him when they did," said a medical official. "I don't know how much longer he would have lasted."

Police were not exactly sure how long Colby was held captive by the folding bed or how he became trapped.

"We think he stumbled and fell into the bed," said one officer.

Containers: revolution in port

By David F. White
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Behind a strike that has tied up container cargo in Gulf and East Coast ports—and spread to a few California docks—is a revolution in transportation that has come to dominate ocean shipping in only 20 years.

It is a revolution that has also dramatically changed the waterfronts since its birth in New York harbor in 1956.

The use of containers has superseded longshoremen's arms with the mechanical arms of giant cranes and has replaced teeming waterfronts full of wooden crates and burlap sacks with vast, stark marshaling yards packed with sleek steel boxes. The boxes, called containers, become instant trailer vans when they are swung off ships and snapped onto truck chassis.

Today there are 2 million of the sleek steel "boxes" in the world, according to the Containerization Institute in New York, and deliveries are expected on 300,000 new ones this year. In the next 10 years, the industry expects that the number of containers around the world will double.

IT IS a trend that has prompted Anthony Scotto, a vice president of the International Longshoremen's Association and president of its largest local, in Brooklyn, to remark:

"How to preserve jobs in the teeth of the container revolution is the question that haunts the waterfronts not only of the United States but also of the world."

This week, the waterfront is haunted again.

Efforts to settle the week-long longshoremen's strike were at a standstill Friday. Wayne L. Horvitz, chief federal mediator, said in Washington that he was continuing to keep in touch with both sides but that he had scheduled no further meetings.

Thomas W. Gleason, president of the ILA, said there had been no change in the situation and that the union would carry on its selective strike, which has stopped container shipping operations on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. There was no comment from the shipping companies regarding the dispute.

THE U.S. Maritime Administration reported 21 ships tied up by the walk-out on the Atlantic Coast, 38 on the Gulf and four on the West Coast, where the ILA has picketed some ships of lines that operate also on the Atlantic or Gulf.

(The Pacific picketing at Long Beach and elsewhere has been supported by the West Coast's International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which reached an uneasy truce with shippers on containerization several years ago.)

At the center of the containerization issue and the longshoremen's walk-out on Oct. 1 is an understanding as old as the industrial revolution—that machines are often capable of working more quickly and cheaply than men. That understanding has worked rapidly to alter the shipping industry and the way of life of dockworkers.

In 1956, there were only two steamship lines in the world that offered container services; by 1970 there were 200, and today there are about 700 serving the United States alone, according to industry figures.

IN THE SAME time span, ILA membership in the New York-New Jersey port, which accounts for about 70 percent of all tonnage handled by North Atlantic ports, has dwindled from over 40,000 in the mid-1950s to 19,962 in 1970 and 11,800 today.

"Containerization is an advanced, automated system that has eliminated double handling," says George Panitz, a vice president of the New York Shipping Association. "The double handling was done on the waterfront."

For example, along the Brooklyn shore, where the Dock strike dramatizes change

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Going against the wishes of both national and local union leadership, longshoremen voted again Saturday to continue a wildcat general strike against the Port of New Orleans — the nation's second largest harbor.

The vote to continue the strike was 804 to 519.

Harvey Tilton, business manager for ILA Local 1419, said the vote "very easily could" influence dock workers at other ports to stage a general walkout as well.

masts and derricks of conventional "break-bulk" freighters still form a forest of wire and steel on busy days, half a dozen work gangs of 18 men each work as long as a week to unload a ship.

But at automated container terminals, only one or two dock gangs are required to work with the container cranes. Loading or discharging a ship is usually completed in a day.

BEFORE 1966, when containers entered foreign trade, productivity on the docks averaged one ton a man hour. With containerization, it can go as high as 200 or 300 tons a man hour.

"The end result," says Panitz about the spread of automation, "is that you'll have a minimal amount of break-bulk cargo. In the year 2000, you won't see a break-bulk ship. It'll be like a sailing ship."

While containers have led the move to automation, they have not taken over the seas alone. In the last 15 years, other innovations in ocean shipping have also made inroads into the livelihood of longshoremen.

One, EASH shipping, or Lighter Aboard Ship, has given rise to a class of mother ship freighters which take on pre-loaded barges of about 300 tons.

Another, Ro-Ro shipping, or "Roll on-Roll off," has seen the development of freighters with traffic ramps, across which trucks drive on board to unload their freight directly.

Both have had much the same impact as containerization on longshore labor. "Anything that is pre-loaded is done away from the waterfront," explains Panitz. "Like containerization, the work can be done elsewhere."

Containerization, though, has been the major force in the drive to automate, and that force has been stopped often in the past by the reluctance of longshoremen to accept the innovation.

In 1960, the first effort to put container ships into foreign trade ended in failure when Venezuelan longshoremen refused to unload containers from the ship, the Santa Eliana. Containers are still banned by law in Venezuela, according to the Containerization Institute.

Six years later, containers finally entered international trade when Sealand Services Inc. began putting container ships into service along the vital North Atlantic trade routes, forcing the general rush to containerize.

The containerization issue contributed to strikes by the ILA in 1959, 1962, 1964 and 1968 — when rules establishing the role of longshoremen in handling container cargo were first negotiated — and again in 1971.

In 1975, the National Labor Relations Board ruled that the container regulations were invalid in a decision that the U.S. Supreme Court refused to reconsider and one that helped spark the current walkout.

The longshoremen are striking this time to protect their livelihood in the face of dwindling work being lost to containerization and over issues related to contract benefits funded by work-generated revenues.

Today, the Containerization Institute estimates that up to 70 percent of the general cargo coming into the United States comes by container. With the revolution entering its third decade, industry leaders say it has a long way to go before it is complete.

White House, backers seek extension to ERA deadline

By Peggy Simpson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A coalition of female members of Congress and White House supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment are preparing to seek an extension of the seven-year deadline set in 1972 for the states to ratify the ERA.

President Carter will support the request for an extension, his daughter-in-law, Judy Carter, said Friday. "He is committed to the ERA and will do anything to make sure it will pass. If this is a viable option, he is for it," she said.

Because of the deadline set by Congress when it approved the ERA on March 22, 1972, the proposal will die if it is not ratified by 38 states by March 22, 1979. Thirty-five states have ratified it so far, but some states that have not acted on the amendment will not have legislative sessions until 1979.

Reps. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., contend that Congress can extend the deadline by a majority vote. A Justice Department brief being prepared for the White House backs up this position, a White House source said.

"This is something that has to be done right now. It can't wait," said Judy Carter, who has been working closely with leaders of the National Organization for Women and the congresswomen.

NOW President Eleanor Smeal says the deadline was an arbitrary one to guard against outdated proposals pending indefinitely. She said the ERA does not fit that definition because the amendment "is as socially relevant as it was in 1972."

The very existence of a deadline has become a prime weapon of conservatives, she said, who have promised anti-ERA state legislators that in another 15 months the issue will go away.

Reps. Holtzman and Heckler are leading a push for speedy House action on extending the deadline.

ERA opponents are reportedly preparing to flood Congress with letters opposing an extension.

The effort to win the extension has been conducted quietly and some women's groups are unhappy over not being consulted.

Some ERA advocates say they fear ERA opponents would use the extension to get states that have ratified the amendment to rescind their ratifications. Three of the 35 states that have ratified the amendment have rescinded their action, but there is dispute over whether this action is legal.

The Equal Rights Amendment would attach to the Constitution a guarantee of equality for both women and men.

Opponents contended that the ERA would put more power in the federal government and take power away from the states. They have argued that it would lead to unisex toilets and marriages between homosexuals and that it would take away rights that women now have.

Supporters of the amendment have countered by saying that the Constitution guarantees the right of privacy, including privacy in bathrooms, and that the amendment would not interfere in any way with marital relations.

White House 'army' deals with media

45 people work with press to enhance Carter's image

By Eleanor Randolph
Chicago Tribune Service

WASHINGTON — It is no bureaucratic accident that the largest department in President Jimmy Carter's White House is the one that copes with the American press.

The White House Press Office, a rambling set of rooms in the White House and the Executive Office building next door, employs 45 people.

That compares with 41 who advise the president on national security, 15 who soothe the 535 delicate egos in the U.S. Congress for him and two who worry about the nation's health.

That is not to say security, Congress, and health are not important to Jimmy Carter. Undoubtedly they are. But much in the manner of his predecessors, Jimmy Carter is more concerned with his image, and the 45 people who work in his press office are paid to promote that image.

and who do their part — large or small — to promote Jimmy Carter's image.

This is the story of some of those people, the unknowns. They are the White House Press Office staffers who make the White House Press Office work.

WHITE HOUSE memo No. 09352 had been Xeroxed so many times that the copy on Barry Jagoda's desk last week looked gray and imprecise, like the rubbing from some worn national monument.

Jagoda, 33, is President Carter's official television adviser. A small, nervous man who still has the manner of a network news producer five minutes before showtime, he has saved the note that Jeb Stuart Magruder sent in 1969 to White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman. It was a long, badly written outline on how President Nixon should deal with his problems with the press.

It suggested sending the Federal Communications Commission after companies that own television stations and must be licensed by the FCC. It advised using the Justice Department's antitrust division to investigate companies that own both television stations and newspapers. If those tactics did not work, there was always the Internal Revenue Service.

Jagoda, a former producer for CBS, shoved the memo across his huge desk to a reporter recently and awaited the reaction.

"This is the guidebook to the Carter administration's press operation," Jagoda said, smiling. "It is the guidebook on how not to do it."

"One of my jobs is to make sure we never forget."

When you are on top, when you are the one doing the drafting for a speech that eventually will be refined into the words of a president, it begins often with a draft, in many cases from the National Security Council. Such drafts are a speechwriters' nightmare because they must be translated from the indecipherable verbiage of NSC Director Zbigniew Brzezinski to something approaching common, downhome/English.

The second draft then circulates to other departments, some of which produce their own drafts.

"And then finally we begin to do battle over the damn thing so that at the end you come up with something that makes nobody too mad and almost nobody too happy. When everybody kind of sullenly approves, you send it in to Carter," Doolittle explains.

writers for the second round. Some speeches take 10 to 15 drafts. Some more.

"It's like writing for Time Magazine," explains Doolittle. "It's by committee."

RANDY LEWIS, 21, has the official title of Staff Assistant to the Press Secretary. What that means, as Lewis himself is quick to admit, is that he opens Jody Powell's mail.

Sometimes opening the 125 letters for Jody Powell each day is boring. It includes letters from people who haven't received their VA checks that month or complaints about the Social Security system.

Other times, it is more interesting. Lewis particularly enjoys letters from Henry VIII, who writes periodically to complain about the unregal nature of Carter's White House.

"We also used to hear from Anastasia a lot," says Lewis, slipping a letter opener under an envelope automatically as he talks. "But she isn't writing much any more. I guess she's getting up in years."

reporter for the Atlanta Constitution before she moved into an office that is probably twice as big as her former editor's. Townsend's job, aided by a staff of five, is to distill all the news printed around the country, except for what appears in the New York Times, the Washington Post, Time, and Newsweek.

"We presume he reads those publications as soon as we get them," she said.

It is a strange task, working for a man who is mostly confined by a legion of Secret Service agents, whose messages are quick notations on the summaries to complain when the format doesn't suit him or whose agents, in the form of secretaries, sometimes call and ask for the original articles.

"We never know exactly what he's going to want," Townsend said last week.

He wanted to see an article in More magazine on Jody. Then he was interested in one copy of Mother Jones (an anti-establishment magazine), and he asked for the New Yorker the other day to read Liz (Elizabeth) Drew's piece on human rights.

"He also likes the cartoons. We send him the full-size clippings because Jody says he enjoys the ones that bite.

"I don't know," she continues, grimacing at the thought of last month's cartoons showing Carter miffing the Bert Lance problem. "Lately I have sort of winced when I put them in the envelope."

DEPUTY Press Secretary Walter Wurfel, 40, is in charge of the one area that Jody Powell could never manage himself — the administrative details. Wurfel not only makes certain that the phones work, he also telephones reporters who never get calls returned from Powell.

He not only soothes the ruffled egos of journalists who don't get one of the 50 tiny desks in the narrow White House press room, but he also makes certain that 1,600 Washington reporters have their White House credentials.

For newcomers to the White House press offices, it is always surprising to see the array of journalists and quasi-journalists who have the sanctioned White House pass that allows them through the gate and into the crowded room where Powell holds his daily press briefing.

"The credentials go to anybody who has a pass to the (Capitol) hill galleries, who has a constant need of access to the White House, and who passes the security checks," Wurfel explained.

Bakke foes hold march

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of persons marched from the White House to the Capitol through drizzling rain Saturday to protest a court decision which struck down a minority admissions program at the University of California.

Near the end of their walk the demonstrators marched around the Supreme Court, where the justices will hear arguments Wednesday on the case, called UC Regents vs. Allan Paul Bakke.

The California Supreme Court ruled last year that Bakke, a white man, was the victim of racial discrimination because he was denied admission to the UC Davis Medical School.

Bakke successfully argued that the school's special admissions program, which reserved 16 of the 100 openings in each entering class for disadvantaged students, was really a racial quota that placed less qualified black, Hispanic and Asian-American students ahead of him.

The regents appealed the decision to the Supreme Court. Many civil rights leaders see the case as a threat to affirmative action programs.

Demonstration leaders estimated that 1,200 persons took part in the march. District of Columbia Deputy Chief William Kirby estimated the number at 800 or 900.

Throughout the march, the demonstrators chanted "Bakke says yes; the people say no" and "Down with Bakke; fight for open admissions."

Outside the Capitol, they sang, "We won't go back; send Bakke back."

Organizers of the demonstration said similar marches were being held in major cities throughout the country.

James Garrett, an organizer, told the crowd at the Capitol that the demonstration would "let the politicians and judges and the press know we're not going to allow racism again to start rising in this country."

certain number that go out for ego-satisfaction," he adds without elaborating.

"But we can't be in the position of deciding who gets passes or, more importantly, who does not get them beyond that. We have a problem with the First Amendment here, and we simply can't be in the position of being gatekeepers for the press."

Wurfel's other jobs include making certain that the right people have the right buttons on their phones. Phone buttons are perhaps the closest the Carter press office comes to a status symbol. Powell's office, for example, has seven private lines that ring automatically when he punches the button into the offices of a variety of White House principals, including the president.

DEPUTY Press Secretary Rex Granum, next in line in the Powell operation, has only two such private lines. However, Granum's buttons only go one way. "He can buzz me," he says of the president or vice president, "but it doesn't work in reverse."

The remaining members of the staff figured they had ordinary phones until the day Wurfel tried to lift up the plastic cover on his desk model to insert a list of frequently-called numbers.

Within two minutes there were "half a dozen" Secret Service agents in Wurfel's office, one aide recalls. "They came to inform him that somebody was trying to tap his phone."

PATRICIA Bario, assistant press secretary, deals with the thousands of reporters and editors who are not part of the "hard-core 70," as she calls them, who cover the White House every day.

"We try to give the non-Washington press the same tender, loving care that the Washington press believes it deserves," she says.

Like her fellow workers, Bario is aware that her job was one that was used for political advantage during the Nixon years. Nixon wanted to dazzle the non-Washington press when he could no longer manipulate the reporters who watched him up close in Washington.

Although Bario sees her job differently, there are still similarities. Editors from Alabama and Utah are mostly impressed when she brings them into the Cabinet Room in the White House where they are briefed by a series of White House aides and finally the president. Stories that would get a back-page corner of the hometown paper when they come over an impersonal wire machine have a way of billowing into a large spread on the local front page if the editor is there to hear it himself.

"IT HAS worked very well so far," says Bario, modestly. "By the end of the year, we will have given interviews to almost every paper with a circulation of over 100,000."

Bario's other job, like Wurfel and Granum, is to talk to the people who don't have the clout to get to Powell.

"We get some strange requests," she recalls. One guy called up and invited himself to spend a night with the president in the White House. "Oh, we wouldn't have to talk about anything serious," he said, "we could just have an early dinner and a nice folksy chat about nothing in particular."

People who know Jimmy Carter know that the last thing he would enjoy would be an evening with someone who didn't want to talk about anything in particular. For that and other reasons, Bario politely declines the man's request just as she turns down other requests, like the one from a promoter who wanted Carter to play softball during the halftime at the Rose Bowl.

Concorde jam planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Angry opponents of the Concorde supersonic jet say they plan another traffic-snarling protest today at Kennedy Airport despite a court ban on demonstrations.

Brian Levinson, a leader of the anti-SST protest, said the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport, had obtained a court order enjoining him from "conducting any kind of demonstration at the airport that would endanger the welfare of the community." But Levinson said he would be among the motorists cruising Kennedy in the demonstration.

On Friday, the U.S. Supreme Court temporarily blocked an appeals court order that would have allowed immediate Concorde landings at Kennedy. However, the high court stay did not deter the demonstrators—many of them residents of the neighborhoods around the airport—from their protest.

By any other name it would smell as sweet.

Basically, cheese is concentrated, fermented milk. All cheeses contain the same milk ingredients, but the amounts vary in the different varieties. Been confused by all the names and labels like cheese "food" and cheese "spread", "natural" cheese and "processed" cheese? These names have to do with the amount of butterfat and moisture in the product. So-called "natural" cheeses must have 30% butterfat, or more. Processed cheeses should contain at least 30%. Cheese food, at least 23%. Cheese spread, at least 20%. "Imitation" cheeses must contain (in some degree) protein and fat from a non-animal source. And harder cheeses contain less moisture than the softer varieties. Definitions or no, it's often difficult to tell the difference from one kind to another by taste or looks alone. But no matter which you choose, cheese is a tasty and versatile way to provide protein, minerals and vitamins for your family.

Focus on cheddar.

Originally from Cheddar, England, much good cheddar now comes from Wisconsin, as well as a few other areas across our nation. It's a hard, smooth, firm cheese. The taste can be mild, all the way up to sharp (read the label to avoid surprises). Color may shade from pale yellow to rich orange. Cheddar is made of cow's milk, and aged anywhere from two months to a year. The longer curing produces the sharper flavor. Cheddar was once made in cones, wheels or horn shapes. But now squares are more usual since they're easier to transport around the globe. Folks had gotten used to the half-moon shape of Longhorn Cheddar, though, so today's manufacturers actually cut out the half rounds from a huge block.

Say... "Cheese," Please!

O, to be a giant mouse.

This remaining hulk of cheese with craters in it, doesn't go to waste. It's melted down and pasteurized and mixed with whey and sugar, and stabilizers to keep it from crumbling.

The result is that tasty variety known as processed cheese. You've heard of whey in the Miss Muffet nursery rhyme. Well, 100 lbs. of milk makes 10 lbs. of cheese (curds) and 90 lbs. of liquid whey. Dry whey powder is not only high in protein, it's a good binding agent for candies and processed cheeses, among other products.

Weather is still baffling science

Service's Long-Range Prediction Group, currently offers 30-to-1 odds against a repeat of last winter, popular almanacs to the contrary.

Gilman's numbers sound impressive until one realizes that such icebox winters show up only once in 40 to 50 years.

Gilman, though, challenges any theories of climatic regularity.

"There's no general tendency for any one type of winter to persist from one year to the next, despite several warm winters that preceded the last one," he says. "So there's no point in anticipating an unusually bitter winter this time around."

Gilman's technique involves computerized analyses of upper air records (at 10,000 feet) over the last 25 years, looking for clues to upcoming seasons. "Then we try to piece these together (they're never very strong) and obtain a coherent picture of upper atmosphere flow. Our success? Three times in 5. Of course we could get 50-50 odds just by flipping a coin."

He stands behind his "guesstimate" until the end of November.

Where has the sunlight gone?

when he makes the official three-month prediction. Through mid-October, he foresees higher temperature than normal. Last year the same period broke many records for cold, but climatologists contend that extreme seasons seldom repeat each other.

Droughts, for instance, tend to occur in alternate years, at least in this hemisphere. But from 1968 to 1973 a deadly drought persisted in Africa's sub-Saharan region known as the Sahel (composed of Chad, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal and Upper Volta), killing 100,000. Now it has returned, and the desert is advancing 30 miles each year. But climate is just one factor that threatens the estimated 630 million persons who inhabit the third of the Earth that is parched and arid.

In 1975 a study was released by NOAA comparing the amounts of sunlight the United States received from 1950 to 1972.

What a place is like is determined by the amount of sunlight it gets, and that depends on how near it is to the equator, where winter never comes. NOAA found the duration of net U.S. sunlight has decreased by 5 percent, the biggest loss coming after 1964.

This means American cities lose some 10 minutes of sunshine each day, a loss tantamount to shoving them several hundred miles northward.

New York has, in effect, moved to Boston. Los Angeles halfway to San Francisco.

Where has the sunlight gone? Soviet theorist Mikhail Rudenko believes the burning of fossil fuels heats up the atmosphere by trapping sunlight as it bounces from the Earth, cloaking it in a blanket of carbon dioxide. The end result could be polar ice caps melting and sea levels rising drastically.

David Gates, University of Michigan biologist, predicts a Midwestern warming trend within a century that could shrink the Great Lakes and push the corn belt into Canada.

"The average temperature might increase 3 degrees centigrade (5 degrees Fahrenheit)," he says. "By comparison, to go from an ice age to a non-ice age takes only 5 degrees centigrade."

On the other hand, there is the equally prominent theory of neoglaciation, or the "cooling," as it's known. The primary scientist behind this is Dr. Reid Bryson, director of the University of Wisconsin's Institute for Environmental Studies and one of the world's foremost climatologists.

While on duty in the Pacific as an Air Corps weatherman in 1944, Bryson rightly predicted existence of the jet stream, those strong, fast-moving air currents at 30,000 feet that affect high and low pressure areas. He has been predicting things ever since, especially the cooling, which appeared in a controversial CIA report a few years ago. Bryson has received harsh treatment from his colleagues for being such a prolific predictor.

"A lot of idiotic popular books quoted me as saying doomsday was imminent," he says. "What I really said was that under certain conditions the Northern Hemisphere might get colder.

No need to fear a cold winter

"It all depends on the transparency of the atmosphere as it is affected by volcanic activity, by particles of man's pollution and by carbon dioxide-infrared heat radiation from burning fossil fuels.

"The carbon dioxide level has indeed been increasing. Domsayers say if it doubles we'll be in real trouble. But remember there's an energy crisis. We don't have enough fossil fuel remaining to ever make it double.

"But, as the level grows, it does make things warmer. However, fossil fuels also produce dirt, which joins dust and other pollution to filter sunlight and stop heat from reaching the Earth. My newest data indicates the two factors—pollution and carbon dioxide—actually cancel each other out. That leaves us in the interesting position of being at the whims of nature and her volcanoes. So far, nobody can predict volcanoes and how much crud they will throw into the sky. That can make a difference, though.

"Ben Franklin knew that 208 years ago."

Franklin served as American ambassador to France when the Icelandic volcano Laki erupted in 1783. He reported a constant fog over Europe and North America, a fog the sun couldn't dissipate. Hence the ground froze early and snows remained unmelted.

A century later, when the island of Krakator exploded, veils of dusty dusts ultimately blanketed the globe, and scientists recorded a 20 percent decrease in sunlight. It continued three years. Recently, scientists from the University of Arizona's unusual Tree Ring Laboratory examined a group of California trees. The rings for 1884 showed evidence of a particularly hard freeze.

Volcanoes have been blasting away with new intensity, and 15 major eruptions occur worldwide each year. However, other scientists, like the University of Chicago's Braham, argued that volcanoes don't mean a thing because they don't toss enough ash into the sky to matter.

One enduring Bryson theory contends that the Northern Hemisphere may be slowly returning to the Little Ice Age, the cooler climate that prevailed from the late 1600s to the early 1800s. Advancing glaciers and polar sea ice marked the period. The ice ended the 500-year-old Viking colony on Greenland and reached within 250 miles of Britain, which was struck by famine. Kayaks filled with Eskimos landed in Scotland.

Meanwhile people skated on the River Thames, American revolutionaries rolled their cannons across the Hudson River from the Battery to Staten Island and New Englanders still speak of 1816 as "the year summer never came."

But there exists another theory, one muted by the doomsday din of hothouse and cooling camps. Many weather historians argue that weather patterns found in almanacs and other sources over the last 500 years have not measurably changed to this day. Despite industry, fancy new forms of pollution unconstitutional" because of the provision that denied benefits only to those 180-day absentees who received upgraded discharges under his special program. This may deny them equal protection under the law, since previous Defense Department programs gave improved discharges — and benefits — to some men in the same class.

Although Carter said he would propose legislation next year to improve several of the law's provisions, he called the bill one which "properly recognizes the need for an equitable and compassionate attitude toward the many veterans who received less than honorable discharges."

Barry Lynn, the policy advocate of the United Church of Christ office for church activity in society, called this assertion "blatantly incorrect and absolutely not true."

Some look to onions for help on weather

Some have short-term value, Lee says, but long-range predictions flat. The flattest involve predicting entire seasons from the vantage point of preceding ones. Caterpillar fatness, thick animal coats, big beaver dams and good corn harvests probably tell more about the past season's bounty than the coming one's hardship.

Some weather hints never seem to go away. For a durable one, count the number of chirps a cricket makes in 15 seconds, then add 37 to get the exact temperature in degrees Fahrenheit. Or notice, as Theophrastus did in 400 B.C.: "If ants on the side of a hollow carry their eggs from nest to high ground, it indicates rain."

In "Richard III" Shakespeare correctly noted the effects of benign, slow-moving warm air fronts, compared to sudden cold ones: "Rain long foretold, long last, short notice, soon will pass."

Biblical signs also abound. In Matthew 16:2-3, Christ warned the Pharisees, "When it is evening, ye say, it will be fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather today, for the sky is red and lowering." This later reappeared as the familiar nautical "Red Sky in morning, sailors take warning; red sky at night, sailors' delight."

Traditional good weather omens include goats swarming in a setting sun and cattle grazing on hilltops. Rain signs comprise surfacing earthworms, cawing crows, quacking ducks, noisy woodpeckers, hooting owls, screaming bluejays, screeching peacocks, chirping bluebirds and sparrows, and cowering dogs. When pigs squeal in winter, expect a blizzard.

Then there are the bubbles in your morning coffee. If they collect in the center, the weather should be fair. Expect rain if they ring around the edge. And when the bubbles float separately over the coffee surface, the weather will change.

While humans speculate, the squirrels, lemmings, field mice, hamsters, muskrats, beavers, and pocket gophers are already preparing for winter. (Gophers store only Jerusalem artichokes, by the way.)

Do they remember where they left their stashes? Naturalist Sally Carrighar reports watching a red squirrel retrieve acorns: "I have an impression that he has known in general where he buried them, but that he finds them individually by scent."

Northern nutcrackers have more moxie, according to P. O. Swanberg. He observed northerners digging 351 times in snow 18 inches deep. They nabbed a nut 80 percent of the time.

Nature's remarkable sexual timetable is already in full swing. Most young, despite differing gestation periods, are born in the spring.

Thus moose (which gestate seven months) are mating now, while elk, which carry their young only six months, breed in October. Wolves and foxes (60 days) breed in February. Other animals, such as bears, badgers, martens and bats, have adopted "breed now, conceive later" policies.

Monkeys, though, have a regular 28-day reproductive cycle, just like humans. But even in tropical species there occurs a crescendo of spring birthdays. All climate is changeable, and the tropics weren't always warm.

Do animals dread winter as humans do? They seem to expand their societies from family to flock, and there may be pleasure, as well as safety, in numbers.

Winter, too, may be the supreme time to be pregnant. Researcher Ellsworth Huntington published figures 35 years ago (and largely forgotten) showing that a significant proportion of successful people were born in February and March. He believed human beings reached their fittest in late spring and early summer.

"These months are especially favorable to the smooth functioning of glands, nerves and other organs," he said. Perfect breeding weather.

and a pendulum of gradual coolings and warmings, the old Earth hasn't changed much at all, they say.

For some answers, an extraordinary experiment gets under way this month. It involves virtually all nations on Earth and is called the Global Atmospheric Research Program. For the first time, scientists will simultaneously observe the entire Earth's atmosphere and sea surfaces for a year.

Satellites from the United States, Russia, Japan and Europe will watch from altitudes up to 22,000 miles, hundreds of weather balloons will observe tropical skies from 47,000 feet. About 50 research ships will tend scores of buoys adrift in remote seas. French receivers riding American satellites will collect data, and so will transoceanic airlines carrying special "black boxes." Computers will give the state of the world's weather, and other computers will try to formulate rules governing its behavior.

There's a sense of urgency here. Up in Madison, Bryson is busily building a short-term predictive computer model of the Northern Hemisphere. Climatologists used to be concerned with geologic time, spans of thousands of years. Bryson, though, is homing in on the near future.

"Nobody can tell you what's going to happen next July," he says. "Well, I'm gonna. A lot of farmers in my state really have been getting hurt. If I can tell them how to better cope with the weather, I'm earning my salary."

Meanwhile, as Ben Franklin advised, "Keep your mouth wet, feet dry."

Lynn, like many other pro-amnesty spokesmen, had hoped Carter would veto the bill. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and the military services had also expressed opposition to the bill.

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's assistant for domestic policy affairs, said it had been a "close call," but that the president signed the bill rather than vetoing it because he thought it helped veterans with bad discharges more than it hurt them.

"I find that almost unbelievable," said a pro-amnesty source.

While Eizenstat said the bar on benefits to those AWOL for more than 180 days would apply to only "a couple of hundred" veterans, other administration sources pointed out that of the approximately 160,000 men with undesirable discharges, many thousands would fall into this category.

Missing uranium case is reopened

By John J. Fialka
Washington Star Service

WASHINGTON — The FBI has reopened an investigation into the disappearance of a substantial quantity of bomb-grade uranium from a Pennsylvania plant during the early 1960s.

According to a variety of government sources, some of whom have received intelligence briefings on the case within recent months, the new probe began in July 1976 at the express request of former President Ford.

Asked about the new investigation, a Justice Department spokesman said that it is still under way. The spokesman added that while there have been "several" requests from congressional committees for the FBI files on the case, "we have said no because it is still open and involves top-secret information."

DESPITE THE FBI's reluctance to share its evidence, there have been several new glimmers of light in the tight wall of secrecy which the government has built around the 12-year-old case. The case first surfaced at high levels in the old Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) in 1965 when a team of investigators reported they could find no explanation for the disappearance of 206 pounds of highly enriched uranium from the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corp. (NuMEC) at Apollo, Pa.

Although the missing material caused considerable concern within the AEC at the time because at least 10 atomic weapons could be made from the uranium, Howard L. Brown Jr., then AEC's assistant general manager, halted an investigation into a possible criminal diversion at the plant in 1966 after the company agreed to pay the government $1.3 million for the missing material.

A few months later, however, the Central Intelligence Agency began pressing the AEC and the White House for an FBI investigation of the company's president, Dr. Zalman Shapiro, a former government nuclear chemist, who had a number of business ties with Israel.

REACHED AT UC Berkeley, where he teaches chemistry, Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, who was chairman of the AEC at the time, acknowledged that he had a number of conferences on NuMEC in 1968 with then-CIA Director Richard Helms. While Seaborg said he was "satisfied" that the material had been accidentally lost as waste and that there had been no diversion, he added, "I don't think he (Helms) was satisfied."

Although Seaborg said he could not disclose what the CIA's interest in the case was, other former and present government sources told the Washington Star that the CIA's concern developed from reports of U.S. scientists returning from Israel. They reported that Israel was developing a nuclear weapons capability based on highly enriched uranium, the same material used in the Hiroshima bomb.

CIA investigators then developed what one source described as a "strong theory, based on circumstantial evidence," that the Israeli material had somehow been diverted from Apollo.

HELMS COULD not be reached for comment. Herbert E. Hetu, press spokesman for the CIA, told The Star:

"I am unable to confirm or deny any of the details concerning past or present CIA activities. Since the situation is being examined by a number of congressional committees, we consider that any further comment is inappropriate."

Harold Ungar, Shapiro's attorney, said his client would have no comment. Ungar's firm also represents Helms. Asked if there were any conflict in the firm's representing both Shapiro and Helms at the same time, Ungar said, "I have seen nothing to show any point of contact between the two, let alone conflict."

The FBI's first investigation ended in 1969 when the Justice Department concluded that there was not enough evidence to prosecute Shapiro. The current investigation began after a series of questions were raised about NuMEC within the Ford administration.

THE SECOND FBI investigation is reportedly aimed not only at pinpointing whether there was a diversion at Apollo, but also at finding whether there was a cover-up by any parties involved in the early NuMEC probes.

William H. Anders, then the head of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said that during the spring of 1976, he contacted an official in the White House after attending a briefing about NuMEC given by the CIA.

"I can't comment on the briefing because it was classified," said Anders, who currently works for General Electric, "but there was information there that I thought should be passed on."

Congressional investigators have also raised questions, some of them expressing concern about the thoroughness of the FBI's efforts. According to one of them, Shapiro has been interviewed at least twice by FBI agents, but several other high officials of NuMEC — some of whom also had access to plant materials and records — have never been questioned by the FBI.

THERE ARE three committees currently examining the NuMEC case — a House Commerce Subcommittee headed by Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., a House Interior Committee panel chaired by Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., and a subcommittee of the Senate Government Affairs Committee headed by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

So far, none of the committees has been granted access to documents from the first congressional probe of NuMEC, which was conducted by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy in 1966. According to an aide to Dingell, the documents are now in the custody of Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., whose energy and natural resources committee took over nuclear matters after the joint committee was disbanded this summer.

The aide said that although Dingell wrote Jackson in August for the NuMEC files, the letter has not been answered. "We have heard from his (Jackson's) staff," however, "that the request will not be granted," said the aide. Jackson could not be reached for comment.

BECAUSE substantial amounts of material relating to NuMEC have been stamped with varying degrees of security classification, officials have had difficulty talking about it. According to some sources, a CIA report on NuMEC was considered so sensitive that even the existence of the report could not be mentioned.

Rapist 'sentenced' to church sought for new attack

FRESNO (AP) — A young man freed from rape charges last year on the condition he attend church regularly is being sought by police here on a new rape charge.

Fresno police said Samuel Allen Alford, 18, is being sought on a warrant charging him with rape, assault and battery of a Fresno girl on Oct. 1.

Felony kidnapping and rape charges against Alford were lowered to a misdemeanor unlawful intercourse charge in September of 1976 when Municipal Judge Hugh W. Goodwin made Alford promise he would start attending church regularly. Alford did not attend church, and was placed in custody of the California Youth Authority.

Alford was released on probation in June after a Superior Court judge ruled that he could not be forced to attend church.

those with undesirable discharges were lifted only to so-called "general" discharges and not to "honorable" status. However, since a "general" discharge is regarded as one in "honorable circumstances," it made the veterans eligible for government benefits.

The legislation which Carter signed Saturday was designed to prevent tax money being spent on benefits for such men, and as a legislative method called for still another round of "discharge review" hearings for anyone wishing to receive benefits and denying such benefits to those absent for 180 days.

In a lengthy written statement, the president noted Saturday that the Justice Department had warned that the law was "probably

Mondale in Calif. swing Pushes for U.S. solar energy development

By Doug Willis
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA — Vice President Walter Mondale accepted an award for "exceptional public service" Saturday and dedicated what he described as the nation's largest building heated and cooled by the sun's energy.

Mondale told guests at the dedication of the 27,000-square-foot Santa Clara Community Recreation Center that the Carter administration "is completely committed to the development of solar energy." It could be the way the nation finally frees itself from dependence on foreign oil, he said.

Earlier, at the University of Santa Clara, Mondale received the Peter Burnett Award, named for California's first governor, for "exceptional public service," for being "a public servant in the finest sense of the term."

University of Santa Clara President the Rev. William Rewak presented the award to Mondale as "a pragmatist with principle, an idealist with common sense."

Mondale mixed nonpartisan and partisan Democratic events in a 1½-day tour of five California cities, including fund-raisers for the National Democratic party in Los Angeles and the California party in San Francisco.

He appeared with fellow Democrat Gov. Brown for the dedication of the solar heating and cooling plant in Santa Clara, financed by a combination of federal, city and industry sources.

"Our administration is completely committed to development of solar energy and other forms of infinite energy," Mondale said.

"We are spending this year $4.5 billion on energy research and development... but even with that, this nation is in a growing and increasingly serious energy crisis," he added.

In a pitch for President Carter's energy bill, Mondale called for a policy of increased energy conservation and development of new fossil fuel sources to "keep this country safe and secure until solar energy takes over and really solves our problems."

At a brief San Jose news conference, Mondale also promised that the Carter administration would not damage the interests of the West in its water

Hannaford bill

Longer, detailed Fed record asked

By Bob Houser
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, has introduced legislation to require the monetary policy-setting unit of the Federal Reserve System to keep detailed minutes for public release three years after its deliberations.

The system's Open Market Committee (FOMC) discontinued keeping detailed minutes last year in favor of expanded periodic summaries.

Hannaford said the summaries "do not suffice as complete records for future research on monetary policy decisions" and terminating the detailed minute keeping "is a justifiable concern of the academic community and of congressional oversight committees involved in analysis of monetary policies."

He said the detailed record promotes accountability by officials who serve on one of the government's most vital economic policy-setting units.

Hannaford is a member of the House Banking Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy.

The congressman also announced the staffing of two more constituent service centers at Lakewood Community Service Center, 5510 Clark Ave., Lakewood, from 10:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. on Wednesdays and at the social hall in Sims Park, 16614 Clark Ave., Bellflower, from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Hannaford will have a town hall meeting from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Lakewood address. The principal topic will be President Carter's welfare reform proposals.

CYA chief says wrong people freed Calif. sentencing law hit SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state's new determinate sentencing law is forcing the California Youth Authority to release "people we know are dangerous," says the CYA's director.

Pearl West said in an interview published Saturday the new law has meant that "under the equal protection provisions of the constitution, we cannot hold a youth any longer as a youth authority ward than he would serve if he were an adult."

"As a result of that we have had to release some people we know are dangerous. For example, we recently processed a young man who we, to use a euphemism, had to have 'escorted' by eight other people."

"That person should not be released, but we don't have any other choice."

The new law, which took effect July 1, gives judges a choice of three relatively fixed sentences, such as two, three or four, or five, six or seven years, for a particular crime.

Under the old system, a defendant was given an unspecified term of one to 10 years or five years to life, for example, and the parole board decided how long he or she spent behind bars.

Before the new law took effect, CYA could keep its youthful inmates until they reached a certain age, which ranged from 25 years for a felony offender sentenced by an adult court to 21 years if committed by a juvenile court, said Art German, a CYA spokesman.

Supporters say determinate sentences help equalize the time served by different inmates for the same offense, and eliminate the tension among prisoners uncertain about when they will be released.

But Mrs. West contended the law hampers CYA rehabilitation efforts.

"Some of these young people need more supervision than we can give them in a short time," she said. "Some of them just aren't ready to be released after a set period of time, but with the new law we have no alternative."

James Stratten, a CYA board member, contended that legislation like the determinate sentence act and one allowing 16 and 17 year olds to be tried as adults could wreck CYA programs.

"If they keep on in the direction they've started we may see the end of the youth authority as an agency designed to provide treatment and rehabilitation for young people," he said.

"In an atmosphere of hysteria they (legislators) have enacted laws aimed at punishing and imprisoning young people just like adults."

"That's not what the CYA is for. It was to provide humane guidance and rehabilitation."

Polygamy is on rise once again

By Molly Ivins
New York Times Service

DRAPER, Utah—In a big, old house on a quiet street in this small town south of Salt Lake City lives a sweet-faced, silver-haired school teacher. Mrs. Rhea A. Kunz, 71, proudly shows off the pictures of her grandchildren on the wall of her cozy, untidy study. There are more than 70 of them since Mrs. Kunz is a polygamist and so are her eight children.

Rhea Kunz now has a "second family": six young men and their plural wives all live with her in the big old house on the quiet street in an informal commune. They have so many children Rhea Kunz has come out of retirement and is running a state-chartered, non-profit nursery school for them. Polygamy, long considered a dying vestige of an abandoned Mormon tenet, actually is on the increase in the American west. There is no accurate count of American polygamists, but from what is known of organized polygamous groups and the more numerous "independents" like Rhea Kunz, 20,000 to 30,000 is a realistic figure.

Most polygamists lead quiet lives and are publicity-shy, but the rampage of Ervil LeBaron has focused attention on their growing numbers. LeBaron is the leader of a polygamous sect, the Church of the Lamb of God, which lawmen here believe is responsible for the murder or disappearance of at least nine people. LeBaron believes that he has been anointed to run the world and, according to his writings, that he has the right to execute anyone who disagrees with him.

Among polygamists and non-polygamists alike in this state, and especially among the law enforcement officials who have been trying to locate LeBaron on a murder charge, there is agreement that the practice of maintaining plural wives has been growing for at least 10 years.

Polygamists, who prefer to call themselves "fundamentalists," are sometimes scornfully referred to as "pligs."

A man wearing a cowboy hat said last week at Diamond Lil's bar that "them pligs is comin' up like weeds."

A more common reaction was expressed by a Mormon sales clerk. "Oh we have some who live just down the street from us," she said. "They are the nicest people. Very clean and quiet and law-abiding."

Polygamists settle in single-family groups, small communes or huge extended-family groups, with the following principal subdivisions:

The largest single group of polygamists generally is agreed to be in and around Colorado City, formerly known as Short Creek, near the Utah-Arizona border. Three thousand to 5,000 polygamists live in that area, according to law enforcement officials familiar with the fundamentalist movement.

Another large group was led by Rulon C. Allred until his murder last May. Ervil LeBaron and members of his group have been charged in the slaying. The 2,000 to 4,000 Allred followers live in Pinesfield, Mont., and in three settlements in Mexico.

There are approximately 1,000 members of a sect founded by Joel LeBaron who was also allegedly murdered by his brother's group. This sect, the Church of the Firstborn of the Fulness of Times, is established only in Mexico. There also are an unknown number of "independents" still practicing polygamy in Mexico, descendants of Mormons who settled there before the turn of the century.

The Kingston group, led by Merlin Kingston, has between 300 and 1,000 members and is based in

Extent still unknown College ties to CIA fraying

By Jo Thomas
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—Despite three days of congressional hearings, no one yet knows the degree to which some of the nation's most prominent universities were compromised in the CIA's secret mind-control research of the 1950s and 1960s.

Adm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director, said in congressional testimony last August that the CIA covertly sponsored research at 80 institutions, including 44 colleges and universities, from 1953 to 1963. The research was part of the project code-named MK-ULTRA, which sought to control human behavior through such means as hypnosis, drugs and brainwashing.

The Senate health subcommittee, which wanted to hear the academicians' reaction, invited the presidents of 20 institutions to testify at its hearings Sept. 20 and 21. Only one president accepted; he was not scheduled to testify because all the others declined, explaining that they had previous engagements.

The list of the 80 institutions given to Senate investigators still is classified, but each of those institutions has been notified separately by the CIA that in some way, knowingly or unknowingly, it played host to CIA research, and 26 colleges and universities have acknowledged this publicly.

INQUIRIES AT THESE institutions disclosed that CIA research on campus varied from innocuous sociological surveys to tests aimed at finding better ways to administer drugs to unsuspecting subjects. The attitudes of current administrators likewise ran the gamut from outrage to indifference.

The passage of time (more than 20 years in some cases), the CIA's secretiveness during the project and the fragmentary nature of the records the CIA has made available to universities have combined, in most cases, to make a reconstruction of what happened difficult or impossible.

At many universities, money for these projects was channeled through foundations so that neither the university nor the professor doing the research knew the true sponsor or purpose of the work. Sociological, cultural and anthropological studies were financed through the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology, based at Cornell University. Biochemical and medical research was often financed through the Geschickter Fund for Medical Research Inc., headed by Dr. Charles Geschickter, a Georgetown University pathologist.

"I feel that I've been done an injury, personally, by the CIA," said Dr. Anthony J. Wiener, who in 1957 received a $12,000 grant from the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology. At that time Wiener was a guest at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Center for International Studies; with Dr. Herman Kahn, he later wrote the book "The Year 2000."

WHEN HE FIRST heard about the society, Wiener said, he was looking for money with which to continue a study of the social role of Soviet scientists. Twenty years later he learned that the CIA hoped to find out "what criteria can be developed in spotting and assessing such persons as potential agent recruits" from his study.

"We've been made guinea pigs, too," said Robert Freelen, director of government relations at Stanford, which unwittingly lent its name to seven CIA research projects. These ranged from a survey of the literature on human blood groups to a project that simply channeled money to a psychiatrist, a member of the Stanford clinical faculty, who in turn paid for such enterprises as a survey of the ways in which criminals gave drugs to the unsuspecting.

The Stanford projects were financed either through foundations or through payments made directly to clinical faculty members, thus bypassing the university.

Freelen said he was not sure how the university could guard against this in the future. "Obviously there's a limit to how much investigation you can do on the sources of funds and their credibility," he said. "If they lie and you believe, I don't know how that problem gets solved."

Stanford has been making public every piece of information it can gather about its past involvement with the CIA's mind control research.

STANFORD OFFICIALS have pieced together a partial picture of what happened from documents they requested and received, heavily edited, from the CIA. Although Stanford's own name and the names of departments were left in, all other proper names were deleted, including the names of the faculty members involved. CIA officials have explained that the law requires this to protect the privacy of these persons.

Working from dates and academic titles, Stanford officials have been able to identify some of the faculty members who participated. Two are dead. One cannot be reached. Another has denied any participation. The details of what human subjects might have been involved, if any, and what, if anything, happened to them, so far remain unknown.

Georgetown University had similar difficulties in pinning down exactly what Geschickter did in experiments there to develop a "knockout" drug. Although CIA documents indicated that some tests were intended to be performed on humans, including terminal cancer patients, Geschickter told Georgetown and testified under oath before the subcommittee that the documents were in error and that these tests were done only on animals.

Some universities notified by the CIA of their involvement in MK-ULTRA say they do not wish to know anything more about it. These include Baylor University, which has severed its connection with the Baylor College of Medicine since the days the research was performed; the University of Houston and the University of Rochester.

OTHER UNIVERSITIES have asked the CIA for more information and documents and are finding out, one by one, what they can. Many of the research projects are described vaguely. Sometimes the researchers, when identified, say they cannot remember what they did.

The universities that have confirmed their in-

Davis County, Utah, the group is an economic cooperative as well as a religious sect, and indications are that it is extremely prosperous. According to the society's 1977 report, the cooperative employs 400 persons in more than 30 businesses; its estimated worth is between $20 million and $30 million.

Mormons look the concept of plural marriage from Old Testament accounts of the kings and patriarchs, such as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, who had many wives. The Church of Latter Day Saints outlawed the practice in 1890, in part because it brought so much persecution on the church. The fundamentalists believe the Mormon Church is guilty of apostasy for having renounced polygamy. They regard themselves as the true Latter Day Saints.

Rhea Kunz is one of the spunkier advocates of the practice. Her own family has been polygamous for several generations on both sides. As first of four wives of her first husband, she placed the hand of each new "sister-wife" in the hand of her husband at three successive weddings.

Advocates of women's liberation, who tend to think of plural wives as benighted creatures, would likely be astonished by Rhea Kunz, who has divorced two husbands because they didn't please her. As she herself said, "I was pretty darn sassy."

If polygamists share one quality, it is that, polygamy aside, they are extraordinarily strait-laced. They do not indulge in smoking, drinking, drugs, cursing ("Criminy" is Rhea Kunz's strongest expletive), infidelity or premarital sex, and they place a strong emphasis on cleanliness and hard work.

Brigham Young, the second president of the Mormons, once said of polygamy, "We must gird up our loins and fulfill this, just as we would any other duty."

Rhea Kunz is remarkably frank in discussing the sexual practices of her small group. "We do not permit intercourse during pregnancy, lactation or menses," she said.

"The first principle of purity, the strictest law, is one that many women who enter into plural marriage do not understand. A man shall not even approach his wife for sex unless she invited him, and then only when it is time to have another child.

"A lot of people won't believe this, even if you tell them, but each young man in this house lives by this rule, the law of absolute purity. I practiced it myself. Every man in this house has a separate bedroom. They cohabit only when she desires another child. Of course they kiss and hug, as husband and wife are wont to do. The husband tells each wife goodnight at night and then goes to his own room."

Rhea Kunz also believes that Jesus was married and polygamous. She said that in her youth she knew four of those who were present when John Taylor, the third president of the Mormon Church, supposedly received a revelation re-endorsing the practice of polygamy. "He rose and stood in the air awhile," she quotes the witnesses as saying.

Despite laws against polygamy, the practice has not been prosecuted for about 15 years. Putting polygamists men in jail just filled up jails and put their families on welfare, said David Yocum, a Salt Lake County prosecutor, who thinks it would be almost impossible to prosecute polygamists these days.

If we prosecuted all the people in this state who are living in sin, the jails wouldn't hold 'em," he said cheerfully.

And some law-enforcement officials here believe that such prosecution today might be held unconstitutional on grounds of freedom of religion.

Since fundamentalists tend to have huge families and many of their children in turn engage in plural marriage, the practice seems likely to continue to grow. Those polygamists who were not raised as fundamentalists or even as Mormons are harder to explain, but some of the younger people who have joined the polygamist movement seem to want both the strict rules of such communities and the sense of family.

Label challenge blocked

By Cristine Russell
Washington Star Service

WASHINGTON—The Food and Drug Administration, joined by consumer and women's groups, has successfully blocked an initial legal challenge to a new government regulation requiring that women be warned about the risks, as well as told of the benefits, involved in taking drugs containing the female sex hormone estrogen.

A federal district court judge in Delaware has denied an industry motion to stop the regulation from going into effect as scheduled, on Oct. 18, pending further court consideration of the case.

The regulation orders manufacturers to print and distribute a special brochure to accompany estrogen prescriptions which will point out that use of the hormone over extended periods increases the risk of contracting cancer of the uterus.

According to the FDA, about 3 million women in the United States use estrogen drugs each year, primarily to alleviate the symptoms of menopause. Premarin is the most commonly prescribed estrogen product.

The final regulation calling for patient labeling of estrogen drugs was published by the FDA last July.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, a drug-industry trade group, filed suit against the FDA and asked the court to stop the pending federal regulation from going into effect until the legal issues are resolved.

The government action was challenged on several grounds, according to a PMA spokesman: in general, the manufacturers maintain that the FDA does not have the legislative authority to require written patient information, which they and the medical profession say may interfere with the traditional doctor-patient relationship.

In addition, they are concerned about the specific language of the estrogen patient labeling, which they say is "alarmist and inflammatory and provides the patient with much more information than she can readily handle."

Consent problem halts experiments

By Alton Blakeslee
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — Orders temporarily halting all research with human subjects at the State University of New York in Albany apparently involve the complex issue of informed consent.

Informed consent, in essence, means a person has to be told of the real or possible risks involved in experiments or certain new treatments, and knows about being part of the research. Laws and regulations on informed consent are designed to protect human rights and privacy as well.

Though the concept applies both to biomedical research and the behavioral sciences, experts on the subject believe there apparently are more problems in clear-cut application to psychological and sociological research.

The New York State Department of Health ordered a halt to all research with humans in the SUNY psychology department following reports that many participants may not have been told of possible risks. Then the acting president of SUNY ordered all human research stopped pending a hearing, which began Friday and continues Oct. 26.

"MOST OF the principles and regulations concerning informed consent apply to biomedical research, and there's been a rather orderly evolution of them since 1956," said Dr. Robert M. Veatch, a senior associate of the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences at Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

"Social scientists have been less involved. Only recently were the regulations extended to social sciences. Researchers in those fields are not nearly so well informed and sensitized to the regulations. Some take the view informed consent is important only if dangerous drugs or physical risk are involved."

Veatch said it is simplistic to think no risk is involved in psychological or sociological research. A person's self-esteem may become involved, as in experiments in which he later learns he was deceived about the purpose and feels foolish. Confidentiality and privacy may be compromised in some settings.

Some psychologists argue that telling people the real purpose of an experiment would prevent reaching an objective result — that people would behave differently if they knew the full design.

Veatch said one possible solution is to tell people "there is something I can't tell you, but it won't hurt you. You will go 'blind' for a while about the experiment, but learn about it later." But some say this would hurt the experiment.

Over the last decade, Veatch said, there has been increasing awareness of the need for regulations to apply to the social sciences as well as medical sciences. In 1974, Congress established the National Commission for Protection of Human Subjects in Biomedical and Behavioral Research.

involvement with the CIA include many prominent institutions: Columbia, Cornell, George Washington, Harvard, Illinois, Indiana, Johns Hopkins, Maryland, McGill, Minnesota, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania State, Princeton, Rutgers, Texas and Texas Christian.

One, Harvard, set up interim guidelines for its relationships with intelligence agencies last May, and these are now under consideration at Ohio State and other universities. A Washington-based group, the Campaign to Stop Government Spying, chaired by Morton Halperin, has circulated the Harvard guidelines to 42 college and university presidents, urging their adoption.

The guidelines do not forbid intelligence-related research, but they say explicitly that CIA use of unwitting members of the academic community should stop. "A person should not be deemed to have consented to perform a task if he is misled about the purposes of the task and given false information on who is his employer," the committee said.

EARLIER RULES governing contracts with outside sponsors provide that the work cannot be classified, that results may be published by the researchers, and that sponsorship may be stated when the results are published.

The guidelines committee said in conclusion, "We do not believe that present relationships between the CIA and the academic community, as outlined by the Select Committee, can continue without posing a serious threat to the independence and integrity of the academic community."

Writing is on the wall Graffiti pops up in Moscow subway MOSCOW — The hand-writing is already on the wall for the Moscow Metro's long-time reputation as a graffiti-free subway system.

For years, foreigners visiting Moscow have marveled at the total absence of untidy scribbles in Metro stations and cars, by contrast with the motley expanses of graffiti defacing subways in New York and other Western cities.

But a recent stroll through the Moscow Metro's Arbat'skaya station, about a block away from the Kremlin, indicated that yet another Western youth fad may be catching on in the Soviet Union.

Pope given 80 art works

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, an avowed admirer of modern art, was given 80 modern religious paintings and sculptures Saturday. The art works, presents for the Pope's 80th birthday, were donated by the artists themselves or came from private collections.

Among the gifts were works by Matisse, Chagall, Van Gogh and Dali and by Italian artists Giorgio De Chirico, Renato Guttuso, Giacomo Manzù and Pietro Annigoni.

The subject of all the works was the life of St. Paul or the Resurrection of Christ, two themes often mentioned by the pontiff in his speeches and considered to be close to his heart.

Pope Paul, who celebrated his 80th birthday on Sept. 26, has frequently expressed admiration for modern art and has mentioned in various speeches the importance of close cooperation between artists and donors and the church.

The new works will be added to the Vatican collection of modern art which the Pope is building.

Puerto Rican monument is bomb target

The artists who donated works include Soviet dissident Ernst Neizvestny, who now lives in the West, and Americans Leonard Baskin of New Brunswick, N.J., Robert Baxter of Milwaukee, Robert Brennan of Pittsburgh and Jonathan Shahn of Columbus, Ohio.

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP) — Police dismantled a bomb Saturday found at the base of a monument marking the first landing of U.S. troops at Guanica Bay on July 25, 1898, during the Spanish-American war.

No one claimed responsibility for placing the device in the southern port town of Guanica but authorities believed it was "politically motivated."

Police said the pipe bomb attached to a timing apparatus set for 5 p.m. was found by a visitor.

"If it had gone off, it would have destroyed the monument," said a police spokesman who described the bomb as "high-powered."

Supporters of Puerto Rican independence from the United States hold annual rallies at the monument to protest the continued presence of American military forces here.

The bomb was found one day after Puerto Rican nationalist Andres Figueroa Cordero returned to the island after spending 23 years in prison for his role in the 1954 shooting attack on the U.S. House of Representatives in which five congressmen were wounded.

President Carter reduced Cordero's prison term in a "humanitarian gesture" after doctors said the 53-year-old inmate was dying of cancer.

Bohlmann said he began his vandalizing spree in March soon after his wife was fatally injured in a traffic accident.

His first targets were "The Golden Fish," by Swiss-born impressionist Paul Klee and two other paintings on display at Hamburg's Kunsthalle Museum. Museum officials said the Klee painting was valued at $200,000.

Five months later the assailant struck in the Lower Saxony State Museum in Hanover, damaging two paintings by Lukas Cranach, including a renowned portrait of religious leader Martin Luther.

During the next few weeks, the assailant struck at church galleries in Luenenberg and Bochum and in museums in Luebeck, Dueseldorf, and Essen before the Kassel attack, police said.

Paintings damaged in Kassel included the museum's foremost attraction, "Jacob's Blessing," completed by Rembrandt in 1656. Witnesses said the painting, described by museum officials as priceless, was the least damaged of the three.

The others were a Rembrandt self-portrait completed in 1655, "The Architect," painted by Rembrandt student Nicolaus Maes between 1634 and 1639, and "Christ Appears to the Magdalene," by another student, Willem Drost, between 1648 and 1654.

Art works damaged elsewhere during the spree included Rubens' portrait of Archduke Albrecht of Austria, valued at $217,000 and the Cranach portrait of Luther valued at $740,000.

A spokesman for the Dueseldorf museum said it would take two years to restore the damaged Rubens.

The attacks prompted several West German galleries to close until they could secure their valuable works behind glass shields. Other museums initiated tight security, including searches of camera cases and handbags.

Fear replaces trust in the street of diamonds

America's diamond trade is centered in a small block in mid-Manhattan. Until now, the trade has been conducted with a curious mixture of wariness and trust. But murder and robbery have suddenly disrupted the street's traditional, publicity-shy way.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Newsfeatures

NEW YORK — Half the world's diamonds pass each year through the dingy hallways and crowded sidewalks of 47th Street, center of a trade in which $400 million in stones are exchanged daily by men whose trust for each other and whose fear of outsiders is centuries deep.

But fear is the rule now, for murder has come to the diamond block between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. Two traders have been killed, one here and one in Florida, and a third is missing. At least $3 million worth of gems have vanished.

Jewelry shops and exchanges with tiny booths mark the street at ground level, but those, brokers say contemptuously, are for the tourists. The real business is done upstairs, in drab office buildings like the one at 15 West 47th Street in which broker Pinchos Jaroslawicz was killed and robbed.

It's a street of remarkable contradictions: Vast wealth in seedy surroundings; fortunes in gems in elaborate safes and vaults protected by intricate alarm systems — stones which are then taken casually onto the sidewalks and handed to men who are trusted because they are friends of friends; where crime is a real danger yet million-dollar deals are consummated with a handshake.

THE DINGY HALLWAYS at 15 West 47th and the other buildings have simple glass doors out of Sam Spade, behind which are other doors, ultra-sensitive cameras, alarm systems, and formidable safes. The hallways are filled with old men, middle-aged men and young men who look old. They are pale, most of them, and they look poor, but they are not.

It's an inbred business, run by something called "The Syndicate," almost entirely Jewish and almost entirely male; skills handed down from father to son since the 16th and 17th centuries, when jewels were used for money and stone cutting was one of the few crafts open to Jews; deeply suspicious of outsiders, open and trusting to anyone vouched for as "in the trade."

But for the last two weeks, there has been little open trading, for rules of the game have changed. There have always been thefts on the street, they say, but now people are being killed.

Pinchos Jaroslawicz, 25, 5-foot-5, 117 pounds, disappeared Sept. 20. He was last seen outside Shlomo Tal's office, one of those offices in the dingy corridors on the 15th floor of 15 West 47th. Tal was reported missing five days later.

On Sept. 28, Tal, a skilled diamond cutter, was found sitting in a car in Queens. Several hours later, Jaroslawicz' body was found in Tal's office. Tal said he had been kidnapped by men who bludgeoned Jaroslawicz, wrapped him in three plastic bags and stuffed him in a wooden crate. Police say there are holes in Tal's story, and he is being held as a material witness.

THE MEN ON 47th STREET read about another diamond dealer slain in Florida last August and about the disappearance of another man who was carrying $250,000 in diamonds. That men walk around with thousands in gems is now common knowledge, and the men on 47th Street worry that there will be more robberies and more murders.

"All this stuff in the papers, it's terrible, terrible," moans Morris Fried, who's been in the jewelry business for 48 years and is known as the unofficial "mayor of 47th Street." "No, I don't want to talk about it."

Others will talk, but almost always anonymously. A code in the business police deals made by handshakes; anyone who violates it is ostracized, banished, blacklisted. These days the code forbids talking about the business to outsiders and those who do talk worry about telling stories that might reveal their identity.

Virtually all the diamonds that find their way to 47th Street are sent there by what 47th Street calls The Syndicate. It's a consortium of four companies in which DeBeers Consolidated Mines Co. of South Africa holds a controlling interest that some say is as large as 85 percent. Diamonds are mined on every continent, and nearly every country in the world, including the Soviet Union and China, sell their gems to The Syndicate.

The Syndicate controls the flow of diamonds, holding back from the market billions of dollars worth each year. Nobody — at least nobody in the business — complains, for if too many are released, prices drop; too few, and brokers go out of business.

EACH YEAR, ABOUT 250 of America's biggest jewelers like Cartier's and Tiffany's are invited to London. The Syndicate presents them with a package of diamonds for sale, take it or leave it. But if they leave it, they are not invited back. So everyone sells what he is given to sell.

The rest of that year's diamonds are exported to various diamond centers — Antwerp and Tel Aviv are two of the largest — to be cut and marketed by smaller dealers. The biggest market is New York. "The Syndicate is not dumb," says a New York diamond broker. "They know where the market is. America is the richest country in the world, and we have a tradition here of diamond engagement rings. Where else would you sell?"

Most of the stones are uncut. They sell for perhaps 20 percent of cut stones, and there is a 15 percent duty on cut stones coming into the country. Free-lance cutting is a big business on 47th Street, and many of those small corridor offices are used by cutters. Shlomo Tal was considered one of the best.

The big diamond dealings emanate from two clubs, one on the ninth floor at 30 West 47th, the other on the fifth floor at 15. (Insiders discuss buildings by number — "I do a lot of business at 30," they say.)

The clubs have an estimated 10,000 members, many of them independent brokers without offices who pick up gems from importers and sell them for commission to clients. Brokers get commissions of 1 or 2 percent and can earn more than $100,000 a year.

The clubs are heavily guarded by private security forces. You get inside only if brought in by a member, and what you see is a nondescript smoke-filled room. Brokers line up at long tables to sell their wares to buyers. The floors are bare. Diamonds can easily be lost on a carpet.

AND IT'S THE BROKERS — Jaroslawicz was one — who are the likeliest targets for predators. They pick up fortunes in diamonds from importers and cutters, sometimes signing for them, sometimes simply sealing the transaction with a handshake. They don't own the diamonds, and return them if they aren't sold.

"The first time I did it, I was terrified," says a young broker with five years in the business. "I was carrying $20,000 worth of diamonds. Going home on the subway, I had half a dozen cardiac arrests worrying about being mugged."

If the broker had lost the stones, it would have meant a quick exit from the business: "My supplier would tell me, 'Take a few years, go somewhere, come back when you have the $20,000.'"

Most visible on 47th Street are the Hasidic Jews, with beards, sidelocks, black hats and long black coats. But they represent only about 10 percent of the business, and most work at the bottom.

The Hasidim, like all dealers, can only get into the business through their families and friends. There is no such thing as deciding to get into diamonds and setting up shop.

One successful broker got into the business after the death of a neighbor and friend. The widow asked him to take over, made the introductions and — though he knew little about the diamond trade — he did well from the start.

The reason was the immediate trust extended to him on the widow's recommendation, a trust that those in the business say comes from the particularly Jewish concept of togetherness. "If someone vouches for you, they don't worry about you any longer," says the broker. "And since they only do business with people who are certifiably kosher, it's very genteel and trusting."

Fried puts it this way: "It's a crazy street. You ask a man for $50 and he doesn't give you. Ask him for a $100,000 diamond and he gives you."

Now the street's traditional ways may be threatened. In addition to the murders, police have disclosed that about $3 million has been stolen since July. Other thefts likely go unreported by diamond dealers reluctant to let even police into their offices for fear of exposing secret security devices.

Some on the street talk vaguely about "the enemy" — could tough Mideast-raised Jews be preying on them? Defectors from the militant Jewish Defense League? Could ethnic outsiders employed in low-paying jobs — many Puerto Ricans hold jobs as diamond setters — be using their inside knowledge to set up robberies. The business has been expanding. Is the system of trust breaking down and are some of the newcomers unsavory?

There's no evidence, merely rumors.

The police say only that they are investigating all possibilities. Until they come up with answers, the Street won't be quite the same.

Can Christina keep Onassis fleet afloat?

By Nicholas Gage

ARISTOTLE ONASSIS BEFORE HIS DEATH IN 1975

ATHENS — When Aristotle Onassis died in early 1975 at the age of 69, his empire was floundering in the worst shipping depression since he entered the business in 1931. Today the shipping business is even worse, and supertankers, which make up 80 percent of the Onassis tonnage, have been hit the hardest. The question: Can his daughter, Christina, now captain of the enterprise, keep it afloat?

Cutbacks in the importing of oil and overproduction of tankers have caused a huge surplus of tonnage. As a result, chartering rates today are well below the operating costs for supertankers like those in the Onassis fleet.

And the experts predict that the shipping depression is likely to continue. "I don't see any upturn until at least 1980, and I'm afraid it may take a lot longer than that," said Costas Hadjiantoniou, the manager here of Ceres Hellenic Shipping Enterprises.

THE ONASSIS EMPIRE is more vulnerable to the state of the shipping market than others because its founder, unlike other shipping tycoons such as D.K. Ludwig and Costas Lemos, failed to diversify into other fields, creating enterprises that could absorb shipping losses.

During his eventful life, Onassis ventured outside shipping several times. But, whenever he did, the project — be it a casino, an airline or a refinery — eventually turned sour. His one outside involvement at the time of his death, a half interest in New York's Olympic Tower on Fifth Avenue, has had such high cost overruns that it won't be profitable for several years, even though it is fully occupied.

His accomplishments in shipping, however, were remarkable. Starting at the age of 25 with six small ships he bought for $120,000 made in the tobacco business in Argentina, Onassis built a fleet that was at his death bigger than most of the world's navies.

The fleet today numbers 37 ships, totaling about 5.4 million tons, according to H.P. Drewry Ltd., the London shipping consultants. The fleet is directed by Olympic Maritime S.A., which is based in Monte Carlo, and is staffed and maintained by Springfield Shipping, based in Piraeus, the port of Athens.

The fleet is owned jointly by Onassis's daughter, Christina, and a foundation established in memory of his son, Alexander, who died after a plane crash in 1973.

In response to the current depression, Christina Onassis has scrapped 14 older ships totaling 478,999 tons and has canceled most of the supertankers that were ordered by her father during the height of the shipping boom in 1973.

SHE HAS ALSO brought in new management to Olympic Maritime, luring away from the Exxon Corporation a 48-year-old Greek American, Louis Anderson, to become general manager of the company. "Hiring Anderson is probably the best move Christina has made so far," said a close friend of her late father. "Onassis surrounded himself with relatives and cronies who were not always up to their jobs."

The fleet that Anderson and his associates manage is overburdened with tankers. Only 10 of the 37 ships are freighters, which still are being chartered at profitable rates.

Although Onassis did not give freighters much thought because he was preoccupied with supertankers, the freighters have turned out to be a key asset for the fleet. They are earning about $5 million a year, even in the current weak market. Olympic Maritime also has 11 tankers, chartered when the market was high, that have been making $12 million annually.

The bulk of the company's tonnage, 59 percent, is chartered into 1985, but soaring fuel and operating costs have overtaken the small margin of profit built into the charters when they were set.

The resultant losses and the upkeep on the 12 percent of the fleet that is idle are eating up the earnings of the profitable ships. And the 11 tankers that are making money will go off charter at the end of the year. If profitable charters can't be found for them — and profitable charters seem highly unlikely in the current market — Olympic Maritime could start rolling up major deficits.

The crucial problem, then, for the Onassis empire is whether it has the cash reserves to take such losses if the shipping depression continues for several more years.

ACCORDING TO industry experts, it does have the necessary reserves and more. Onassis said in his will that he was in the habit of setting aside 10 percent of his fleet's annual earnings as a reserve. Although he was essentially conservative and liked to charter his ships for long terms rather than leave them free for the spot market — where both the profits and losses come big — he had a long string of good years, including several spectacular ones. In 1973, for example, Olympic Maritime had a profit of $100 million. (That's 10 percent of the $1 billion total that his ships are estimated to have earned since World War II.)

Olympic Maritime has had to pay $17 million in penalties to cancel supertankers Onassis ordered before his death. But the Olympic Bravery, one of the three ships it couldn't cancel, ran aground during her maiden voyage last year, providing $50 million in insurance, which was $15 million more than it cost to build.

On top of that, the 14 ships the company scrapped have brought in at least $35 million more.

Ships, like buildings, carry mortgages, and records show that Olympic Maritime owes about $100 million in loans. But that is more than covered by the value of the ships themselves, which could bring in at least $300 million if they were just scrapped. And they are insured for more than $600 million.

Christina Onassis is so confident about the financial future of her father's empire that, when she received the $50 million insurance for the Olympic Bravery, she used part of it to buy a 270,000-ton tanker for $26.5 million cash.

WHY DID SHE do that when there's so little demand for supertankers? She got the ship for $10 million less than it's worth. So, even if she has to lay it up for five years, she'll be in a position to make big profits with it in a short period if the tanker market rebounds.

Drug users' 'high' begins upstairs in Bogota slum

By Lew Wheaton
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Pablo cradled the marijuana sprig in the fold of white paper as he picked out the seeds and bits of stem.

"This is a lot better and fresher than you'd get in the United States," he said, rolling the bud into a joint.

"Not bad," his customer gasped, struggling to hold the smoke in his lungs. "A little green, but not bad."

Pablo and his customer, another Colombian, finished the marijuana cigarette, occasionally glancing around the single room Pablo shares with his girlfriend and daughter as their only living, sleeping and eating space in the block of run-down flats in a slum district of Bogota.

Pablo said he always lets his customers smoke a full sample before he and they retire to negotiate a price in the central stairwell that contains the water tap and kitchen shared by four families on the top floor of the two-story building.

He is among a host of drug dealers just one step up from street peddlers in the extensive drug trade of Colombia, a nation that experts say provides much of the United States' top-quality marijuana and most of its cocaine.

Pablo sells his grass to consumers and small-time dealers, fellow Colombians and individual operators from the United States.

He shifted on one of the two beds that take up most of the floor space in the room as he described his role in the drug trade. Two small chickens he was fattening made soft clucking noises from their cage under a table across the room.

Pablo gets his stock of marijuana from suppliers who bring the weed into Bogota from the plots of poor farmers who grow it in the northeast. Occasionally he makes a trip himself to the growing region, bringing back enough stock to last him several weeks.

He sells his grass in small lots, usually less than a kilogram (2.2 pounds), although he says he can get more. He says he's not afraid of the law, which specifies jail terms of 3 to 12 years for drug traffickers.

"The police, they don't care about me," he said, giggling in the ever-present high he gets from sampling his own wares. "I'm too small."

Colombia maintains that it has relatively few drug users in contrast to the United States and Western Europe.

"Here it's just a problem of drug traffickers, not consumption," said Jose Miguel Garavito, an investigator for the national attorney general's office. "It only becomes a problem of consumption when the drugs get to 'gringoland'."

Nevertheless, he said,

Colombia was consolidating its anti-drug forces and stepping up its cooperative efforts with other countries, including the United States, in an effort to stamp out the traffic.

Colombian and U.S. Embassy sources who requested anonymity sketched a widespread, deeply entrenched and immensely profitable system of growers, processors, distributors and smugglers who present considerable problems to control.

The marijuana that Pablo and hundreds like him sell for under $4 per kilogram is eventually resold for up to $40 per ounce in major U.S. cities.

That profit margin of over $1,400 per $4 kilogram draws in big operators who wind up paying far less than the prices charged in Colombian $12,000 to $15,000 per kilogram.

But when cut by half or more with an inert substance such as powdered milk and sold by the gram in the United States, that same kilogram could bring prices ranging up to $200,000, depending on quality.

Crackdowns on the cocaine trade are hampered by the small size of shipments that are encased in waterproof coverings and smuggled out of the country in automobile and aircraft fuel tanks, false suitcase bottoms and even the human body.

The cocaine is refined from a partially processed base smuggled into Colombia from Peru, where it is produced from the leaves of the coca plant.

The base is refined into the snowy powder in small portable laboratories that are hard to find. Garavito said a lab capable of turning out one kilogram of cocaine daily could be set up quickly in a small room and as quickly dismantled.

He said government agents recently captured a larger lab that had on hand 419 kilograms of cocaine base — enough to turn out about 400 kilograms of refined powder. That could have brought $80 million in the United States.

The gangs that operate the labs and smuggle the marijuana are reportedly well armed with automatic weapons and coordinate their movements with the latest in modern communications gear.

Garavito said government agents recently captured a radio communica-

The program was announced after the recent deaths in the border area of two Venezuelan national guard officers and two Colombian civilians.

Officials speculated that the Venezuelans may have tried to arrest the Colombians on drug charges, or that the presumed drug dealers may have attacked the Venezuelans in an attempt to obtain arms.

Jim's betting on pair of sleepers

By Edward Cody
Associated Press

MONTE CARLO — An American businessman, gambling $100,000 that he can make nostalgia pay off, bought a pair of luxurious 1920s railway sleeping cars at auction here Saturday.

James Sherwood, the 44-year-old president of Sea Container, Inc., said he planned to use the two 16-bed sleeping cars to carry wealthy tourists from London through Paris to his company's luxury hotel in Venice, the Cipriani.

The auction was touted by its organizer, the British firm of Sotheby Parke Bernet, as a sale for society buffs ready to drop a little fortune to relive memories of days when plush railroad cars rumbled across Europe carrying the noble-born or the rich in bygone splendor. But the auctioneers missed their mark.

Most of the bidders were businessmen interested less in high life than in turning a profit from the romantic nostalgia linked to coaches that traveled with trains like the Orient Express and the Fleche d'Or (Golden Arrow).

Sherwood, from Lexington, Ky., told reporters: "I don't know much about trains myself but I'm surrounded by people who do."

"Nostalgic train travel seems to have touched a nerve in people who are looking for a little adventure," he said.

A dining car also in the five-coach lot went for $58,000 to the Zurich-based Intraflug travel agency that operates a modern-day Orient Express between Zurich and Istanbul. Intraflug charges its passengers $950 a head.

The final two cars, another sleeper and an opulent lounge car with embossed velvet wing chairs and inlaid glass floral designs in its wood paneling, went to a nervous, thick-browed bidder who insisted on remaining anonymous.

He signed certified checks for the total price of $132,000 with a trembling hand in the name "Andre Paccard."

"It's personal, it's personal," he responded when asked what he planned to do with the cars.

Later, however, the man told a bystander the coaches would be used commercially.

Sotheby Chairman Peter Wilson, who ran the auction, estimated the cars would cost about $425,000 apiece to build today. That is three times what they cost when the Compagnie Internationale des Wagon-Lits — the European equivalent of the American coach-maker Pullman — had them built in the 1920s.

The cars are fitted with rich brown velvet in an embossed design. They have inlaid glass flowers in warm wood panels that provide a feeling of opulence far surpassing today's first-class jet compartments

Mohammad is lord of manor

By Robert Merry
Chicago Tribune

WONERSH, England — Mohammad Qabazard says he enjoys being England's newest lord of the manor.

Qabazard, 58, a businessman from oil-rich Kuwait, is the first Arab to gain a title that goes back into the nation's traditions and medieval history.

In those days, a lord of the manor really lorded it over the populace. He was the forerunner of the English country squire, who can still be seen in old English movies walking along the lane attired in a baggy tweed suit with a pork-pie hat perched on his head.

For centuries the lord collected dues from villagers who used his land. It paid everyone to keep in the lord of the manor's favor. Today, things are much more democratic.

Qabazard actually got his title by chance. He likes the cool English summers, compared to the hot ones in Kuwait, so he began looking around for a country residence.

He came here and found that the earl of Carrick, a member of the House of Lords, was selling his mansion with its eight bedrooms and five bathrooms. Qabazard paid the earl about $260,000. Along with the property went the earl's other title — lord of the manor.

The earl explained there were 9,000 other manorial lordships in England and Wales and that the title still held some privileges.

For instance, Qabazard is entitled to own the last remnants of manorial land. Over the centuries the titled land has been drastically reduced, but it still includes the village green, the roadside verges and a stretch of common land.

BETWEEN THEM, the 9,000 lords of the manor own 1.5 million acres of common land. This is their territory, so they have shooting rights, can dig in the earth for gravel, stone, and china clay, can transplant to their gardens any bit of turf from manorial land and can chop down trees to make log fires.

There is even a cash benefit. The post office pays lords of the manor for each telegraph pole driven into their land. It works out at about 5 cents per pole per year.

It was a big day for the villagers when Qabazard performed his first official duty. The Womersh Sports Club organized a fete to raise funds and asked the lord of the manor to open the proceedings.

Normally, in England, Qabazard wears Western-style clothes. So does his dark-haired wife, Mumtaz. But this was to be a special day.

A silver Rolls-Royce drove up to the village green, where the fete was held. Out stepped Qabazard in his white Arab headdress and robes. Mumtaz Qabazard wore her robes of black and gold.

His opening speech was short: "Please spend lots of money and have a good time. I hope the ties between Britain and Kuwait will grow stronger."

Qabazard also judged a children's costume contest. One boy was dressed as an oil sheik with a gasoline can in his hand. The lord of the manor moved on to choose a boy dressed as a marionette.

Villagers said they already were looking forward to the next fete. They hoped Qabazard would attend.

The Arab is pleased with his manor.

"I keep telling my friends they must come and live here," he said. "It is so pleasant. I am sure they could find houses to buy."

And how do the villagers feel about his lordship? Said Graham Hornett, a doctor:

"Mr. Qabazard is really part of our community now."

Briton in Uganda sledgehammered

LONDON (AP) — British-born businessman Robert Scanlon was beaten to death with a sledgehammer in a Uganda prison last month after being detained on spying charges, the London weekly Observer reported Sunday.

The newspaper's correspondent in Kenya quoted an unnamed Ugandan official as saying he witnessed the Sept. 14 killing while visiting Scanlon in a secret jail in Kampala, the Ugandan capital.

The whereabouts of the 44-year-old former chairman of the Uganda Transport Company have been a mystery since the official Radio Uganda reported that he was arrested last June. Earlier this month the radio said he had escaped from jail.

Scanlon took out Ugandan citizenship in 1975 after living in the country for 13 years. In a widely publicized incident two years ago, he was one of four Britons who carried Ugandan President Idi Amin on their shoulders in a sedan chair at a state ceremony and then swore allegiance to Amin on bended knee.

Since 1975, Nairobi newspapers have carried several reports that Amin had sentenced Scanlon to death and then executed him. The stories were denied by Ugandan officials.

Science helps Jews live by ancient laws

In a secluded single-story workshop, rabbis work side by side with engineers to help Jews live modern lives without disobeying God's commandments. The scientific approach to centuries-old Biblical edicts allows man alone, but not machines, to rest on the Sabbath.

By Marcus Eliason
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Dov Zion works in a dingy shop at a machine made mostly of pipes and wires. His job is to manufacture kosher steam.

Zion is an engineer, but many of his colleagues are rabbis. Immersed in volumes of Talmud and textbooks on science, they are trying to reconcile the demands of the modern world and its technology with the laws set down thousands of years ago in the Bible.

"We are trying to keep Judaism abreast of technology without changing Judaism or impeding science," says Rabbi Levy-Yitzhak Halperin, who heads the project. "Many answers to modern-day dilemmas of science and religion are in the Torah and Halacha."

About 20 percent of Israel's residents are Orthodox Jews. They follow rules enumerated in the Torah — the five books of Moses — and the Halacha, a large body of commen-lary by Jewish sages in the 5th century, which is designed to explain and buttress the Torah.

But if the state were to follow the Bible to the letter, it would have to close all businesses, stop all traffic and end all financial transactions each Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath. And that would anger the 80 percent secular population, many already dismayed by what they think is the disproportionate role played in government by the religious political parties.

Enter Rabbi Halperin's Institute for Science and Halacha, where Dov Zion works to try to reconcile the difference. One example is kosher steam.

Under Orthodox law, milk and meat cannot be mixed. So at hotels, restaurants and hospitals, wherever steamtables are used to keep food warm, kosher laws are violated if steam from meat dishes touches something with milk in it.

Halacha rules led Zion to the solution. One rule says kosher food cannot be contaminated by something which is not food. Another maxim says it isn't food if dogs won't eat it.

So Zion rigged his machine to put pine oil into the water which will become steam. The pine oil steam doesn't affect the taste of the food, but Zion found that when he condensed the steam, dogs wouldn't touch it.

Presto, kosher steam.

Many of the institute's functions are less esoteric. Its basic role is to avoid violation of two cardinal rules in the Book of Exodus: "You shall kindle no fire in all your habitations on the Sabbath day. — Whoever does any work on it shall be put to death."

The ban on fire, in its modern interpretation, includes electric lights. Thus a devout Orthodox Jew won't turn on the light on the Sabbath, use a telephone which might kindle a switchboard light, ride an elevator with a mechanism that might produce a spark, or drive a vehicle that runs on combustion.

Nor may he ask others to do such things for him, since indirect violations are considered equally sinful.

So institute researchers have come up with a doctor's otoscope — a lamp-like device for examining ears — that works by turning off electricity instead of turning it on. They have devised a clock that checks in Sabbath workers without using electricity. And they have made a lamp encased in metal slats, which can be turned on before the Sabbath begins at dusk Friday and regulated for the next 24 hours by opening or closing the slats.

The institute has assumed even greater prestige since the May 17 election, because the religious parties are a key part of the government coalition forged by new Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

One of its early acts was to appoint a committee to re-examine the permits handed out liberally by the previous leadership to allow factories to operate on the Sabbath. The committee is expected to demand that some industries shut down on Saturday or use automated equipment that would require no workers.

Nonetheless, many regulations are enforced by municipalities and do not come under the purview of the national government. In the Socialist stronghold of Haifa, for example, buses run on the Sabbath; in religious Jerusalem, they don't. In Tel Aviv, moviehouses have been open on Saturdays ever since a non-religious mayor took over and did not include rabbis in his coalition.

And many Israeli restaurants now serve pork, expressly forbidden by kosher law, listing it on the menu as "white meat." Nor is the once-coveted kosher certificate from the rabbinate a prerequisite for operation.

Some of the institute's inventions are applicable any day of the week and can be used for efficiency even where religion is not a factor. Among these are a self-starting cow milker and a greenhouse whose windows open and shut automatically to air the crops.

Episcopal unity gained in behind-scenes politicking

By Kenneth Briggs
New York Times Service

PORT SAINT LUCIE, Fla. — A longtime member of the Episcopal Church establishment, leaving a session of the House of Bishops where a particularly subtle set of maneuvers was under way, remarked sardonically to an onlooker, "Did it ever strike you that there might be some politicking going on here?"

Like all other mortal institutions, the Episcopal hierarchy has its factions and statesmen, its special interest groups and its complements of both large egos and humble presences. More often than not they put aside their sharpest differences in public meetings. But behind the scenes they contend long and hard on matters that shape church policy.

This process was never more in evidence than at the week-long meetings that just ended. Nationwide, the church is in deep conflict over women's ordination, the proposed revision of the 1928 prayer book and homosexuality. Divided by those issues themselves, the bishops were called upon to stitch together enough unity to convince both the laity and clergy back in the parishes that they could provide leadership.

The final outcome, the achievement of a measure of outward harmony, was made possible largely because of backstage strategy.

Secret Witness cases summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 77 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $52,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects awaiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case, list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness—that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST—either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killers of Compton restaurant manager Roger Heninger, 32, shot to death in his office at the Sizzler restaurant, 1715 N. Bullis Road, during a robbery by two gunmen at 10 p.m. July 22, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Adrian Pace Jr., 17, shot to death in front of his Elm Street apartment in Long Beach during an altercation with two unknown suspects at 10:25 p.m. June 24, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 500 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Stephen Duane McCord, 22-year-old Mira Loma man found shot to death in an alley at the rear of 3033 E. Anaheim St. on the morning of April 1, 1976.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 39-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

—A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Samuel Law, 23, formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Spear, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrest, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret. You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions or the capture of fugitives in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 804 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

KKK hits indictment

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Some 20 white-robed Ku Klux Klansmen marched five blocks in the rain Saturday to protest the indictment of a white man in a 1963 church bombing that killed four black girls.

An equal number of black and white protesters followed the march route from a park behind the city hall to the federal court building.

Alabama Grand Dragon Don Black of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan said the march originally was called to protest the Panama Canal treaties. He said it was changed when a state court judge set $200,000 bail for Robert Edward Chambliss, 73, of Birmingham, who is charged with four counts of first-degree murder in the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church blast.

'Resident' gators getting hard to handle

New York Times Service

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Since the month began, a Sarasota man has died as the result of an alligator attack and another man, 150 miles away at Port St. Lucie, lost a hand. In neither instance was the alligator protecting itself.

The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission here received 10,000 complaints about alligators last year, and its game wardens caught and relocated 4,000 of the reptiles. Most of the relocations were precautionary; the alligators were taken from populated areas after residents complained.

But some of the alligators were suspected of having mauled farm animals; others had developed a taste for pet dogs, and some had shown aggressiveness toward humans.

This year the relocation of alligators in a 10-county area between Jacksonville and Orlando was stopped. Instead, 440 "problem alligators" were caught and killed, a larger total than that for all of Florida in the last 15 years.

In the early 1960s, conservationists noted a severe decline in the alligator population; the native Floridian species was being extensively hunted for hides. In 1962 Florida prohibited alligator hunting, and in 1969 the federal government placed alligators on the endangered species list and outlawed interstate sale of their hides.

The alligator was untouchable until this January, when it was promoted from an endangered species to a "protected species." That decision, along with a boom in both numbers and boldness, prompted the 10-county experiment in alligator control.

Tommy C. Hines, a biologist with the game commission, has documented 20 incidents in the last five years in which alligators caused severe injury or death to humans. Six of them, including the two earlier this month, have occurred in 1977.

"There is no question that the alligator has recovered. It is certainly no longer an endangered species and probably it is not even a threatened species any more," Hines said.

Although no accurate count of Florida alligators is available, censuses in randomly inspected areas have shown increases of 25 to 30 percent since 1962, and sometimes much more. For example, in Lake Orange, just south of Jacksonville, there were 8.8 alligators a mile in 1974 and 24.8 a mile in 1976.

Problems caused by this unexpected recovery have been compounded by the development of traditional alligator habitats—lakes, rivers and wetlands. Proximity has led the alligator to lose much of its native fear of humans, and vice versa. Some Floridians have tried to turn alligators into pets, feeding them table scraps and such items as hot dogs and marshmallows.

Such alligators pose a problem even when they are taken away to swamps, because they no longer fear humans and may endanger fishermen and other visitors.

If the new program of selective killing does not precipitate an upsurge of poaching, state officials may propose to the legislature that it be made statewide next year. The commercial hunting of alligators, however, is not likely to return soon.

The Florida Audubon

Society, a powerful environmental group in the state, expressed concern when the test program of killing problem alligators was begun, and some environmentalists oppose any method of control except relocation.

Still, a public opinion survey earlier this year showed a substantial majority favoring a stricter program to control problem alligators. Every new report of an alligator attack or threat to humans adds fuel to the controversy.

Queen Mary tours booming, may mark turnaround

By Cilla Brown
Staff Writer

Queen Mary tour revenues for the past three months are up sharply over the same period last year, possibly signaling the beginning of economic recovery for the financially troubled project.

Marvin M. Wolff, director of the City of Long Beach's Queen Mary Department, made that assessment Friday when he released revenue figures showing a September increase of 40 percent and jumps of 34 percent in August and 14 percent in July over the same months in 1976.

Wolff attributed the increase to city efforts during the last year to attract more paying visitors to the tour and the ship's Living Sea exhibit.

The city took over operation of the tour and exhibit from the California Museum of the Sea Foundation last October. "Both attendance and revenues from the tour had been dropping steadily for years, so our department was asked to take it over and turn it around," Wolff said.

He said his staff had expanded the tour, added new exhibits and entertainment, refurbished several areas of the ship and stepped up its marketing campaign in order to attract a larger portion of the amusement market.

As a result, he said, the Queen Mary has climbed from No. 14 to No. 5 in the ranking by the Stanford Research Institute of major Southern California attractions.

Wolff predicted that the Queen Mary, which has been costing the city's tidelands operating fund over $2 million a year for several years, will be "breaking even" by the end of the 1979-80 fiscal year.

"We certainly have a long way to go to achieve our long term goals for the Queen Mary with regard to all our programs," Wolff said, "but we are now under way in the direction of success."

Wolff's department is responsible for the overall administration of the city-owned Queen Mary, including the hotel, which is leased by the Hyatt Hotels, and the food operations and shops, which are leased by Specialty Queen Mary. The revenue figures he cited, however, are only for the tour and its food facility and gift shop.

Total tour revenues for July, August and September of this year were $798,354, up from last year's $630,835 for the same three months. This reflects, in part, an increase in adult admission prices from $4 to $5 on July 1.

Wolff said, however, that attendance during this three-month period also rose over last year's, from 173,264 to 180,690, with a 17.5 percent increase for September alone.

Attendance and revenue figures for the fiscal year that ended in July were the lowest in the tour's history of steady economic decline.

Wolff said the upswing since July "shows we really can reverse the trend and turn the Queen Mary into a viable attraction."

Visitors to Cabrillo Beach in San Pedro on Saturday recreate the lore of the beach's namesake, a Portuguese who explored the West Coast of America and landed at the beach in 1542. Enjoying the third annual Cabrillo Pageant, Jackie Piro, upper left, paints a model galleon built with supplies furnished by the pageant committee. With

Changes in charter to be offered

Council to act on reports Tuesday

By Charles Sutton
Staff Writer

The Long Beach City Council, in what could be the first of several steps leading to a revamping of the commission and committee structure of city government, will consider a number of proposed charter amendments at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

If the council agrees, the measures will be placed on the March 1978 ballot.

High on the list of suggested changes is a proposal to shift the powers of appointment from the city manager to the mayor — a recommendation that has the backing of both City Manager John Dever and the recently disbanded Mayor's Task Force on New Directions.

The task force, a blue-ribbon panel that spent a year studying Long Beach city government, recommended last June that all commission, committee and board appointments be made by the mayor, subject to the council's approval.

TWO MONTHS earlier, Dever had recommended much the same thing.

The city manager now makes appointments to the harbor, water and planning commissions — the city's most powerful commissions. All of his appointments are subject to council confirmation.

In addition, he makes appointments to several lesser boards and committees.

Most offices to close, no mail Monday

There will be no regular mail delivery Monday and most government offices will be closed in observance of Columbus Day.

Most schools and colleges, including Long Beach City College and Long Beach State University, will conduct regular sessions. Most banks and businesses also will be open.

All federal, state and Los Angeles County offices will be closed. City halls in Long Beach, Lakewood, Artesia, Norwalk and Hawaiian Gardens will be closed. The Cerritos and Bellflower city halls will be open.

The holiday commemorates the arrival of Christopher Columbus on the shores of the New World in 1492.

THE LINE forms on the right, so get in it and keep me company. We also serve who only stand and wait—and wait and wait.

Are your corns and bunions beginning to hurt? Read on. Consider how much of your time is spent just waiting in line, idling your engine and revving up your temper.

You wait in line at the bank on payday. You're part of the queue at the theater box office, at the supermarket cashier's stand, at the unemployment office, the Social Security administration, the ice cream counter at Thrifty Drug.

You stand in line to board a bus, see the Johnny Carson show on NBC, pay a traffic fine, eat a lunch in a cafeteria. You're in line at department stores waiting to pay your bill, open an account or make an exchange.

You're in line to register at Long Beach City College and Long Beach State. You're in line for measles shots, football games, drivers' licenses.

You're in line to buy stamps, money orders and send out packages at the Post Office. You're in line for a wedding rehearsal, a band drill, a job interview, a disability claim.

If you don't have a date at the dance, you're in the stag line. If you're a Shriner on parade, you're in a line.

You're in a line to answer a call to jury duty, to cash in trading stamps, to see the dean or the vice principal. You're in a line at the confessional box, the communion rail.

You're in a line to trade discount coupons for an Arby's roast beef sandwich. You're in a ticket or restroom line at the Coliseum, the Forum, Dodger Stadium and the Big A.

YOU'RE IN A line on the freeway at the metered ramps. You're in the line at the Marine recruiting station, the Pop Warner football signups, the welfare office. You wait in line to see Santa Claus, your doctor, podiatrist, optometrist, chiropractor and dentist.

You're in a line waiting for a rock musician's autograph, or part of the crowd at the stage door waiting for Bubbles La Tour to appear.

You're part of the line at the cut-rate, self-service gas station. You cool your heels and your rump at the car wash on Saturday mornings. You're in the line at the barber shop. You're part of the line of cars waiting to pick up your children at school.

You wait in line at Mad Nite sales, at the corner for the green light. You're part of the line of tax protesters in downtown Los Angeles. You wait for your ship to come in, your Amtrak train to roll, your plane to take off. You're in the baggage line at the airport.

You wait at the bakery, the shoe store, the water cooler, the registration desks at motels and hotels and convention centers. You wait in line to see the circus parade; if you're a lion tamer you march in it.

Everybody's in a line somewhere—convicts lockstepping to the dining hall in a prison; chorus girls auditioning; cars being assembled at Detroit; families with six children and one bathroom houses; dogs waiting for shots at the city pound; Independent, Press-Telegram delivery trucks at the loading dock.

YOU GET IN line to vote, to beat the deadline for mailing tax returns at the Post Office, to cash in your chips in Las Vegas, to shake hands with the Queen of England, to file past a bier at a funeral home.

The line is endless. Athletes line up for football and baseball games. Kids line up to see "Star Wars." Cadets line up for white glove inspections. Suspects line up for the cops. Bettors line up at Santa Anita to invest in win, place and show tickets, later to line up at the bank for a loan.

You sleep eight hours a day so you'll have enough strength to work another eight and then stand in line. Your feet hurt and your patience ebbs. But the wait goes on for you. You wait, wait, wait every day of your life.

While you're waiting in line with nothing to do, please read this column. It will tell you that you do not wait alone. I'm right behind you. My feet hurt, too.

Courage, we're gaining on them. We should make it to the head of the line just about the time the clerk decides to go to lunch.

That time is now. It always is.

A separate board

When Governor Brown vetoed a bill which would have created a separate governing board for the Long Beach Community College District, we can only assume he did so because of having inadequate information.

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, is prepared to reintroduce the bill Jan. 1, and this time local officials will make sure the governor is fully aware of the present situation and the effects of the change.

Long Beach is one of only three cities in California which still have a single board for both their Unified School District and their Community College District.

IT IS TRUE that in 1972, a proposal for separate governing boards was turned down by Long Beach voters. It was opposed at that time by the Long Beach Board of Education, and the Independent, Press-Telegram recommended against it editorially.

In 1972, a separate board for the College District would have cost local taxpayers considerable extra money. A series of state laws since that time, however, have changed the whole picture. It no longer is a lot more expensive to establish a separate board.

The only additional cost involved will be that of a College District personnel commission, which has been mandated by the state. This service now costs the College District $20,000, and it is estimated an additional $30,000 maximum will be needed for the new commission.

Since 1972, all College District responsibilities have been transferred to the College District administration, with the exception of classified personnel service — and this will be transferred effective next July 1.

All administrative and district costs for the College District are now budgeted and spent from College District funds.

The Board of Education now strongly supports a separate Community College District board — it voted unanimously last Monday to ask Governor Brown to reconsider his veto — and there has been no community opposition expressed.

We also believe separate boards are advisable.

The two districts are, in fact, now separate. They deal with different departments of state government and, in many cases, are covered by different laws. The College District has had a separate superintendent since 1976. Despite the separation, there has been close cooperation between the two districts, and we are confident this will be maintained under separate boards.

BOTH DISTRICTS serve the same educational constituency. In any given year, about half of Long Beach high school graduates register at LBCC. The districts are not competitive and both have everything to gain from continued cooperation.

The legislation which Governor Brown vetoed had been approved unanimously by both houses of the State Legislature. We urge the governor to reconsider and, when the legislation again comes before him next year, to sign it into law.

Fire still the enemy

Long Beach has the highest-rated Fire Department in the United States — but that doesn't mean fires have been eliminated.

There have been great advances in recent years in the science of firefighting, but there has been even faster growth in the potential for fire.

Increased use of plastics in common household goods, foam material which makes mattresses and furniture so comfortable, the many handy electrical appliances all make the living easier. But they also increase the chances of fire.

Fire prevention is a top-priority, year-around program of the Fire Department, but it is being doubly emphasized during Fire Prevention Week, which opens today and runs through Saturday.

Long Beach residents are welcome to visit city fire stations throughout the year, but they are especially invited this week. While at the station, they are urged to join "Operation Red Ball," a combined Fire Department-Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce fire prevention program.

Bright red stickers, about four inches in diameter, are being distributed at all fire stations. They are to be placed in the upper left corner of a window in a bedroom occupied by a small child, elderly person, invalid or anyone who might have difficulty taking care of himself in an emergency. The sticker should be placed so it is visible to firefighters responding to an emergency.

Residents should do all they can to prevent fires. But, if fire does break out, getting out of the house is first priority. Every family should have a step-by-step plan of what to do to get everyone out of the residence safely in case of fire.

There is an old saying, "Where there's smoke, there's fire." Firefighters today suggest this be changed to, "Where there's smoke, there should be a smoke alarm." Such alarms improve your chances of getting out of the house in time.

Don't wait to telephone the Fire Department. Get out of the house! Call firefighters from a neighbor's phone.

Everyday, on the average, fires kill 32 Americans and destroy or damage nearly $11.5 million in property. Do everything you can to avoid becoming part of those statistics.

Clark Kerr to the rescue

Solutions to minority admissions

WASHINGTON — Dr. Clark Kerr, once the president of the University of California, came to Washington the other day on one more rescue attempt for the schools he once served.

Kerr was attempting to provide a solution for institutions of higher learning faced with the problem of dealing with minority and female enrollment in professional schools.

The U.S. Supreme Court is wrestling with the subject as it studies a specific case at the University of California at Davis medical school. The question is simple: Is it constitutional to reserve space for minorities, thereby eliminating qualified white applicants?

KERR, AS president of the Carnegie Council, proposed some solutions.

First, he suggested that a minimum standard of eligibility be established for all applicants to professional schools. They would have to have the qualifications to complete the work.

Second, race and background also should be considered. In the case of racial discrimination, or educational disadvantage, the applicants should be judged "on how far they have come from behind," rather than where they are now in relation to others.

In addition, they should be judged on what they might contribute because of their racial or cultural background.

Finally, the institutions should establish goals, not rigid quotas, for the enrollment of minorities and women.

Kerr's point that minorities can bring something special to the professions is worth considering in viewing the entire question. A few Spanish-speaking doctors just might be valuable in East Los Angeles, or in the fields of the San Joaquin or Imperial Valleys. And a black doctor just might take a special interest in sickle-cell anemia.

Most medical school deans used to have, and many still have, five spots re-

'Caveat emptor'

Double trouble for consumers

SACRAMENTO — "Caveat emptor" is a Latin phrase whose use, unfortunately, has become so common in this country that its definition is carried in the "English language" section of most dictionaries rather than the "Foreign words and phrases" section.

It means "Let the buyer beware" and, again unfortunately, it is a warning buyers are unwise to ignore.

A year ago July, the California Department of Consumer Affairs distributed an attractive, 194-page catalogue of advice to people who run into what the book describes as "unscrupulous business practices."

So attractive is the catalogue, as a matter of fact, that late last month the National Press Club in Washington cited it as the best consumer publication of 1976, and its editor, Janice Lowen Agee, was named the nation's best consumer journalist.

The introduction to "The Complete California Consumer Catalogue" contains the expected stroking language that "the vast majority of business people are reputable and want to provide you with the best possible goods and services."

However, unscrupulous business practices unfortunately do exist, and it is these practices that we warn you against here. By knowing what to watch for, you will find it easier to recognize the businesspeople who deserve your patronage. In this way, this catalogue will benefit both consumers and industry alike."

It then discusses 40 separate areas, from "Advertising" to "Water" and including sections on contracts, dance studios and funerals. It advises consumers how to complain, how to use the court system and where to find local assistance.

It tells us that the Procter & Gamble Co. spent $325 million for advertising in 1974, and that the U.S. government was among the nation's Top 10 advertisers that year.

Consumers will have one view of the need for the book and business may have another, but the fact is it exists and is available (for $1.50 from all Department of Motor Vehicles offices and from the Publications Section, P.O. Box 20191, Sacramento, 95820) and is about to go into its third printing.

Should it exist? Do consumers need government's protection in their relations with merchants, or is it just a case of empire-builders in government proclaiming a need and then rushing to meet it?

Carter pollster reports public's 'striking' change toward positive

by Jack W. Germond and Jules Witcover
Chicago Tribune Service

WASHINGTON — Everyone knows that the White House gets its guidance on the state of the national psyche from pollster Pat Caddell, and what Caddell is saying these days suggests that things are not necessarily as bad as they always seem to be in Washington.

Caddell told an audience last week, for example, that there has been a "striking" change toward the positive in the national attitude in recent surveys. Where two years ago only about 18 percent of the public could be described as optimistic about the long-term future, that figure now is up to about 50 percent, which is not as high as a decade ago but still means the national mood has — in the pollster's characterization — "crawled out of the pit" of pervasive pessimism.

President Carter might draw some perverse comfort, as well, from other general findings — first, that there is still what Caddell calls "a sense of low expectations" in the electorate and, second, that the voters out there are far less preoccupied with what happens in Washington than those who live there.

In other words, it might be said that people are neither paying much attention to what is happening here nor expecting many instant solutions to their problems. Caddell's research also suggests that at least half the people now feel the president and Congress are getting along "about as well as could be expected," which is hardly the view in Washington. And those who hold negative feelings about Congress as an entity have declined from 85 percent to 62 percent of the electorate this year.

POLITICAL professionals have been saying for almost a year that Jimmy Carter owed his election to black votes, and now a detailed analysis made by the Joint Center for Political Studies at Howard University has quantified that black contribution.

The study, based on actual voting figures rather than samplings, shows that Carter received 90 percent of the black vote in the 1976 presidential election, his share ranging from 80 percent in some states up to 97 percent in Texas. And the black vote exceeded the margin by which he won 13 states with 216 electoral votes.

The black vote, the JCPS survey found, was the critical difference in Carter's southern base, winning him Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, North Carolina and South Carolina. And it made the difference in several closely contested states outside the South — Maryland, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

ONE OF THE Republican Party's few remaining larger-than-life figures, former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, apparently has been staying up nights thinking of ways to stand out from the

Since the publication is the product of the Department of Consumer Affairs, its answer to those questions is obvious. The 1977 edition, for example, is dedicated to Taketsugu Takei, Governor Brown's first selection as department director and now a Superior Court judge in Santa Clara County.

Takei, the dedication contends, "initiated the reclamation of the department for the consumers of California."

That is a direct slam at the administration of Ronald Reagan, Brown's predecessor, who believed that except for outright fraud by either party the relationship between consumer and merchant was simply no concern of government.

Reagan's attitude is shown clearly in his budget proposals. In the 1966-67 fiscal year budget, submitted by former governor Edmund G. Brown Sr., the office of Consumer Counsel received an appropriation of $110,111. Reagan's first budget, prepared, really, by Brown's finance department, contained an appropriation of $119,000, but the new governor saw to it that only $32,068 was actually spent, and he eventually caused the office to be phased out.

The State's Bureau of Professional and Vocational Standards was created in 1929 to regulate occupations, and Reagan continued the long practice of appointing members of industry to the various boards charged with licensing and regulating.

PRETTY MUCH OVER Reagan's objections, the emphasis of the bureau began to change, and in 1970 it became the Department of Consumer Affairs. Jerry Brown completed the shift this year when the Agriculture and Services Agency was split up, with Agriculture getting its own cabinet-level status and the activities remaining organized into the State and Consumer Services Agency.

Last year, at Brown's urging, public members were added to the licensing and regulating boards, and industry's tight hold on the policing of itself was relaxed somewhat.

And so, the regulating of industry has itself become an industry, with the department's spending this year certain to exceed $36 million, with a staff of some 1,250 persons doing the spending.

THE QUESTION of which is the greater evil — the cheating of consumers which prompted the original government response or the current plethora of regulatory zeal — makes for interesting philosophical conversations.

But the need for an answer to that question must give way to the need for an answer to a more important question — the consumer gets it in the neck when he is cheated by a merchant, and the consumer gets it in the neck when merchant's costs increase because of government consumer protection regulations, and the consumer gets it in the neck again when his taxes increase to help pay for the regulating of all businesses resulting from government's desire to protect him from the few, which cheat.

pack as the GOP takes preliminary stock of its 1980 presidential prospects. His proposals for a single six-year term for president, a single eight-year term for senators and two four-year terms for House members have had a thorough airing, as well as his more recent call for a national referendum on the Panama Canal issue.

But overlooked is an even more intriguing suggestion — for a Republican anyway — that the federal government involve itself in a new partnership with private enterprise in foreign trade. Connally would have the feds intercede and represent American business in world markets with other governments already in charge of foreign trade in behalf of their own business communities.

"We live with the myth that other countries operate as we do," Connally says. And that myth, he is convinced, puts American business at a distinct disadvantage in world markets. Connally is one of those people who can sell iceboxes to Eskimos, but it may be hard to persuade many Republicans that the party of big business should get in bed with government.

ALTHOUGH 1980 is a long way off, White House insiders operate on the assumption that President Carter will have competition in the Democratic primaries from Governor Jerry Brown of California. And Brown's agents seem to take a wicked delight in encouraging that notion.

The Ombudsman Leaving out punchline Rather bad

Hell hath no fury like a reader denied all of Erma Bombeck's column, as the Ombudsman discovered on receipt of a letter from "A Friend."

When ineptitude destroys something that's meant to be funny by leaving out most of the punchline, that's too much. I refer specifically to Erma Bombeck's "A

F. C.
Anderson

Wit's End" column of Tuesday, Sept. 27, which more or less revolved around a clever remark by Dan Rather.

"Unfortunately the typesetters only saw fit to print the last three words of the quote — which rendered most of the rest of the column nonsensical, as you might guess."

The quote, in its entirety, was, "No, Mr. President, are you?" and it was preceded by a paragraph that should have read (but didn't):

"I told him I thought it was fascinating and he asked if you (Rather) broached the subject of that infamous press conference when you arose to scattered applause and Mr. Nixon asked if you were running for office."

That's what readers of the Sept. 27 issue of the Independent missed in Erma's column. The typographical mess was cleared up for Press-Telegram subscribers. We're sorry for stepping on the Bombeck-Rather punchline, for we're also avid fans of Erma's.

I hope this appeases "A Friend," who charges the typesetting of the Independent and Press-Telegram is atrocious. So what else is new?

READER MIKE Curry says we short-changed subscribers who follow the adventures of "Dennis the Menace" in the Sunday I, P-T. It seems we eliminated the first three frames of the comic strip.

How do we plead? Guilty — with an explanation.

We did snip the first three frames of "Dennis," but only to accommodate an ad that ran across the bottom of the first comics page. It's common practice, and the artists who draw the comic strips allow for ad placement by making a few frames expendable.

Even Mike Curry, who found us out by doublechecking "Dennis" in the Los Angeles Times, concedes the excision did not destroy the strip's continuity.

Guilty though we may be, we have succeeded in doing to "Dennis" that which his plagued elders in the strip have not been able to do. We cut him down to size, albeit without sacrificing any of his menace.

NOW WE TURN to a question from Jeannette Wright of Long Beach, who asks if we and pollster Louis Harris were correct in our story of Monday, Sept. 19, headlined "Poll urges U.S. spending cuts." Jeannette centers in on a paragraph reading:

"As for space programs, foreign economic aid, and foreign military aid, the number of those who now feel that cutbacks would do no great harm is 18 percent, 8 percent and 8 percent, respectively."

Says Jeannette: "As I interpret it, 92 percent of the American people feel that cutbacks in foreign economic aid and foreign military aid would do great harm."

That's the way I read the story. But I could be wrong — Louis Harris didn't poll me.

ATTENTION, Mark Tomich of Lakewood. I'm looking into the matter of why we used a wire story generalizing the FBI Uniform Crime Report rather than localizing it to show how the cops and robbers fared in Long Beach and other Southland communities.

My tentative finding is that the reports of local law enforcement agencies don't always gibe with that of the FBI. It's not that we are seeking to spare Long Beach police embarrassment; we just want to save our readers some confusion.

As an old city editor with police reporter stripes on my sleeve, I know that FBI crime reportage isn't necessarily gospel chiseled on stone.

More about this next Sunday.

Unwise development?

The news that the Heartwell Building might be demolished brought to mind one of the less commonly recognized dangers connected with redevelopment — the pattern of subsidization. When tax money is readily available for renewal, the projects have a way of ignoring what is sensible, sensitive and economically feasible.

It could only be under subsidized circumstances that the Heartwell Building would leave the scene at a relatively young age. But the pattern started earlier, when the subsidized office buildings built on the west beach began to make the older buildings downtown uncompetitive. By the same stroke, they also removed one of the neighborhoods which formerly patronized downtown stores; now we are getting ready to subsidize the retail commercial area.

It is dangerous to remove our economy from the workings of the free enterprise system, and the pattern will continue to lead to premature displacement, unwise development and a great burden on some taxpayers.

But not all subsidies are the same. Those going to redevelopment very often help those who could help themselves and the expression "welfare for the wealthy" is justified.

What isn't justified is for Long Beach to continue to ignore approaches to city revitalization which are superior at a fraction of the cost.

'The enemy is us'

Was it Mark Twain who said "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it?" Might not the same be said about property taxes?

The Legislature has once again failed us, allowing political considerations to transcend the often desperate needs of their constituents. Even the dismal plight of those on fixed incomes, forced out of their homes by the impossible burden of doubling property taxes, has failed to move them to action.

Property tax relief is once again squarely in the hands of the people. What are we going to do about it? The Jarvis initiative may not offer the perfect solution, either. But it is all we have. Let's all support it, actively, so it will qualify for the ballot next June. Two years ago, a similar initiative fell just 1,400 signatures short of qualifying for consideration by the electorate. Let's not allow that to happen again.

Please don't sit back and wait for someone to bring you a petition for your signature. Go after it! Take a few forms yourself — ask your neighbors, friends, fellow employees, church members, club members, to sign before Nov. 25.

If adopted, the Jarvis amendment would basically limit the property tax to one percent of the market value of a property, based on the 1975-76 tax bill, to be updated upon transfer of the property to new ownership.

Let's not just moan and wail and blame our legislators. "The enemy is us," if we don't qualify this petition for the June primary.

Two-way streets

Horse and buggy days again! Folks, get out your horse and buggy as Long Beach is evidently going back to those days with two-way streets.

Who is responsible for this backwardness? It is disgusting.

Police and guns

The so-called "liberal media" cover extensively every incident involving the death of a policeman. There is in fact coverage on TV, in newspapers, and even in magazines in this event. If an ordinary John Doe is killed by a policeman, he never receives as much attention as does an officer of the law. And every policeman who shoots someone is not a rookie, nor is every victim a wild-eyed nut.

I would like to ask Robert Wassman (letters Sept. 29) how many officers have been killed because they did not draw their guns as opposed to how many unarmed citizens have died because the officer did draw his gun?

Now, my pet peeve concerning the police — it is very difficult for me to understand the "hot pursuit" directive for moving traffic violators. During the past week two children in two separate incidents were killed because policemen chased $20 and $30 traffic violators onto freeways or in heavy traffic and caused automobile accidents which resulted in these deaths. So instead of receiving a simple traffic citation, the unfortunate violator is jailed on a felony manslaughter charge and his life is quite possibly ruined.

Is the city of Los Angeles so desperate for revenue that it must endanger the lives of innocent citizens for a few dollars? Do the officers believe they are riding horses instead of driving lethal weapons?

It might be better to let a few get away rather than injure or kill innocent bystanders. If the person being pursued is a habitual offender, he will be caught at a later date. If he is not, no harm is done in making the decision to not pursue in heavy traffic or on our freeways. Let's change the hot pursuit directive. It's not worth human lives.

Apathetic parents

If Tuesday night's attendance at a specific high school's "Back to School night" was an indication of parental interest in their child's education, we parents had better hang our heads in shame.

As a parent of two, it has been my understanding these yearly programs held at the elementary, junior high and high school levels are strictly for the benefit of the parents. These events offer us an opportunity to glean information regarding our children's scholastic studies, a chance to meet their teachers, to whom we have bequeathed the responsibilities of supervising and instilling wisdom to our youth, and an opportunity to familiarize ourselves with the school campus, which is a home away from home for our kids. Since our children spend the majority of each day at these schools, I would think it would behoove us to show an interest if for no other reason than mere curiosity. Needless to say, I guess this just isn't so.

So often we are quick to criticize our youth for the way they squander their time, do not utilize their potential, show little respect for others, etc. And yet, aren't we as parents greatly to blame if we won't put forth the effort to attend one night at school to show an interest in our investments, our students?

Had you attended, you would have been encouraged by the curriculum available to our children. However, you would also have become more aware (to your chagrin) that a percentage of class time is spent attempting to just keep order, that many books are defaced and obscene language scribbled throughout the pages, and that a lack of student ability to listen to instruction is hindering progress in many of the classrooms. But why should we be surprised that some students (hopefully a small number) show so little respect when we as parents lack this same respect towards our children by showing so little interest in their education and social behavior while at school.

I still believe most parents have their children's education and future interests at heart; and that our poor attendance record was not a true showing of our concern. However, if it was, I'll let you draw your own conclusions, as I don't like mine.

Female hitchhikers

A word of advice to female hitchhikers. So much has been written and discussed in court trials of the few of you who do report a case where you were raped by a male driver, let me suggest to you that you don't accept a ride from a man driver alone, even two. You are reasonably safe in a car with a woman driver because you are of the same sex and you are just as strong as she is 99 per cent of the time. Should one be a lesbian, you could handle her much easier than a man.

I raised nine girls and this is what I have taught them. All have hitched rides, but only with a woman driver, and a couple have encountered lesbians, but were dropped off safe when their advances were made.

I met a very pretty girl last night who was thumbing a ride at Del Amo and Long Beach Boulevard. She was about 16. She said she didn't have bus fare home. I took her to the bus stop, gave her $1 and made sure she got on the bus. To me she was one of my daughters, and I scolded her for the chance she was taking. The next day's paper could have told of her being raped. Such a pretty girl.

So lest men think you're ready to bed down with them, just don't accept a ride with them unless you are one of the few who expect a pass from a man.

I've known several girls in my 64 years who just hitchhike from one state to another, expecting to repay their driver in a motel. Just you don't be one. Accept only female drivers.

A. L. VICKS

Why bus?

There is one problem facing us locally that seems to me to be utterly stupid. It has to do with mandatory busing. Would it not be much wiser and simpler to upgrade the schools in areas where there is a need, rather than transport children miles away from their homes? Most people buy their homes with the idea in mind that there are schools nearby. I can assure the powers that be that if I had young children who would be sent to distant areas, I'd refuse to send them.

Another thing which, if I'm not mistaken is related to the subject of schools is the fact that the property taxes are supporting the schools. It is quite clear that in a poor neighborhood, the taxes would be far less than in an area which houses the higher income group. Personally, I feel that every child is entitled to the best education possible, no matter what his parents earn. This point is so simple that it has been ignored by many people.

On the subject of property taxes, what has happened to the refund or reassessment of homes owned by the lower income group? Somehow these questions seem to get swept under the rug. It is frightening to see how many homes in our immediate area and in the Lakewood area are being sold. I can only believe that the taxes are the main reason for this. It so happens that I know a few families whose taxes have been raised so drastically that it is almost impossible for these people to keep their homes; all of this in spite of the fact that absolutely no improvements have been made. Who can afford improvements today?

Bones in the meat

In today's Independent, Press Telegram, the AP reports from Washington on something which I cannot stomach: "USDA may allow bone, odd scraps in meat products." And it follows that meat processors could add ground bits of bone and odd scraps of meat to hot dogs, salami and other processed meat under a new proposal announced Wednesday.

In the article there is a list of these scraps and in another paragraph there is this: "It is this product which USDA proposes letting processors use in hot dogs and other items up to a maximum of 20 per cent of the meat portion of the finished product."

Speaking for myself, I don't like it. I want my hot dog to have a label such as beef, pork, lamb. I like hot dogs. Kids all over the country like hot dogs. The article at the end has this information: "Public comments on the new proposal can be sent to the USDA hearing clerk, Room 1077, South Building, Washington, D. C. 20250 until Dec. 5."

A cop speaks out

Mr. Wright, have you ever been a police officer? If you haven't, sir, then you cannot even conceive of what it is like to put your own life on the line every day to protect the public. I am a police officer and damn proud of it. However, I am also a human being, and every time I think that I am risking my life (which is very valuable to me) for someone like you, I want to vomit.

You say that needless looting and killings are perpetrated by police officers. Do you have any hard, cold evidence regarding that allegation? I think not. Do you have any idea of the intense type of investigation that transpires after a police shooting? Well, I'll tell you, sir, that the police officer is presumed guilty until proved innocent. Ask any police officer and he'll tell you the same thing. Where are the policeman's civil rights, Mr. Wright?

If you were a police officer (God forbid) and were confronted in a dark alley by a felon armed with a sawed-off shotgun, what would you do? If you did anything other than defend yourself with the necessary force, you might as well kiss your—goodbye. The criminal is an animal, and understands nothing but force. After spending many millions of dollars and countless years of trying to rehabilitate them, the crime statistics of today skyrocket every year. And as long as there are people like you, Mr. Wright, who condone apathy towards criminals, don't be shocked or surprised if you are their next victim.

'Needed Prop. 20'

Your Wednesday letter by Ed Deal deserves a quick answer.

The man says the Long Beach public voted in favor of killing Prop. 20. Ah, but only because 45 percent of us were stupid at the time, lulled into that state by the honeyed words of past administrations about such as the Queen Mary that would bring world renown and vast riches to Long Beach, a Grand Prix on a track with a surface of gold for it would be a great success.

Now we know better. The lesson has been learned. And is this the same Ed Deal who at a zoning hearing assailed the League of Women Voters and called on the city to "defy" state laws that were voted in by the public — such as starting court action to kill the very law we need?

We are thankful now that Prop. 20 has prevented despoiling. And in the mid-60s they brainwashed us against it.

Doctors assailed

News item: "Foreign MDs blast national medical plans." In other words, those doctors from countries that pay them enough salaries are attempting to tell the average American that a U.S. national health plan will not pay them the lucrative salary they seek in our country in spite of the fact that our country now rates 16th regarding medical capability. The odd thing is that these foreign doctors have left their countries on their own, and motivation was not urged by the country from which they had come. It should come as no surprise to the average American that already we are besieged by money-seeking doctors whose motives have not been designed to share or improve, but the dollar was the goal. Isn't it time we the people demand more for the exorbitant fees we already pay the bloated medical profession?

16 injured as train jumps rail

SPENCER, N.C. (AP) — Sixteen passengers were injured Saturday when a Southern Railway train derailed in a switching yard, smashing into several freight cars sitting on an adjacent track.

Three persons were admitted to Rowan Memorial Hospital in nearby Salisbury. The rest were treated and released.

Southern Railway officials said 135 passengers were aboard the Southern Crescent, which was en route from Washington, D.C., to Atlanta and New Orleans.

Four engines, two baggage cars and nine passenger cars including the diner and lounge car were derailed, a spokesman said. None overturned, but one of the freight cars was knocked on its side.

Frank Gorshin's new impression: rich man

NEW YORK — Frank Gorshin climbed into his new $45,000 Rolls-Royce Silver Shadow and turned toward Greenwich, Conn. "I can't wait to get home and sit around in one of my 104 rooms," he said. "Seriously," he said, squirming there in his raincoat and looking a little like Jimmy Cagney, "I think it's 34 rooms. It's called Quarry Farm, and they say it furnished the stone for the foundation of the Statue of Liberty and the Brooklyn Bridge. What did it cost? ... $850,000." That, he admitted, "is a lot of impressions!"

GORSHIN wanted to get back to Broadway, back to N.Y. He's making faces in the country's hotels and nightclubs, and he's prosperous enough to hold on to a Mercedes-Benz that he figures is worth $30,000. He wishes that somebody would come along and offer him a good Broadway comedy because he thinks he isn't limited to doing impressions of Jimmy Cagney, Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and about 45 others.

"I'd been in California 20 years and I realized how dull and dry and uneventful it was," he said. "I got tired of that sun day after day. You miss not being mugged and not having blizzards, you know."

Maybe they'll come along with offers. He's already done a new RCA commercial for a video cassette recorder. He played Jimmy Walker in "Jimmy" in 1971, and it ran four months. "It was destroyed by the critics, but I loved it."

Gorshin, now 44, says that except for the "Jimmy" show, "I've never been asked to come to N.Y. for an audition." "I was for a while a kind of a bad boy," he admitted. "A little temperamental. I'd walk off stage and not show up for a bow if I didn't think everything was right. Later I realized I was being an ass. I was immature. I thought everybody would know that I had goofed on a line. Now I've learned to see the funny side of it."

ALTHOUGH he's recognized as "the Riddler" from the "Batman" TV series, here is a man who has never done a pilot for a TV series. "Maybe I should be proud of that, considering all those who do them and don't get them."

Recently he has added Jack Nicholson, Telly Savalas, Dustin Hoffman and Walter Matthau to his repertoire of impressions: "It has nothing to do with them being topical — it's just that I saw a way to do them. I like doing them."

"If I wanted, I could say, 'Hey, I'm tired of being an impressionist. I want to be an actor.' I'd stop. But I can't say that because I love them too much."

On the other hand, he knows that when his name comes up for a show or a picture, they say, "Yeah, Kirk Douglas ..."

"When you're so near the film industry as I was, it's really frustrating not to be in it. Maybe if I get away from it they'll come after me to do a series."

Gorshin comes from Pittsburgh and started out winning a talent contest that got him a week's work at Jackie Heller's Carousel for $150 a week at the age of 17.

Frank huddled in his raincoat and walked out to his Rolls in the rain. "I love this weather," he said as the rain poured down on his bare head. "People tell me I'm nuts."

The odd trio

WEEKEND windup ... Andrea ("Annie") McArdle's new family car carries the license plate ANNIE. ... Producer Ray Stark will follow "Good-bye Girl" with another Neil Simon script, "Chapter II." ... Martha "Missy" McMahon, daughter of Louise Campbell and the late actor Horace McMahon, makes her N.Y. debut in "Winter Sunshine," an off-Broadway show.

With the baseball season fading, Rusty Staub will be working at his N.Y.C. restaurant, Rusty's, all winter. ... Lionel Hampton's 12-album "Who's Who in Jazz" series will include a special tribute to Louis Armstrong.

Country singer Eddy Arnold will do a concert with the Memphis Symphony. ... Paperback companies are paying more than film companies for hot properties. Bantam shelved more than $1 million each for "Honorable Schoolboy," "Black Orchid" and "All Things Wise And Wonderful." ... Ex-basketballer Bill Bradley, 6-foot-plus-plenty, was asked who'd play him in a film version of his book "Life on the Run." "Probably," he said, "Dustin Hoffman."

TODAY'S WORST pun: Paul Schwartz of Brooklyn says his cousin should be on "Charles Angels": "She's a combination of

EARL'S PEARLS: A woman complained she'd bought some stockings she'd seen on TV: "They not only got runs — they got reruns."

That's Earl, brother.

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Now is the time to liquidate static resources, cash in on any windfall. The next nine months are for improving your material position, the last three for catching up on other areas of daily living, social life. Today's natives attract publicity for anything they choose to do. Those born this year will have a flair for dealing with crowds, practical enterprises. The ones born after 6:30 p.m. EDT should be in the performing arts, leave the financial end to experts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Meeting people halfway is easier; try your luck with a formidable encounter. Tonight go over ideas to refurbish your home; sleep on plans the family proposes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Contacts come alive when least expected, according to the mood you radiate. Peace, happiness are catching! Set dates for future times that now seem remote.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Once over lightly on family concerns, budgets; the main emphasis is on business. Taking the right attitude, pushing harder, advances you a notch up the ladder.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let group effort prevail. Opportunity is more a chance to practice than the real thing. Environmental effort is forced, steers you outside usual patterns.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your leadership is by good example rather than by use of power or anything tangible. Close down a mild workday at the earliest moment, indulge in daydreams.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A sense of detail leads to doing more than your fair share in today's observances. Friends should be but aren't much help. Emotional expression is exaggerated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on personal subjects. The fine touches, not big deals, are important, as many commercial contacts won't be available. Romance has its satisfactions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Time your moves. The shift is away from regular business, toward exceptions. Evening is like a vacation from most of your experience, possibly very happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): All you need is close at hand or on tap from connections nearby. Much work is involved; don't try shortcuts. Tonight is for light amusements or rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow up, make that brief journey or formal call. Applications, bids are favored. Leave heavy business for tomorrow. Celebrate, pursue mild pleasures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): News brings relief, so you can go to work in a lighter frame of mind. Persuade your people to have any problems or symptoms checked by competent practitioners.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The ideal now is to keep your life style simple while enjoying full self-expression. You may have to make firm emotional commitments to balance matters out.

Hal's best stunt: becoming a director

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

A year ago, Hal Needham couldn't get in the front offices of the major studios without a pass. Now the company heads are asking him to drop in any time and talk about making movies for them—name the terms.

"Smokey and the Bandit" made the difference. It seemed like another one of those Burt Reynolds vs. Redneck Sheriff movies, aimed at bolstering Universal's summer business in the South.

"Universal was happy when 'Smokey' did $21 million in 13 weeks in the Bible Belt," commented Reynolds. "Then it was released up North and grossed $19 million in four weeks. So it doesn't look like just another picture for the 'good ol' boys'."

"Smokey and the Bandit" proved to be Universal's biggest moneymaker since "Jaws" of two years ago, surpassing "Midway." The total theater gross through mid-September was $44.7 million.

The man most pleased by the "Smokey" hit is Needham, who directed it for his buddy Burt. After years of taking falls for stars and staging rip-roaring chases, stunt man Needham finally found himself in the spotlight.

"I'm enjoying it," he admitted. "I never had such a good time as I had making that picture. I may even make a good piece of change, because I've got 3 percent of the profits. But I'll tell you something, I would have paid Universal $100 a day for directing it. They could have had the whole thing."

Reynolds and Needham were back together this month on "The End," which Reynolds is directing for United Artists. Needham was staging a stunt of a car jumping over a truck—routine work for him. "I figure if Burt made me a director, the least I could do is film a stunt for him," he explained.

His talk has a Southern tinge to it, only natural for a boy who was born in Memphis. He grew up around cattle and cowboys, starting his pursuit of danger in the Army. He tested parachutes during the week and worked in stunt shows weekends. When his family moved to Santa Ana, he followed and sought work as a movie stunt man.

"You might say I fell right into it," he said. "My first job was wing-walking in 'The Spirit of St. Louis.' I was one of two guys in town at that time (1957) who could do it. I made $8,000 in three weeks—not bad when you consider I used to top trees for $1.05 an hour. But after 'The Spirit of St. Louis' then I couldn't get a job for nine months."

Needham worked extra and did odd stunts until he met Richard Boone "and handed him a sob story." He remained with Boone for seven years, performing the star's stunts in "Have Gun, Will Travel." He continued stunting and began staging action scenes as a second-unit director.

He first met Reynolds on the "Riverboat" series in 1959—"Burt did his own stunts, so I got paid $100 a day to watch him." They became close friends, and Needham doubled for Reynolds in his later movies, also staging action for "White Lightning," "Gator," and so on.

"Then I started thinking I was probably getting too old for stunts, and I thought I'd like to make my own pictures," Needham recalled. "At Christmas 1975, I started working on a script. Originally I wrote it about horses. I have 180 horses that I rent to the studios, and they hadn't been too busy."

Needham changed the plot to a race across Dixie, wrote the script in six weeks and showed it to Reynolds. The actor agreed to star in it; then Needham tried to sell the package to the studios. They'd buy the script and star but balked at a first-time director. Like Sylvester Stallone with "Rocky," Needham refused to sell unless he went along with the deal.

Finally producer Ray Stark liked the whole idea and took it to Universal. Needham shot the film on location in Georgia, hitting the $4.2 million budget right on the nose. Now the studios have submitted a score of scripts to Needham, and he has deals to direct "The Stunt Man" with Reynolds at Warner Brothers, plus two other films with Universal.

Is he content with his new career?

"No, I need another challenge. It's to be the first man to break the sound barrier on land. I've already raced my car 619 m.p.h., and I'm going to keep trying."

There's No Name Like an Old Nun Name

By Peter Gavrilovich
Knight News Service

DETROIT—We'll take a break from the news, guys and gals, to spin this hot Detroit hit—Tommy Sharp and the Sharpshines—"They Don't Make Nun Names (Like That No More)":

Sister Mary Contadina,
Sister Mary Argentina,
Sister Mary Guacamole,
Sister Mary Ravioli...

Now Tom Sharp, 29, is no heretic, understand. It's just that he grew up in parochial schools around the Detroit suburb of Dearborn and was somewhat saddened when he found a former nun teacher had changed her name to Sister Phyllis Williams.

That revelation hit him a year ago, so, armed with a flair for the creative—he's an advertising writer—Sharp penned some lyrics about the demise of nun names:

They don't make nun names

Like that no more;

No more cool nun names—

That's for sure...

Detroit radio personality Dick Purtan of station WXYZ began to play Sharp's tune as a gag in March. It caught on. So about a month ago Sharp formed a record company and made a recording. Now other stations, including top-40 CKLW in suburban Windsor, Ontario, are playing the disc, too. And at local Harmony House record stores Sharp's single is the No. 2 seller. ("The King Is Gone" by Ronnie McDowell is No. 1.)

Times have changed:

Nuns use their real names today;

But I miss those old nun names,

Sister Bob and Sister Ray...

Some nuns have heard it; most have heard about it.

"I felt it was humorous (although) a little bit disrespectful," said Sister Mary Ignatius, an art teacher at Mercy High in suburban Farmington.

"But so many of the names given to sisters were so ungodly hard, anyhow—you couldn't pronounce them!"

Sister Mary Incarnita,
Sister Mary Philomena,
Sister Mary Rutabaga,
Sister Mary Himalaya...

About a decade ago, Catholic nuns were allowed an option of taking religious names, usually after saints, or retaining their given names.

"Sister Mary Incarnita—the one on the record—is a good friend of mine," said Sister Mary Ann Szmania, a history teacher at Bishop Gallagher High School in suburban Harper Woods. "We got a couple copies of the record, and I sent one to her. She knew Tommy Sharp (when Sharp went to Sacred Heart High School in Dearborn). We used to call her Inky for short."

A spoken reminiscence on the record says: "Yeah, I remember my math teacher, Sister Mary Hypotenuse. . . In gym class it was Sister Mary Coach. . . My shop nun was Sister Mary Black & Decker. . . And of course the principal, Sister Mary Hermann Goering. Yeah, they don't make nun names like that no more. . ."

"I think it's funny. The teachers here are hysterical about it," added Sister Mary Ann. "We always knew we had nicknames on the side."

Sister Mary Angelori,
Sister Mary Cacciatore,
Sister Mary Isabella,
Sister Mary Mozarella...

Sharp thinks—and several nuns agree—that Detroit Catholic school kids who graduated in the late '60s will get a kick out of the song—it's something easy to relate to. He's going to try distributing the disc in other markets if it stays successful in Detroit.

What's Your Problem?

Put yourself in would-be renter's shoes to determine price

By Don G. Campbell
What's the "fair market price" of something. It's easy enough to figure: compute the costs of manufacturing, promotion, shipping and distribution and add a fair mark-up for the maker and the retailer. Presto! There it is... Right?
Now, scrap all of the above. Put the product on the market and see what someone will pay for it. There's the "fair market price."

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: How much rent should I charge for an upper apartment consisting of living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, no utilities and no garage?
I'm building a two-family house in the suburbs and will occupy the lower apartment of seven rooms and garage myself. The cost of the home is $83,000 with a $40,000 mortgage and $1,500 a year in real estate taxes. How do I figure it so the rent helps pay for the house? — Ms. M. W., Lackawanna, N.Y.

A. There are all sorts of exotic ways to figure out what you SHOULD be getting for the apartment, but it boils down to a far more simple equation: How much is a prospective tenant willing to pay for it?
The only way you can determine that is to study the market. Put yourself in the role of a would-be renter and answer ads (in person, not by phone) for apartments in comparable neighborhoods and with comparable facilities.

The newness of your unit is a plus. The lack of a garage is a minus. As long as you're in the process of building, it might be worthwhile to add a carport for the apartment.
DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: A friend is trying to talk me into going in with him on the purchase of a vacation home by the ocean. He says we can both use it for our vacations and then rent it out the rest of the time. He says the tax advantages (since it's an income property) are very attractive and that it is a great investment. What do you think? — W.S., Buffalo, N.Y.
A. It can be a good investment, but before you decide, check with a good tax attorney or Certified Public Accountant. Several tax changes last year have altered the ground rules a bit, so it's not as open-and-shut as it used to be. Since I don't know your present tax situation, it's impossible to be more specific.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: What do you think of a neighbor who builds a cinder block fence on our property line and paints only his side of it? He left my side unfinished and it's an ugly grey. — Mrs. J.G.M., San Diego.
A. If he's that kind of a neighbor, you are probably better off being separated from him by the fence. The simple solution is to buy a few gallons of paint and finish the job. After all, his investment is much greater than yours.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: There was a bad home fire near where I live recently, and it got me worried about the insurance on my personal belongings. Do insurance companies take inflation into account? — Mrs. H.K.O.C., Tucson, Ariz.
A. That's a good score on which to get worried. Rarely does a policy holder get around to updating his or her coverage, but it's something that should be done about every three years.
Some policies are available that have built-in escalator clauses to compensate for inflation, but more don't.
DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I know you have said that a single family home, as a rental, is a bad investment. Are there any exceptions to this? I'm thinking about doing it. — T.G.V., Allentown, Pa.

A. There isn't a rule in the world that doesn't have hundreds of exceptions.
It's not so much a BAD investment as it is that, normally, there are a lot more productive ones around. It's not quite the same thing.
If you live nearby (so you can keep an eye on the place), and if you're handy enough that you can do most of the maintenance work yourself, and if the rental market is good in your community, a single-family house can be a very satisfying investment.

Canyondale sales begun by mayor

The formal opening of Canyondale home was celebrated when Brea Mayor Rex D. Gaede and Mayor Pro Tem Sam Cooper assisted by Jon Konwiser and Charles Diamond, president and executive vice president respectively, cut a ribbon at the entrance to a furnished model home.

The three and four bedroom homes, some with den, are priced from $84,950 may be the least expensive new single-family, detached homes in Orange County.

Many of the features in Canyondale homes are usually found only in more expensive homes. Professionally designed landscaping with sprinkling system already installed in the front yard and fencing in the back yard. An interior atrium adds an airy, sun-splashed warmth to some homes.

HIKING TRAILS within Canyondale meander around the development and link-up with similar trails on adjacent property, making it possible to walk for miles in the rural atmosphere of the northeast Orange County countryside.

The interior of the homes is dominated by soaring, beamed ceilings which add dramatic emphasis to the handcrafted-masonry faced wood-burning fireplace and the entry with hand-set ceramic tile. Some homes also have a wet bar.

The homes which are up to 2064 square feet in living space, have 100 per cent nylon carpeting on all floors except baths and kitchens, where vinyl floor covering is installed.

Master bedrooms have separate dressing areas, walk-in closets and large wardrobes. In some bedrooms, a Cape Cod-like window design is complete with a cozy window seat.

Convenience in the kitchen is assured by the Hotpoint eye-level automatic electric self-cleaning oven, range and hood. Luminous ceilings, double-sink with disposer, Hotpoint "power-saver" dishwasher, stained hardwood cabinets and Corian countertops complete the practically designed kitchen. A nook adds space and warmth to most plans.

"ENERGY-SAVING insulation is built into all exterior walls and ceilings. Sliding glass doors and bronze-finish windows enhance the appearance of the homes. Also installed are automatic garage door openers and smoke alarms.

Two furnished model homes decorated by designer Beverly Thompson are open from 10:30 a.m. to dusk daily.

Canyondale is located on Brea Boulevard just north of State College Boulevard in Brea. New housing off

New housing starts in California decreased in August to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 250,000 units, Bank of America reported.

Rate was down 9.1 percent from 275,000 in July, but up 19 percent from August 1976's 210,000 starts.

Single-family units, bank economists said, continue to account for two-thirds of total state starts.

Woodside/Cerritos presents luxury single-family homes

Models are now completed and ready for visitors at Woodside/Cerritos, luxury single-family residential community of 96 homes at the northwest corner of 166th Street and Marquardt Avenue in Cerritos, reports James M. Peters, president of the Newport Beach homebuilding firm.

Decorated by Gary Donaldson & Associates of Irvine, five models have been prepared to display the three- to five-bedroom homes which include such features as separate nook eating areas off the kitchens, formal dining rooms, spacious family rooms and, in one plan, a 15 by 30 foot upstairs recreation center.

"DIFFERENT INTERIOR stylings from traditional country to contemporary have been developed to appeal to the sophisticated buyers for which these homes have been designed," stated Gary Donaldson, principal of the interior design firm. "Wood floors," batik prints, and natural tones accented by contrasting colors such as brandy, tobacco and persimmon have been used throughout to showcase these distinctive homes."

Priced from $92,990 to $127,490, the homes range in size from 1,831 to over 3,000 square feet of interior living space. With one- and two-story as well as split-level designs, the homes incorporate full separation of entertaining areas from other living and sleeping quarters. Each plan also features an attached two- or three-car garage with direct access from the house.

High vaulted ceilings and clerestory windows enhance the spaciousness of the rooms and provide additional natural lighting. Designed by the architectural firm of Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek of Newport Beach, the homes are highlighted by such dramatic features as formal entries of wood parquet or ceramic tile, sunken dining rooms or family rooms, wet bars, and wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighter valves.

KITCHENS ARE equipped with microwave ovens, self-cleaning electric ovens, gas cooktops, dishwashers and refrigerator areas plumbed for an ice maker. Luminous ceilings light the food preparation areas which have wide expanses of ceramic tile countertops and hand finished hardwood cabinetry.

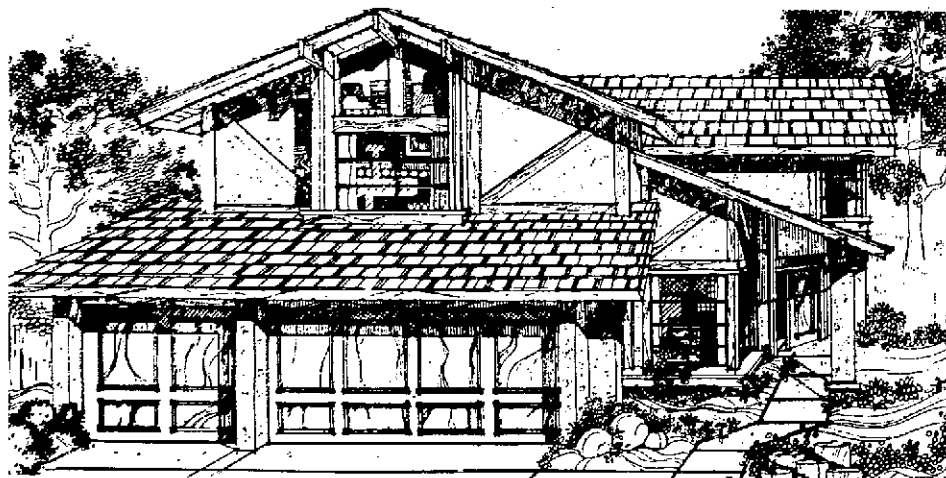

Fully air conditioned, the homes include such standard luxury appointments as plush wall-to-wall carpeting, china basins and Corian marble countertops in the baths, mirrored wardrobe doors in the master suites, and gas outlets for a future barbecue in the backyard patio areas.

WOOD SHINGLES or cedar siding, wood shake or tile roofs, massive wood trim and pot shelves emphasize the contemporary styling of the exteriors. All of the homes have concrete driveways and walks as well as concrete block side and rear yard fencing.

Midway between Los Angeles and central Orange County, Woodside/Cerritos is less than one mile from the Santa Ana Freeway and only two miles from the Artesia Freeway. Schools are within a one-mile radius and the area is dotted with community parks and recreation centers.

To visit the sales information center and just-completed model complex, take the Artesia (91) Freeway and exit at Carmanita. Drive north to 166th Street and then turn right to Marquardt Avenue. Woodside/Cerritos is at the corner of 166th Street and Marquardt Avenue in Cerritos.

Are compact houses coming next?

PR Newswire

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Will compact houses follow compact cars onto the American scene?

A Massachusetts Institute of Technology expert on housing says that many Americans may have to sacrifice luxury and settle for "basic" homes because of the skyrocketing costs of home ownership.

UNTIL NOW, according to Prof. Bernard J. Frieden, middle-class families have been reluctant to compromise their standards and buy homes that are smaller and less fully equipped than typical homes of the past few years. Instead they have been buying houses of higher quality each year, with "more space, larger lots, more bathrooms and bigger garages... central air-conditioning, fireplaces and built-in dishwashers."

"Perhaps, as Detroit's experience with compact cars suggests," Frieden writes in the fall issue of "Public Interest," "many people want certain products to be luxurious even if they must make great sacrifices to buy them."

Dr. Frieden, professor of city planning at MIT and former director of the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Urban Studies, said that simpler and cheaper houses have become available as some builders tried to cope with escalating prices by producing smaller houses with less elaborate equipment.

BUT DEMAND for these houses has proved to be weak, he said. They have sold no faster than more expensive homes and in many cases not even as fast. (He even cites the case of a Massachusetts builder who sold houses with two rooms unfinished, only to find that his customers promptly hired contractors to finish them.)

Frieden sees a change coming, however, because of the pressure of mounting costs.

As it becomes evident that new home prices are going to stay high (if not go higher), he says, many families who want a suburban home may reconsider what quality they need.

"In particular, with late child-birth and few children now the norm, families may decide that they can get by with fewer rooms than the large homes built in the early 1970s provided. If so, they should be able to buy newly built homes with fewer than seven rooms at a price saving, or they can buy a large home and rent out part of it," he adds.

Demand for "back-to-basics" homes also can be enhanced, he said, through increased attention to the design and furnishing of smaller houses in order to make them more attractive to the consumer.

Frieden, co-author of a widely circulated report on the status of American housing issued earlier this year by the MIT-Harvard Joint Center, says that middle-income Americans, particularly young families, have been using a number of strategies to cope with rising costs that have put a price tag of $50,000 on typical new homes.

Coventry sets introductions at three sites

Warmington Development Inc. marks a return to the custom-type homebuilding that launched its business in the 1920's with the opening this weekend of a new series of customized single family homes known as Coventry.

Coventry homes will be introduced simultaneously in La Costa, Cerritos and Shadow Run/Anaheim Peralta Hills.

The 520 homes, priced from $97,000 to $143,500, represent a move away from the Southern California "standard" Spanish and contemporary ranch style tract home to unique English Tudor, Cape Cod, and Colonial exteriors.

"We saw a demand for this kind of architecture and felt we were in an excellent position to build it because of our past experience," says Jim Warmington, president of the Irvine-based firm.

WARMINGTON'S SPECIAL emphasis on different architectural styling is reflected in the 16 individually detailed exterior elevations that feature a variety of roof lines, heavy wood beams accents front and rear, wood shake roofs, extensive use of wood textures, siding and masonry, bay windows and greenhouse windows (some plans), and unique window frame treatments.

Inside, these custom homes offer generous use of ceramic tile in the entry hall, kitchen and baths, a choice of 16 different fireplace designs including a unique wrap around double fireplace with a masonry wall, top quality decorator lighting fixtures and a choice of gas or electric appliances. Some plans also have tongue and groove vaulted ceilings.

Coventry homes, which offer from about 2,000 to 3,000 square feet of living space, come in a choice of four one and two-story floorplans with three, four or five bedrooms, up to three baths and 2, 2½, 3 or 3½ car garages.

"WE LIKE TO THINK that with our new Coventry homes, we are building the custom-loaded home move-up buyers of today have always dreamed of," Warmington says.

Warmington feels that many of these move-up buyers, who have a great deal of equity in their present homes and whose salaries have increased markedly over the years, will be willing to pay for the extra features Coventry homes provide.

An additional 300 of the Coventry series homes are planned for the future in such areas as Orange and Yorba Linda.

Well-appointed models, decorated by Carol Eichen, are open at each site.

TO REACH ANAHEIM Peralta Hills homes, take the Imperial Highway exit of the Riverside Freeway, follow Imperial Highway to Santa Ana Canyon Road, turn right on Santa Ana Canyon, then left on Royal Oak Road. The sales office is located at 395 South Avenida Margarita.

Coventry La Costa is easily reached by exiting the San Diego Freeway at the La Costa Avenue exit south of Carlsbad in San Diego County. Follow La Costa east for approximately four miles to Cadencia Street and turning left on Cadencia.

The sales office is located at 3219 Tosca Street in Carlsbad.

Coventry homes in Cerritos may be reached from the Artesia Freeway by exiting at Carmanita Avenue and going south on Carmanita to South Street and turning right on South Street.

The sales office is located at 12800 E. South St.

Woodbridge to 5th phase

Ground has been broken for the fifth phase of Woodbridge Estates, located in The Irvine Co.'s Village of Woodbridge.

A project of Irvine Pacific, the homebuilding division of The Irvine Co., the 48 homes in the phase will be open for sale in January, 1978, according to Frank E. Hughes, president of Irvine Pacific.

WOODBRIDGE ESTATES, created specifically for young professional couples and small families, are two- and three-home clusters designed to resemble single estate-style mansions.

The five floor plans, containing 1,520 to 2,296 square feet, are set back approximately 50 feet from the street and feature private entries and large back yards. The one- and two-story homes offer 17 different exteriors in traditional styles such as Tudor, Country French, Cape Cod and Colonial.

The interiors, created by Beverly Hornbeak, feature fireplaces and spacious master bedroom suites. Other amenities in one or more models include two-story entries, curved stairways, bay windows and sunken oval tubs.

Woodbridge Estates is one of nine different housing projects by eight different builders under construction in the Village of Woodbridge, a planned community by The Irvine Company. The homes in the fifth phase are scheduled for occupancy in early summer 1978.

The Village of Woodbridge is located off Culver Dr. at Warner between the San Diego and Santa Ana freeways. For further information call (714) 552-3700 or visit the Woodbridge Estates sales office between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily.

VARIATIONS IN EXTERIOR styles include the use of wood shingles and rough-sawn wood siding combined with stucco at the new single-family residential community of Woodside/Irvine. Set in the Village of Northwood, the new development of 202 homes is being built by the J. M. Peters Co. of Newport Beach.

Woodside/Irvine offers five plans; price from $114,990

Reservations were filled for the first phase of 29 homes during the preview opening of the new single-family homes at Woodside/Irvine, a community of 202 homes in the Village of Northwood being developed by the J. M. Peters Co.

During the preview phase of the three to five bedroom homes, with 2½ or 3 baths, prices began at $114,990. Handsome split-level and two story designs continue the traditional Woodside values of spacious interiors, architectural distinction and efficient function.

"Since first introducing the series in Fountain Valley and Lake Forest, we have constantly refined the spatial relationships, because even in two years, homebuyers have expanded their requirements of a new home," stated Jim Peters, president of the Newport Beach-based homebuilding firm.

Ranging in size from 2,177 to 2,995 square feet, the five different floorplans display vaulted ceilings, a sunken family room, pub-style wet bar, lavish master bedroom suites, and a bonus room as variations. Dramatic double door entries introduce each plan and residents will have direct access to attached two or three car garages.

A WOOD-BURNING fireplace is standard in each home, and quality materials are used throughout. Hardwood kitchen cabinetry, ceramic tile countertops, cast iron tubs, and ceramic tile or wood parquet flooring in the entry contribute to the enduring value of the homes.

Variations in the exterior styles, designed by Bates-Baseman-Pekarek, Architecture and Land Planning of Newport Beach, create an interesting streetscape and maximize individuality of the homes. A total of 15 elevations are available for homebuyers. The heavy use of wood shingles and rough-sawn wood siding combined with stucco and the accents of massive wood timbers and posts create a warm and natural look to the residential exteriors.

Devonwood homes

A close-to-the-beach location combined with nearby recreation facilities is part of the appeal of the new Devonwood Estates community in Fountain Valley according to developers, G.F. Goeden and Co.

Just a few miles from Huntington Beach State Beach and Park, the Devonwood Estates homes are just a short lob to the new Fountain Valley Tennis Club.

The $15 million community will be composed of 103 custom homes, priced from $129,950. Floorplans offer from 2,272 to 3,525 square feet of living space in one and two-story arrangements with from three to five bedrooms. All lots are 7,200 feet or more.

AMONG THE price-included features are microwave ovens, mirror wardrobe doors in master suites, intercoms, two masonry fireplaces and ceramic tile for entries, baths and kitchens.

The sales office is open from 10 a.m. to dusk and may be reached via the San Diego Freeway to Brookhurst, south on Brookhurst to Garfield, then left (west) to Devonwood.

'Let's fix this one instead of buying new one...'

Home handymen now doing half of remodeling, additions

By Wayne Markham
Knight News Service

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Millis went shopping for a bigger house about the time their family started to grow.

But steep price tags and locations 20 miles farther away from town convinced them to take a second look at their small house, closer in.

They opted to remodel and expand their living space — an economic choice for growing numbers of consumers facing record housing costs.

"It's the same old story — costs," says a general contractor who has watched his remodeling business triple in the past year.

"PEOPLE PAID a small price for their home a couple years ago and when they think about selling and moving up, they suddenly realize how much it's going to cost," notes John Dec, owner of a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., construction company.

"For many people, it's more economical to remodel what they've got," he adds.

That was the same conclusion reached by Millis, who bought a small, 1,200-square-foot home seven years ago — expecting to sell it and move up as his family grew.

Months of do-it-yourself weekends and evenings later, the Millises doubled their living space, adding two bedrooms, rooftop sun-deck and other amenities to their 30-year-old house.

The cost? Roughly half of what it would have cost them to buy a new house of equal size with the same amenities.

"A lot of people find they are being priced out of the new housing market," said Raymond LaCombe, vice president and chief economist for First Federal Savings and Loan of Miami.

"AND A LOT of these people are opting to improve their existing house rather than go out farther and farther to find new housing they can afford," he adds.

The Millises started with a small house, built in 1926, that had a garage on the ground floor and living quarters upstairs. They finished off the garage as living room and kitchen, turning the upstairs into two bedrooms and bath.

When they decided to start a family, do-it-yourselfer Millis decided to start expanding the house — but only after he and his wife shopped new homes and got turned out by "$100,000 price tags" and locations far outside of town.

"THAT HEAVY work included pouring concrete himself for all three stories, setting beams in the ceiling, doing rough plywood for floors (which were later tiled), and doing his own roofing.

Millis contracted out the finish work — things like heavy Spanish stucco work on the inside walls, finish carpentry around door frames and cabinets.

With solid timber four-by-twelve's, double-studded walls and hand-plastering, the finished product boasts the custom look of building methods of 20 years ago, Millis notes. And, by doing the rough work himself, he enjoyed the savings of a do-it-yourself project besides.

Do-it-yourself activity has shown significant growth in national remodeling trends.

"Do-it-yourself spending as a portion of total spending (for remodeling) has climbed steadily during the last seven years," notes Joe Reppert, marketing vice president at Miami First Federal.

QUOTING FROM a recent Department of Commerce study of the home remodeling market, Reppert notes that in 1970 only 40 percent of the remodeling jobs were tackled by the home handyman. Today, that figure has climbed to 50 percent.

Expenditures for home remodeling rose 70 percent in the same period, Reppert adds. Home remodeling activity last year reached a record $29 billion in the U.S., with $11.4 billion of that in maintenance and repairs, and $17.6 billion for construction improvements.

There is no easy price guide to home remodeling projects. A simple carport or garage enclosure-turned-bedroom can cost $500 or less, depending on how much work the homeowner tackles himself and how fancy the finished product must look. Adding a 10-by-12 bedroom-bath combination, for instance, can cost $3,000 to $3,240 if all labor is hired out.

Kitchen and bath remodelings are the most expensive, because they usually involve extensive plumbing and electrical changes — both items generally beyond the skills of the do-it-yourselfer. And in most areas both things require building permits and inspection from local building departments.

Rossmoor plan gets approval

PR Newswire

LAGUNA HILLS — Consent of the California Public Utilities Commission has been obtained to the distribution of common stock of Laguna Hills Utility Co., a subsidiary of Rossmoor Corp. (AMEX). Ross M. Cortese, chairman of Rossmoor, announced.

This will enable Rossmoor to complete the previously announced spin-off of common stock of both Laguna Hills Utility Co. and Rossmoor Construction Corp., another of Rossmoor's subsidiaries, the terms of which were approved last week by the shareholders.

vital for the protection of the current owner and any future one.

A small kitchen remodeling involving no new appliances, but new cabinets, lighting, ceiling treatment and flooring, costs anywhere from $2,000 to $2,500.

SMALL BATH remodelings, where plumbing fixtures are being changed, costs $1,000 even for simple facelifts, not counting any structural alterations or moving electrical or plumbing lines.

Retrofitting the bathroom, for example, costs $200 to $300, the cheapest porcelain and steel tub costs $125 to $200 (not including installation); new toilets can be purchased for $60 to $70 plus $50 for labor to install them.

(It's a good idea to get the experts to install a new toilet because of the difficulty in seating the waste drains properly.)

A popular — and relatively inexpensive — way to remodel existing, small bedrooms involves cutting an opening in one wall to visually open up the room. Installing a sliding glass door (cost $125 to $150) and a privacy fence outside ($300 to $500) creates a garden room look in a previously outdated bedroom. Since structural changes are kept to a minimum, the costs are relatively low.

"Even though many people want to buy a new house, they don't want to pay that higher rate and many decide to fix up what they've got," Hamilton adds.

For many families, it's the desire to own a home weighed against record prices that lead to remodeling projects.

Interior updating, new space planning and other remodeling projects have become popular with owners of townhouses and condominium apartments, too.

Mr. and Mrs. C.W. (the couple asked anonymously) decided to spend money fixing up their two-bedroom townhouse in Kendalltown (a Miami subdivision) rather than move to larger quarters.

They added built-in furniture, updated their entry and created living space outdoors with a screened-in patio that has a built-in barbecue, a fish pond and lots of greenery.

"WE DIDN'T need a bigger house, what we wanted to do was make more use of the space we already have," notes Mrs. W., a manufacturer's representative for a large furniture company.

And since the young couple completed their townhouse remodeling, four neighbors have started on similar projects in their immediate area.

"More and more people are deciding to remodel townhouses," observes architect Diego Saez, who with his partner David Pacetti, worked on the townhouse updating for the Kendalltown family.

"Fully 90 percent of the townhouses built here all end up pretty much the same; there's a desperate need for owners to change the character of the living space, to call it their own," Saez adds.

N'wood location big plus

Some of the distinctive homes of Northwoods/Cerritos, a select grouping of just 21 single-family residences are still available despite a brisk sales pace, according to Dave Frear, vice president for land acquisitions for Northwoods Construction Co. Inc., the builder.

Northwoods/Cerritos homes have great appeal to buyers who want a quality home in a good neighborhood with a central location.

The one and two-story homes, priced from $84,950, have three distinctive floorplans offering a choice of three or four bedrooms with from 1,500 to 2,230 square feet of living space.

EACH OF the homes has a masonry, wood-burning fireplace, vaulted ceilings, ceramic tile entry, wall-to-wall carpeting and a generous family room.

Each home's master bedroom suite has a walk-in or full-wall closet and private bath with cultured marble pullmans, ceramic tile tub surrounds, deluxe vanity mirrors and flow-control shower outlets.

Exteriors are detailed in wood, wood shake and shingle roofs, concrete driveways and double-strength glass.

To reach the onsite sales office, take the Artesia/Riverside Freeway (91) to the Carmanita Exit, and go south on Carmanita to South Street.

Security has approval of Park Place buyers

Security gate entry to the new residential development of Park Place—Cerritos has won the approval of new homebuyers, according to Richard K. Tamura, director of sales and marketing for Ponderosa Homes, a leading Southern California homebuilder.

"Comments have been uniformly complimentary on this security feature which provides more protection for children by limiting the amount of through-traffic and reducing unnecessary congestion in the community," said Tamura. "Guests can easily be admitted and residents have their own private card for entry."

ANOTHER COMMUNITY feature receiving favorable attention is the extensive recreational facilities within the boundaries. Three tennis courts, a swimming pool and therapy spa, sand volleyball courts, basketball courts and a clubhouse are tentatively approved for Park Place.

Three and four bedroom homes with 2 or 2½ baths are priced from $91,990 with five different floorplans and fifteen exterior elevations offered to new homebuyers. Now selling homes in the first phase, only twenty of these prime residences remain available at the Phase One prices.

New Park Place homes are located across the street from the 53-acre Cerritos Regional Park at 195th Street and Bloomfield. Park facilities include a 5½ acre lake, 14 lighted tennis courts, a 16,200 square foot community clubhouse, baseball diamond and 3 multi-purpose fields. Swimming and training pools are also part of the completed recreational facilities in the park.

The close-in location of the homes to major employment centers is a recognizable asset and with the additional benefits of at-home recreation and the 83-acre park in the neighborhood, Park Place is attractive for family-oriented living. All homes include rear and side yard fencing, all plans have a well-designed family room featuring a wood-burning fireplace, and one plan has a large bonus room with a wet bar.

ONE AND TWO story homes have attached two-car garages with some designed for an optional three-car garage. Wood shake roofs are standard. Heavy use of wood siding and detailing distinguish the exteriors of the handsome residences.

To reach the newest site of Park Place homes, exit the Artesia Freeway at Bloomfield and drive south to South Street where a sales trailer is located for current information. Furnished models are located at the corner of Studebaker and 166th Street in Cerritos. Sales representatives are at the site daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Champagne rains on Dodgers, 4-1

By Gordon Verrell

PHILADELPHIA — When they hoist the 1977 National League pennant high over Dodger Stadium, remember it as one the Dodgers won on FRIDAY afternoon, in the ninth inning, when they pulled the carpet out from under the Phillies in that shocking 6-5 victory.

No matter what they say, the Phillies still were in a state of shock Saturday night, enabling the Dodgers to do a little Pennsylvania Polka on their way to a stunning 4-1 victory, the National League championship and, now, the World Series.

The victory assures each Dodger roughly $12,000.

In the bedlam of the Dodgers' clubhouse, Steve Garvey said it quietly and simply:

"We won the playoffs the same way we won all season," he said, "with consistency."

He might have added with Tommy John and Dusty Baker, too. Baker shot the Dodgers into a 2-0 lead in the second inning with his second playoff homer and, because of it, he was selected the most valuable player of the series.

John steadfastly refused to buckle under to the ear-splitting shrieks of the 64,924 Veterans Stadium fans, the largest, and noisiest, baseball crowd in Pennsylvania history and the steady downpour which left the Phillie fans wet and disappointed.

John struck out pitching rival

Steve Carlton with the bases loaded in the second inning and whiffed Carlton again in the fourth, when the Phils got their only run, this time leaving runners at first and third.

After that, the Phils were flat. And so was the big crowd.

Series tickets

After the Dodgers won the National League pennant Saturday night in Philadelphia, they announced that reserved general admission and a limited number of box seats for the World Series games at Dodger Stadium will go on sale Monday at 10 a.m. at all Ticketron and Mutual outlets only.

The World Series games at Dodger Stadium will be played Friday (5:15 p.m.), Saturday (1:15 p.m.) and, if necessary, Sunday (1:15 p.m.).

Limit will be two tickets per person. The reserved general admission tickets are priced at $8 each and the box seats are priced at $15 each.

"em up," said John, "than to strike out a guy in a key spot."

If John's perfection on the mound didn't leave the fans limp, the steady rain did. It began shortly before the start of the game and never ceased.

N.L. president Chub Feeney said the rain "did not effect the play of the game. About the third inning, Bruce (plate umpire Bruce Froemming) said it was tough to see and he wanted to stop the game. But the Phillie players said they wanted to continue."

SC 'Bearly' falls short

By Loel Schrader
Staff Writer

It happens all the time—an invincible football team eventually gets vanquished.

But top-ranked USC went down kicking and screaming Saturday before a live crowd of 63,140 at the Coliseum and a national television audience of millions.

Trailing by 15 points with 9½ minutes remaining, the Trojans stormed for two touchdowns, but a two-point conversion attempt went awry with 35 seconds remaining to permit seventh-rated Alabama to escape with a 21-20 victory.

The defeat snapped USC's 15-game winning streak, longest in the nation among major colleges.

"I think we got a little help from upstairs," sighed 'Bama coach Bear Bryant in the Crimson Tide's steamy locker room. "We were lucky to get out of it. I've never seen a team come back so strong as they did."

Perhaps the Tide did receive some breaks along the way, but it created plenty of its own with a well-conceived defense that stopped USC's heretofore high-powered running game. Trojan tailbacks Charles White and Dwight Ford were restricted to 85 yards by such quick Alabama defenders as Rich Wingo, Barry Krauss, Wayne Hamilton and Mike Kramer.

BRYANT ALSO discovered some soft spots in the Trojans' defense in the second half when the Tide scored all its points, including two touchdowns in 58 seconds.

USC coach John Robinson said he didn't give consideration to kicking for a tie when the Trojans pulled within a point of Alabama on Lynn Cain's one-yard blast off tackle with 35 seconds left.

"I couldn't have come in here and looked at my team if I had gone for a tie," said Robinson, who seemed distraught by what had transpired on the floor of the Coliseum. "You play to win the game, and I don't care if that's sound reasoning or not."

Bryant agreed. "I would have gone for two points if I'd have been in Robinson's position. The game was tied when it started, and I guess he just didn't want it to end that way."

It might have worked except for a blitz put on by defensive end

Hamilton. He broke through Rob Hertel's wall of protection, grabbed the USC quarterback's legs, forcing him to throw wildly toward Tatupu near the goal-line.

But linebacker Barry Krauss intercepted the pass to end USC's hopes for a miracle comeback.

"He (Hamilton) got in there so fast he obscured my vision," said Hertel. "We thought they would double-cover Simmrin, and I guess they did. But I couldn't see where to throw the ball and then I got grabbed around the legs."

Guy who? UCLA loses to sub QB

By Gary Rausch
Staff Writer

STANFORD — A junior quarterback with virtually no game experience and a freshman running back many schools didn't want brought Stanford a dramatic revival to its football program Saturday afternoon.

Sieve Dils, called on to replace injured Guy Benjamin, had fans asking "Guy who?" after completing 24 of 37 passes for 287 yards and one touchdown in a 32-28 squeaker over UCLA.

Darrin Nelson, a mini-back at 5-9 and 170 pounds, darted for 189 yards on 23 trips around, over, under, and through the Bruin defense. That's the third highest rushing total in Cardinal history and the first time a Stanford freshman has topped the century mark.

A CROWD of 64,500 sun worshippers saw what longtime Memorial Stadium observers were calling one of the most exciting games in Stanford history.

It didn't start out that way at all. It looked like a runaway with UCLA left at the gate.

The Bruins were 16-0 deep into the second quarter on Ken Naber's 20-yard field goal and touchdown runs of 31 and 3 yards by Nelson and runningmate Phil Francis.

They rallied for a 16-14 deficit behind Theotis Brown's 75-yard run and a five-yard dash by James Owens, but Naber, another freshman, pushed the margin to 19-14 with a 22-yard field goal right before intermission.

Then the lead flip-flopped like a fish out of water.

UCLA finally got the advantage, 21-19, on freshman Freeman McNeil's 78-yard burst 5:55 into the second half and only two plays after Naber missed from the 42.

NELSON scored from the 4 (Stanford 25-21) late in the third period.

Frank Corral, playing for the first time since suffering a broken jaw in the season opener, missed a 42-yard field goal as the final, hectic period began.

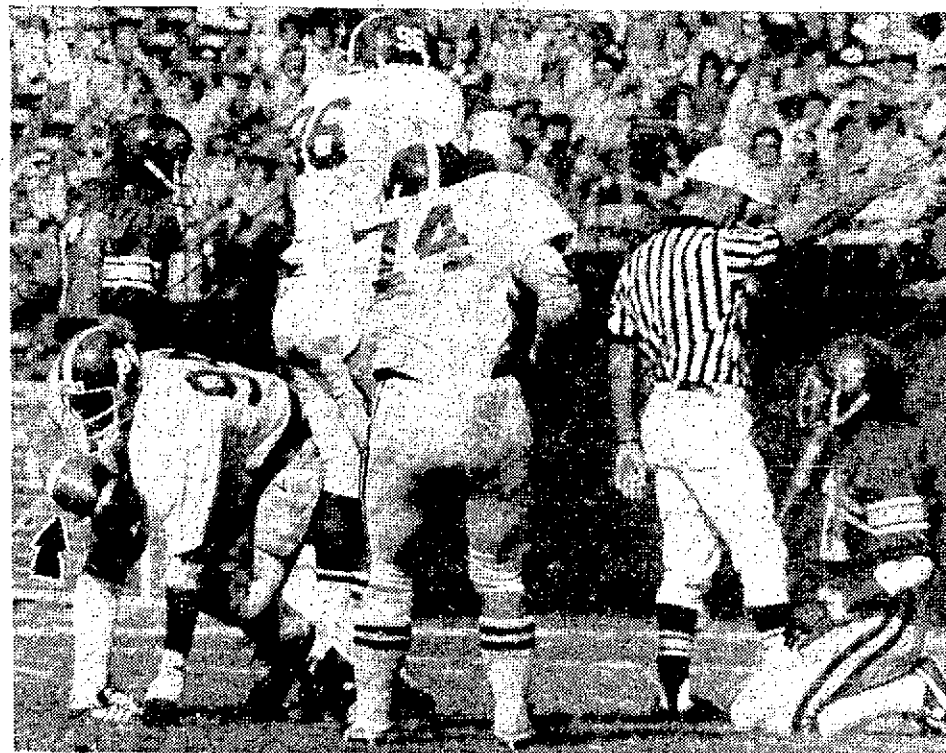

Nelson reeled off an unbelievable 35-yard run to the UCLA 15 midway through the stanza, but a bad snap from center nullified Naber's 35-yard field goal attempt.

With less than four minutes remaining, UCLA quarterback Rick Bashore found flanker Homer Butler with a 22-yard bullet to the Stanford 22, a daring third-and-11 play. Two plays later Bashore found Brown alone with a short check-off pass. Corral's kick made it 28-25 UCLA's favor.

But there were still 2:20 to play and anybody who has ever watched a Stanford quarterback dissect an enemy secondary in a short span knew the Bruins were in trouble. It took the deft Dils only six plays to negotiate 80 yards.

He went seven yards himself on first down, hit tight end Mitch Pleis for four more and a first down at the Cardinal 31. Nelson went inside left tackle for two and then Dils and flanker James Lofton connected on the play of the day.

Tapie retains lead in QM Open golf

By Doug Ives
Staff Writer

Ray Arrino is the only golfer to win a paycheck in every Queen Mary Open Golf Tournament.

The 6-3, 210-pounder from Sacramento will win another one today and it could be the Big One if he even comes close to his sensational performance Saturday at El Dorado.

The 30-year-old rookie touring pro matched the course record with a blistering 8-under-par 64, moving him from a tie for 27th place into a deadlock for second heading into the wrapup round today.

Alan Tapie of Irvine is the man he will have to catch, and at least another five touring pros probably will have to be reckoned with, too, as the six-year-old, $30,000 tournament appears destined for another exciting finish.

There have been sudden-death playoffs the last two years.

Tapie, 28, kept his lead with a 3-under-par 69, giving him a 54-hole total of 207, 9-under-par. Six-under won the event last year.

Arrino is one off the pace at 208, tied with tour veteran Jack Ewing of Capistrano Beach. Ewing, 32, took the lead at 10-under with three successive birdies on the incoming nine but bogeyed two of the last five holes.

3rd-string QB leads Texas to 13-6 win

DALLAS (AP) — Forgotten quarterback Randy McEachern watched last year's Texas-Oklahoma football game from the press box, where he spotted for a radio network, but he bounced off the bench Saturday to inspire the fifth-ranked Longhorns to a 13-6 upset of second-ranked Oklahoma.

Third-string McEachern was such an unknown quantity that he was not even listed in Texas' media guide. The redshirt junior had never lettered in his injury-plagued career.

But injuries felled Texas' first two quarterbacks and McEachern displayed all the aplomb of a hardened veteran and may have earned himself a battlefield letter.

"Sure, I was scared," said McEachern, whose timely passing set up tailback Earl Campbell's devastating runs.

He said: "This was pretty nerve-wrecking. Coach (Freddy) Akers told me to be ready after our first quarterback went down, but I didn't think the second one would go down."

"I really didn't know what to think when he did. I never played

Yanks win; decider in KC today

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY — The New York Yankees have forced the American League playoffs to a winner-take-all fifth game today, but they are still grumbling in the Yankee clubhouse.

Sparky Lyle, New York's rubber-armed reliever, bailed the Yankees out with 5 1-3 innings of two-hit relief Saturday that saved a 6-4 victory and tied the best-of-five series at 2-2 and forced the do-or-die game.

But that wasn't enough to make the men in pinstripes smile. Manager Billy Martin is upset before Yankee officials gave his wife, daughter and son-in-law inferior seats for the playoff. And center fielder Mickey Rivers has asked to be traded.

"I've been a little disgusted with Gabe (club president Gabe Paul) up in the office and it has had an effect on my play," said Rivers. "It hasn't helped the cause, it's just made it worse. I don't appreciate that, no way, and I want to leave."

RIVERS, who had a double and three singles to lead the Yankee attack, said the problem had nothing to do with his contract. "I can't force a trade but I'm going to apply for it," said the former Angel.

It is the second year in a row the Yankees and Royals have gone to five games in the AL playoffs. New York's Lou Piniella, a former Royal, thinks the memory of last year's nightmarish ninth-inning loss will hurt the Royals.

LBCC tramples East L.A. in Metropolitan opener

By Jim Mangan

Long Beach City College ran its record to 4-0 Saturday with a 43-0 win over East Los Angeles in a Metropolitan Conference opener before 1,800 onlookers in the losers' stadium.

Nine different Vikings contributed to the point total as coach Marly Shaughnessy reached deep into his reserves.

Starting quarterback Samoa Samoa suffered an ankle injury as the first quarter ended, and reserves Gary Dworshak and Brian Fulbright directed the rest of the 453-yard Long Beach attack. Despite the varied approach to scoring the game frequently dragged as the officials whistled 21 penalties.

Millikan High had twice as many first downs and more than doubled its opponent in total yardage Saturday night.

Pedersen for two touchdown passes, won its fourth successive game of the 1977 season with a 13-7 decision at Garden Grove.

Millikan, which had won two in a row and shut down Westminster thoroughly last week, is now 2-2.

The Rams had an 18-7 advantage in first downs, a 289-167 total offense margin and limited the Cavaliers to only 68 yards rushing.

So much for the good news. Dick DeHaven's team also lost three fumbles — all in the first half — and had two passes picked off.

Two of the bobbles were especially costly, stopping drives at the Santiago 1 and 11-yard lines. Another march was repulsed at the 13 on fourth down.

Mind you, all this came in the first 17 minutes of play.

Santiago nursed a 6-0 lead through three quarters, made another gallant stand, this time at midfield to begin the fourth period, then got its second TD before Millikan could get on the scoreboard.

Compton, a fill-in the last two games since Dean Diaz was hurt, went to Pedersen on plays covering 36 and 27 yards.

The first, 4:45 into the first quarter, followed a Rene Reza interception of a Al Hawkins pass.

Fresno St. ends SDS win streak

Pedersen, probably Sanitago's best player, made an over-the-shoulder catch of a perfectly thrown pass at the 5.

Santiago had only one other first down in the first half as Millikan, despite 78 yards in passing by Hawkins and another 62 rushing by Fred Moore in that span, fell victim to its own mistakes.

Santiago's best drive of the night covered 53 yards, Pedersen streaking between Ram defenders Mike Schaich and Greg Johnson on a TD play covering 27 yards with 6:55 to play in the fourth quarter.

The Rams, behind six successive completions by Hawkins, scored their only touchdown on a plunge from the one on fourth down by Tyrone Mitchell with only 2:51 remaining.

Santiago, with Compton getting nine yards on a fourth down quarterback sneak at the Ram 36, was then able to run out the clock.

Moore was the game's leading rusher with 69 yards, but had only seven after intermission.

Five of Compton's seven completions went to Pedersen for 85 yards. They have combined for four TDs in the last three games.

Jabar hits 27 in win

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Kareem Abdul Jabbar poured in 27 points Saturday night to lead the Lakers to a 115-104 exhibition victory over the Portland Trail Blazers in the nightcap of a National Basketball Association double-header.

Seattle dumped Golden State 104-86 in the first game.

The setback for Portland ended a 20-game home winning streak that reached back to eight games of last year's regular season.

FRESNO (AP) — Quarterback Dean Jones ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third Saturday night to lead Fresno State to a 34-14 upset of San Diego State, ending the Aztecs' 10-game football winning string.

Jones rushed for 102 yards on 11 carries, including touchdown

Kings unbeaten with 4-2 win

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Kings closed their National Hockey League exhibition schedule with an unbeaten record Saturday night with a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota North Stars on a three-goal flurry ignited by Butch Goring.

The Los Angeles center scored at 14:59 of the second period on a power play with assists going to Marcel Dionne and Gary Sargent.

In 61 seconds, Dave Schultz made it 2-1 for the Kings and Lorne Stampler, assisted by Sargent and Goring, boosted the Kings to a 3-1 edge at 17:43.

Larry Brown rounded out the Kings scoring in the third period. Pierre Jarry, in the first period, and Bill Fairbairn, in the third, scored goals for the North Stars.

The Kings closed their out exhibition record at 5-0-3 and the North Stars concluded theirs at 4-2-2.

Stanford stuns UCLA, 32-28

sped down the right sideline. Cornerback Levi Armstrong was with him, step for step, and safety Kenny Easley was coming strong in support.

All three leaped for the ball at the Bruin 27.

"I intercepted the ball," said Easley, "but lost it as I came down. The ball fell to the ground and he (Lofton) fell on top of it and quickly rolled over and elbowed the ball to the official."

Armstrong agreed with his teammate. "No way the ball was caught. It happened right in front of Stanford's bench and those guys were as shocked as we were when he (the official) called it complete."

Dils threw incomplete on first down, but went to Lofton again the next play. Again he drew Arm strong and Easley.

"Kenny popped him, but he didn't hold him," said Armstrong. "I was going for the tackle, too, but when Kenny hit him, Lofton got knocked around me."

THE RESULT was the winning touchdown with only 37 seconds to play.

"I thought he'd fall. I really did," said the distraught Easley. "I should have played it conservatively and wrapped him up, but I was more interested in breaking up the pass."

The Bruins drove from their own 27 to the Stanford 24 in the closing seconds. Owens went into the middle for 9 with 12 ticks left, but UCLA had wasted a timeout two plays into the third period and never got the clock stopped.

"A field goal wouldn't have helped us that much," said a grim-faced Terry Donahue. "We gambled that we could pop James (Owens) loose on a trap. Another yard and we would have had the first down, the clock would have stopped and we would have thrown out of bounds on the next play. Then we'd have thrown for the touchdown."

Despite having only four first downs and 163 yards total offense at intermission, UCLA acquitted itself well. However, the 408 yards total offense paled alongside Stanford's 552.

"That was our best offensive effort against the best defense we've played," praised Cardinal head coach Bill Walsh. "We've been behind in every game this year. We came from behind twice and beat a very good UCLA team."

"UCLA has dominated Stanford in football for years. After today we expect to play them head to head every year."

YANKS—

"We beat them in Game Five last year," said Piniella. "They know it and we know it. That will work in our favor."

So, too, will Lyle—if needed. He was the last dependable pitcher available in the Yankee bullpen Saturday, and he'll be back there again Sunday night when Ron Guidry, who pitched on Thursday, starts for New York against the Royals' Paul Splittorff.

But how many innings could he pitch only one day after Saturday's lengthy stint?

"Oh, five or six," said Lyle. Then he assured newsmen that he wasn't kidding about that. "I'm serious," he said. "I pitch better when my arm is a little tired. You can't muscle a slider. It straightens out. The more I pitch, the more effective I am."

ROYALS manager Whitey Herzog agreed.

"Sparky Lyle was amazing," he said. "He pitched last night and then came back and did a job on us. Actually, he had better stuff in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings that he had earlier. I thought we'd get him in the late innings, but he was simply amazing."

Lyle knew when he came into the game in the fourth inning that, realistically, there was no one left behind him in New York's injury-thinned bullpen.

"He didn't say anything," Lyle said of his conversation with Yankee Manager Billy Martin when he got to the mound. "But I knew he was hoping I could finish."

"This was the game," he said. "If we didn't do it today, we go home, so there was no sense in my not going that long if I could."

Lyle permitted just two hits and shut off a Royal comeback that nearly wiped out an early 4-0 Yankee lead. It was a great clutch performance by Lyle, who led the American League by pitching in 72 games and had a piece of 39 of New York's 100 regular-season victories with 13 wins and 26 saves.

Using his slider and some tight New York defense, the left-handed reliever kept the Yankees' championship hopes alive in this do-or-die game. He came on with runners at first and third in the fourth inning and retired George Brett on a rally-ending line drive that left Kansas City's comeback one run short.

Then he kept the Royals away for the rest of this windy, chilly afternoon.

The margin of victory in this tense, tight game was an unearned run the Yankees scored in the fourth when Kansas City committed two errors.

Place-kicker Frank Alegria added four field goals of 23, 33, 34 and 36 yards, good for a new single-game record for the Tigers. Stefan Schroeder kicked three field goals against Long Beach State in 1988 for the previous record.

A message from the Bear

Bear finally gets even for 1970 humiliation

By Dave Wielenga
Staff Writer

Paul (Bear) Bryant has been a head football coach for 33 years. Saturday's frantic 21-20 victory over USC at the Coliseum was his 266th against 76 losses and 16 ties.

It was a win he will long remember — because of a loss he has not been able to forget. "A lot of people from Birmingham were here," Bryant noted. "They still remember 1970 and so do I."

The 1970 game was the only one of the four that USC and Alabama have contested that was played outside of Southern California and the John McKay-coached Trojans embarrassed the Crimson Tide, 42-21.

"We'll never forget that loss back home," Bryant reiterated.

However, USC managed to make Alabama's narrow victory Saturday an equally-unforgettable occasion.

"Never have I seen a team come back as strong as USC today," the Bear mumbled almost inaudibly in a crowded corner of the steamy locker room. "It's a real tribute to coach Robinson and his staff."

"And that Herte! My, was he hot. They've got some kind of offensive team, some kind of program."

Bryant was equally generous in the accolades he bestowed on his own players, especially those who have been inserted into the lineup since Alabama's 31-24 loss to Nebraska in the second game of the season.

"This is a great win for our team," he said. "I'm really proud of them. The new people have really improved our team."

Tony Nathan was not one of the new people but he might have felt like it.

The 6-2, 198-pound junior has been hobbling since incurring a thigh bruise against Vanderbilt two weeks ago and was listed as a questionable starter at the beginning of this week. Injuries to several other Alabama players — principally running back Pete Cavan — forced him into the lineup.

Nathan responded with a game-high 76 yards on 12 carries and scored Alabama's two fourth-quarter touchdowns on bursts of 1 and 13 yards.

"The key to the game was adjustment," he reported. "The key to our running game is that the opponents' defense has to force our quarterback to pitch. It was working at the beginning but USC adjusted and made our quarterbacks keep the ball. So we had to adjust to what they were doing. We did and it worked."

But just barely. Nathan had to sit helplessly on the sidelines for much of the remainder of the game as USC drove for a pair of touchdowns.

"The offense didn't let up. We knew that we should try to put points on the board every time we got the ball because USC is such an explosive team. I was just hoping the defense was thinking the same thing."

"It might have been a better game defensively at the end if it wasn't so hot," offered Bryant in reference to the 90-degree temperature on the field. "But it affects both sides."

TCU halts losing streak, whips Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Christian's Steve Bayuk fueled a 28-point second quarter Saturday night with touchdown passes to James Wright and Mike Renfro to whip the hapless Rice Owls, 35-15, and halt the nation's longest major college losing streak at 15.

The embattled Horned Frogs, who had not won since beating Rice 28-21 in their final game of 1975, handed first-year coach F.A. Dry his first TCU victory in five games this year. It was TCU's third victory in its last 42 games, and probably cost the Frogs their No. 1 ranking in The Bottom Ten.

TCU trailed 7-0 at the end of the first quarter on a 10-yard run by Rice halfback Earl Cooper.

But the Frogs, who also established a Southwest Conference record 22 penalties in the game, caught fire in the second period with Bayuk flipping 1 yard to Wright early in the quarter. Bayuk then whipped the Frogs to three more touchdowns in a 5:43 span.

Renfro finished the game with 2,323 career receiving yards to break the record of 2,275 held by former Southern Methodist receiver Jerry LeVias.

Baylor outkicks SMU, 9-6

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Robert Bledsoe atoned for three successive misses by kicking three consecutive field goals Saturday in a 9-6 Baylor victory over SMU.

The Southwest Conference game was marred by more than 250 yards in penalties, with Baylor being flagged 15 times — one shy of the national record for infractions in a single game.

Bledsoe's winning kick pushed along by winds gusting up to 23 miles per hour, soared through the uprights from 26 yards out with 2:12 seconds left in the game.

Bledsoe also kicked a 47-yard field goal, seven yards longer than he has ever kicked before, and a 39-yarder.

He missed on attempts of 23, 28 and 38 yards before connecting for his first three-pointer with three seconds left in the first half.

John Dunlop gave SMU 3-0 and 6-3 leads with a 27-yard field goal and a 28-yarder into the wind.

Fullerton scores 31-10

MONROE, La. (AP) — Jay Bennett raced for 108 yards and scored his team's first touchdown to lead Cal State Fullerton to a 31-10 victory over Northeast Louisiana Saturday night.

Obie Graves added 91 yards and two touchdowns for the visitors, Dale Bunn ran 15 yards for another touchdown, and kicker Juan Carillo booted a 45-yard field goal to cap the scoring.

Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said: "I told (Texas) coach Fred Akers after the game 'I hope they win the rest of them and the national championship.' They have a great, 'eat football team. Campbell is just unbelievable and I told him I hope he wins the Heisman Trophy."

A tremendous goal line stand in the final four minutes sealed Texas' first victory over the Sooners since 1970.

Triple Brad Shearer and defensive back Johnnie Johnson tackled Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott for no gain on fourth-and-one at the Texas five.

Russell Erxleben kicked field goals of 64 and 58 yards with his siege gun place-kicking leg.

Texas was stunned in the first period when both first-string quarterback Mark McBeth and second-string signal caller Jon Aune suffered injuries.

The underdog Longhorns, trailing 3-0 after Oklahoma's Uwe von Schamann kicked a 47-yard field goal, appeared doomed with the unheralded McEachern taking the field before the sellout crowd of 72,000 in the Cotton Bowl.

McEachern who had played in only one game, drove Texas into position for Erxleben's 64-yard field goal to tie the score, 3-3.

Then he whipped the Longhorns on an 80-yard drive sprinkled with bullseye passes and Campbell's thundering runs.

Campbell scored from 34 yards out behind Steve Hall's crushing block as Texas led 10-3 at halftime.

Von Schamann kicked a 33-yard field goal to make it 10-6 in the third period, but Erxleben matched it with a 58-yarder in the fourth quarter.

McEachern was carried from the field by his teammates and was congratulated by Gov. Dolph Briscoe after the victory.

Wash. St. ambushes Cal, 17-10

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Brilliant defensive play by Washington State's George Yarno, John Troppman, Ken Greene and Spud Harris complemented Jack Thompson's passing Saturday as the Cougars upset 14th-ranked California, 17-10, Saturday in a Pacific-8 game.

Thompson orchestrated two touchdown drives for an early lead,

Oregon State knocks off BYU, 24-19

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Oregon State defenders intercepted three Gifford Nielsen passes and returned two of them for touchdowns Saturday as the Beavers knocked off 13-ranked Brigham Young, 24-19.

The previously unbeaten Cougars, who had averaged nearly 53 points a game, jumped to a 19-0 lead on Nielsen's three touchdown passes, the last one coming 17 seconds into the second half.

But that was it for the defending Western Athletic Conference co-champions.

Oregon State, now 2-3, took the lead two minutes into the final quarter when linebacker Gene Dales picked off a Nielsen pass at the Beaver 21-yard line and ran untouched 79 yards for the score.

Moments earlier, the Beavers had sliced the BYU lead to 19-14 when, on a nearly identical play, linebacker Kent Howe stepped in front of the Cougars' Todd Christensen to pick off Nielsen's pass and return it 32 yards for the score.

last 9½ minutes matched anything seen at the Coliseum since the Trojans scored 49 points in 16 minutes to crush Notre Dame, 55-24, three years ago.

Herte! had completed only two of six passes in the first half and had no better luck in the second half until he suddenly began smoking.

After Alabama had gone ahead, 21-6, following a freak interception, Herte! directed the Trojans 91 yards in 18 plays, completing his sixth pass in eight attempts on a 10-yard scoring toss to Sweeney.

When Tatupu caught a pass for a two-point conversion, USC trailed by only seven, 21-14, with 6:46 remaining.

Herte! still had a hot arm when USC obtained possession of the ball at its 21 with 3:08 left.

He hit tailback Lynn Cain for five yards, Sweeney for 13, flanker Michael Hayes for nine and Simmrin for 13 as the Trojans quickly moved to the 'Bama 39.

AFTER A near-miss on a bomb to Simmrin in the end zone, Herte! threw for 22 yards to Sweeney and nine to tight end Billy Gay.

Alabama cornerback Don McNeal was flagged for interference in the end zone on a pass to Simmrin, giving USC a first down at the 1, from where Cain cracked over to pull the Trojans within two and set up a dramatic attempt for victory.

"Maybe we should have opened up sooner," said Robinson. "It's hard to say."

But it's also possible the Trojans opened up too quickly.

On their first possession, they stayed on the ground and crunched 33 yards to set up a 32-yard field goal by Frank Jordan.

That looked like USC football—here we come and try to stop us.

But on its next possession, USC smashed 17 yards in three running plays, then, inexplicably, went to the forward pass on first down, unsuccessfully.

This was Cal and Stanford football, and the Trojan ground game never seemed able to regain momentum.

MEANWHILE, Alabama was gaining confidence in the second half.

A 21-yard punt return to the Alabama 49 by Ozzie Newsome set up the Tide's first touchdown. Alabama wheeled 51 yards in seven plays, aided by a face-mask penalty against the Trojans. Fullback Johnny Davis went the last two yards and Roger Chapman's placement gave the Tide a 7-3 lead with 5:08 elapsed in the third quarter.

USC came back to travel 79 yards to the 'Bama 1, but on third down cornerback Mike Tucker knifed through to throw Trojan tailback Dwight Ford for a five-yard loss, forcing USC to settle for a 23-yard field goal by Jordan that narrowed the score to 7-6.

Alabama responded with a 72-yard march which was helped by two personal foul penalties by USC and two disputed plays in which the Trojans believed they had recovered fumbles.

But the Tide kept possession and tailback Tony Nathan completed the drive with a one-yard scoring run early in the fourth quarter.

A BIZZARE interception set up Alabama's third touchdown. When Herte! attempted to pass at the USC 20, nose guard Curtis McGriff batted the ball and it sailed into the hands of Hamilton, who was lying on his back at the 8.

After an illegal procedure penalty set the ball back to the 13, Nathan scored on a beautifully executed pitch play off Alabama's Wishbone formation. Chapman converted to give Alabama a 21-6 lead and set the stage for the game-ending fireworks by the Trojans.

Victory was nothing new for Bryant. It was No. 266 for the craggy-faced old warrior out of Fordyce, Ark., third behind Amos Alonzo Stagg and Glenn (Pop) Warner.

a 7-7 tie. His touchdown came on a 3-yard run in the third quarter, when Michigan pulled away from its intra-state rival with a pair of touchdowns.

Turnovers ruined the Spartans' bid for an upset. Michigan State trailed 10-7 at the half and opened the third quarter with a 52-yard kickoff return by Bruce Reeves. Quarterback Ed Smith hit fullback Jim Earley with a 20-yard pass to the Michigan 21, but Earley fumbled and Michigan's Dom Tedesco recovered his second fumble of the game. The Wolverines then drove 74 yards in nine plays with fullback Russell Davis bursting up the middle the last three yards for a touchdown.

Former Pius X star runs wild Nelson's one sharp Card

By Al Moss
Special to the I. P. T.

STANFORD — Darrin Nelson, Stanford's sawed-off freshman running star, finally finished fighting his way through the hordes of autograph-seekers — with a good deal more difficulty than he had encountered running through the UCLA defense half an hour before.

"The most pleasing aspect for me?" he answered as he peeled off his jersey in the almost-empty Card dressing room. "Seeing James catch that ball."

Nelson had just turned in the third best rushing performance in Stanford history, 189 yards in 23 carries, and caught four passes for 37 yards more. But his first thought was for a play that somebody else made. Or maybe two plays.

James Lofton had outjumped two UCLA defenders to take Steve Dil's 40-yard pass at the UCLA 27. And two plays later, with just 37 seconds remaining in the game, Lofton broke over the middle, caught another Dil's pass at the five and spun away from two tacklers for the touchdown that gave Stanford a come-from-behind 32-28 win over UCLA.

Hipp leads Husker win

MANIATTAN, Kan. (AP) — I.M. Hipp bolted 82 and 66 yards for touchdowns Saturday and rushed for more than 200 yards for the second successive game, leading ninth-ranked Nebraska to a 26-9 victory over Kansas State in their Big Eight opener.

The Cornhuskers, who posted their fourth victory in a row after a loss to Washington State, needed both of Hipp's long dashes to conquer the stubborn Wildcats.

Kansas State wasn't out of it until the final minute, when Nebraska scored an easy field goal after intercepting a pass and an unneeded touchdown after getting the ball at midfield.

The Wildcats, who haven't won a Big Eight game since 1974, made it tough for Nebraska before bowing for the 15th consecutive time in conference play.

They scored on a 13-yard pass from reserve quarterback Dan Manucci to Paul Coffman with just under 12 minutes left, cutting Nebraska's lead to 17-9. The Cats missed on a two-point conversion when Manucci couldn't get into the end zone on a run.

Maple Leafs — Reduced roster to 21, leaving only two rookies, Trevor Johnson and Jimmy Jones, on the roster.

Muldowney makes a swift move at Ontario

ONTARIO — Don Garlits stumbled, Shirley Muldowney flew and a disappointed Billy Meyer saw $2,500-in bonus money go up in smoke Saturday to highlight the final day of qualifying for the $249,000 Winston World Finals at Ontario Motor Speedway.

With Meyer's failure to qualify for the 16-car Funny Car finals and Gordie Bonin's subsequent ascension to the No. 2 spot in the Winston World points standings, a great deal of the drama was removed from Sunday's 12 noon final eliminations.

But remaining are some important individual battles including a possible Top Fuel final between Garlits and Muldowney, both of them unbeaten in previous races at OMS.

Garlits, the World Finals winner in 1973, 1974 and 1975 and holder of the national performance record of 5.63 seconds, could do no better than 15th in Top Fuel qualifying and had to sweat out the last session just to remain qualified.

The 16-time NHRA national event winner from Sefton, Fla., could manage nothing more than a 6.017-in five qualifying tries in what turned out to be the second quickest field in drag racing history.

Muldowney, on the other hand, picked up the pace considerably after a slow start and finished in the No. 2 spot behind only John Abbott of Denver, Colo.

Abbott, who produced a time of 5.88 seconds on Friday, didn't even make an attempt Saturday, preferring to spend his time checking and rechecking the engine which earlier this year carried him to a final round conquest of Muldowney in the Popular Hot Rodding

Championships, the sport's largest independently-produced professional event.

Muldowney, the newly-

crowned Winston World

Champion and winner of three previous NHRA national events this year,

ran a time of 5.911 seconds and barely nosed out

Canadian Graham Light for the second spot (5.915).

There were a total of 11

cars under 6.00 seconds and five others between six flat and Englishman

Clive Skilton's 6.019.

In the Funny Car category, Meyer's failure to make the lineup (by .008 of a second) on his last attempt and close rival

Bonin's strong 6.19 (good for No. 5) enabled the Canadian to move past the 23-year-old Texan into second place in the standings.

As a result, Bonin will now pick up the $7,500 Winston bonus check; Meyer the third place share of $5,000.

Gary Burgin actually led the Funny Car qualifying with a final hour run of 6.04 seconds at 241.93

MPH. That gave new hope to a Funny Car contingent which had previously been demoralized once more by two-time defending champion Don Prudhomme of Granada Hills.

Prudhomme, who has won the World Championship the last three years and whose 24 NHRA event victories is a career record, sizzled to a time of 6.05 at 241 MPH.

Champions will also be crowned Sunday in Pro Stock, Pro Comp, Competition, Modified, Super Stock and Stock.

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

CHICAGO—The Rams lead the NFL in Monday night games, except when it comes to winning them.

By popular demand, they have played more of the odd-night contests than anyone—12—but dropped two last year to San Francisco and Cincinnati and are 4-7 (Chuck Knox is 3-3) during eight years' exposure to the three boos in the booth.

Make it two this week. The Rams, Bears and a national television audience estimated by ABC at 50 million get a break. Howard Cosell won't be at Soldier Field for the 6 p.m. (PDT) game because of a World Series commitment.

Baseball's loss is football's gain.

But Cosell's absence won't be a factor in the result. Knox, bless his coach's soul, is more concerned about the Bears, who are 1-2 but figure to be aroused after a 42-24 home thrashing by New Orleans last week.

Also, there is the matter of Monday night macho. Not only are most football freaks around the country tuned in, but almost all of the other players in the league are watching.

"Your peers around the league get to see how good you are," says Isiah Robertson, the Rams' right linebacker.

Harold Jackson admits he watches every week.

"You watch the people at your position," Jackson says. "You can see everybody's else's mistakes—'Oh, wow, he missed a pass'—and when you're on, they're watching you."

Robertson adds, "But if you want to prove how good you are, that's the perfect place to do it."

There are other considerations. Not many Rams games are piped into Philadelphia, Ark., where tight end Terry Nelson was raised and spends his off-season.

"They always say, 'Why don't we get the Rams?'" Nelson says. "Usually they get Dallas. Now they get a chance to see the Rams."

Because he was a reserve before this season, most of his kin have not seen Nelson play much as a pro.

"I guess I'll still be starting," says Terry, who is fighting off Charles Young's heir apparenecy to Bob Klein's old job. "This week all my cousins, friends, everybody, they'll all be in front of that screen."

Knox's theory is that such factors bring out the best in players.

"Lesser teams rise to the occasion, and that's when upsets happen," he says.

The Rams are favored by six points, two of the three Monday night games this year have been upsets and even Oakland had to rally to beat Kansas City last week—facts Knox appreciates.

"I think the Bears are very dangerous," he says. "Walter Payton is an unbelievable running back. He scares me to death."

"Plus, we'll be playing them in their back yard on a Monday night."

No relief is in sight for the Rams. Two weeks later they'll meet Minnesota on a Monday night in the Coliseum.

"When they put the package together," Knox says, "they want to make it as attractive as possible. Next year we'll be playing 16 games, and it will be strength against strength, according to how teams finish this year. The reasons are obvious—so they can market the package."

The NFL is negotiating new TV contracts with the major networks for next season, when it seems prime time Thursday night games will be introduced.

Combined with the new equal-match schedule, you won't be seeing Seattle or Tampa Bay often but there will be a lot of Rams, Raiders, Cowboys and Steelers on the screen.

Even a coach could get self-conscious. "I don't even know where the cameras are," Knox says.

Penn State rallies to beat Utah State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Tenth-ranked Penn State, sparked by two turnovers caused by defensive tackle Bruce Clark, rallied in the final quarter to escape an upset and defeat Utah State, 16-7, Saturday.

The visiting Aggies, who fell to 1-4 with their fourth successive loss, held a 7-6 lead at halftime, and it stayed that way through three quarters on the rain-soaked turf at Beaver Stadium.

But Clark, a 240-pound sophomore who started at caused a Utah State fumble on the first play of the fourth quarter when he applied a hard hit to running back Tony Gipson.

On Utah State's next play from the 20-yard line, Clark hooked the arm of Aggie quarterback Eric Hipple as he released a pass. The ball fluttered straight up and was intercepted by middle guard Randy Sidler at the visitors' 17-yard line.

Four plays later, freshman running back Booker Moore ran 2 yards for the insurance touchdown that helped Penn State raise its record to 4-1 after a loss here last week to Kentucky.

running of quarterback John Puleo.

After Villanova took a 14-0 lead, Army got on the scoreboard in the final minutes before the half ended. Hall took the Cadets 60 yards in 10 plays, rolling around right end for the final eight yards.

Hall wasted little time in putting another score up for the Cadets as he took them 56 yards in six plays to start the second half. He threw to Greg McGlasker for a score covering 18 yards to tie the game at 14-14.

Two more touring pros, Pat McDonald and Don Pooley of Riverside, remain in the hunt at 210, one stroke in front of Mark Pfeil and Calvin Peete, also touring pros, Jeff Hewes of Santa Barbara and midway tri-leader Vic Hayek of Sauquois.

Hayek bogeyed the last three holes for a 73, hitting his second shot out-of-bounds on the par-5 17th.

McDonald and Peete shot 70, McDonald 71 and Hewes moved up with a 68.

Five strokes off the pace are rookie pro Ed Fiori (68) of Downey, touring pro Pete Brown (69), Ray Carrasco (72) of Irvine, Mike Booker (71) of Houston and amateur Tony Sills (70) of Los Angeles.

Sills birdied the first four holes. He leads the amateur division by five strokes over Mel Collins of Virginia Country Club.

Nowhere in contention are the rookie hotshots John Fought (76) and Scott Simpson (73). They are paired today.

Only Long Beach pro among the leaders is 1975 champion Mike Krantz at 213. He trails by six following a 69. Tony Campregher, who tied for first last year, shot 72-216.

Arinno tied the course record established by Denny Meyer in 1984. This round was superior, however, because the course is longer and the rough higher. It was a career best for the man who last month won $4,400 for a 10th-place finish in the B.C. Open.

While Arinno has won a check in every Queen Mary, he has never been a title contender. He finished 11th in 1972, 8th in 1973, 36th in 1974, 49th in 1975 and 38th last year. His total earnings are $1,540. A victory today would be worth $6,000.

Arinno started inauspiciously with pars on the first four holes. But he birdied four of the next five, sinking putts of 20, 12, 2 and 2 1/2 feet. He added four more birdies coming in on putts of 4, 2, 20 and 30 feet.

The final and longest putt came on the difficult par-3 18th. The hole is 228 yards and yields almost as many bogeys as pars.

Tapie was consistent with five birdies and two bogeys. He birdied the first two holes on putts of 20 and 6 feet, lost a stroke on the sixth, birdied the eighth on a two-putt and bogeyed the ninth. Coming in he was flawless with two birds and seven pars.

Floyd claims threat didn't affect tee loss

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Ray Floyd scoffed at the suggestion an anonymous threat against his safety could have affected his play in a 5 and 3 loss to Australian Graham Marsh in Saturday's 36-hole final of the World Match Play Golf Championship.

"It really didn't bother me," the bulky Floyd said after a half-dozen alert, uniformed police had followed him through driving rain for two wearying trips over the 6,969-yard, par 73 "Burma Road" course at the Wentworth Golf Club.

"Naturally enough, it upset my wife quite badly," said Floyd, who missed a chance at his first non-American title. "But I think a situation like this is not worthy of exposure."

Moore League adds cross-country, track

By Elaine Risinger
Staff Writer

Cross-country in the fall and track in the spring have been added to Moore League competition this year. Although turnout for cross-country has been sketchy in some high schools initially, coaches are anticipating more interest as the sport develops.

At Wilson High, Eugene Stemm, who coaches both the boys and girls, has 28 young women runners including two top seniors, Kristi Kucera and Janet Herzfeld, who look to be the best in the Moore League at this time. Janet and Kristi have trained for three years and competed previously on the boys' team. Another senior, Anne Carey, is temporarily sidelined with an injury.

In its league opener Thursday, Wilson routed Millikan, 16-53. Janet won the two-mile with a time of 12:07.

At the recent Costa Mesa Invitational, Wilson's sophomore team was sweepstakes winner. Aiding the victory were Karen Brown, who took fourth; Melanie Andrew, fifth; Laura Kendrick, ninth; Pam Mayfield, 16th, and Bazella Hickson, 45th. Since Most Orange County high schools are four-year institutions, the group pulled out the win against more experienced teams.

The varsity squad, one short of qualifying as a team, racked up impressive individual efforts. Janet was fifth out of a field of 54; Kristi, seventh; Diane Cronin, 19th, and Eugenia Megas, 51st.

AT THE SAME time, the Wilson track team was making its mark, the Millikan tennis squad was edging Wilson, 10-8. The Bruin cause was hurt by the absence of their No. 2 singles player, Laura O'Neill, who was out with a knee injury.

Elaine Betz, Wilson coach, has only two returning players, Laura and Monica Rojas, and some impressive juniors and sophomores. She describes her team as "inexperienced but very gung ho."

Leading her single lineup is Lawren Smith, a junior new to the team. Lawren learned tennis only last year and is just "fantastic," says Elaine. "She is a born athlete and very exciting to watch."

Playing No. 3 singles is Jackie Lazzar, also a junior and new to the team. Doubles players are Monica Rojas-Pam Senses, No. 1; Hoang Nghiem-Jaye Vegas, No. 2, and Melissa Krawietz-Yuko Nakasone, No. 3.

MAKING IT two victories for Wilson Thursday was the win by Terry Stevens' volleyball team. Millikan and Wilson split the first two games, 15-13, Millikan, and 15-12, Wilson. Then the Bruins took a 15-5 decision to complete two hours of play. The Millikan JVs won.

Terry has seven strong players returning this fall. They are Patti Taylor, Nichelle Bartell, Anne Caudillo, Sheila Senses, Jana Marchi, Mary Ann Kiehl and Pilar Perez.

LONG BEACH City College's women's volleyball team took a week-long layoff, which coach Donna Prindle says her squad needed after a hectic opening schedule.

"We needed to work on setting our offense up faster and getting better court position," she said. "The defense has been outstanding, but we've had troubles on offense especially with passing and setting."

LBCC'S FIELD hockey team was blanked, 7-0, by a strong Mt. San Antonio College squad last week in a practice match.

Despite the lopsided score, LBCC coach Kay van Gunten was pleased with her team's efforts against a more experienced team. "They did not give up during a difficult game."

She praised Terry Wohlmuth, the goalkeeper, who "has improved tremendously" and stopped many shots. "Our entire forward line also has improved considerably. Also receiving plaudits were link player Gail Godeau and Terry Macado, a newcomer dubbed as most improved."

LONG BEACH State's field hockey team won an exhibition game, defeating the Los Angeles Field Hockey Assn., 5-4. Kayne Hudson was the standout in the game, scoring three of five goals. "The team is getting better all the time," said coach Anita Miller. "We were having a hard time on offense but, as the season progresses, we're learning better ball control, thus a stronger attack."

DONNELL CULPEPPER

This month great for Sierra trips

Now is a wonderful time to visit the Sierra Nevada. The heavy summer fishing pressure has ended and there are some streams and lakes in Inyo and Mono Counties that were never better for trout fishing. Ask any of the natives about fishing in the last three weeks of the season.

It's true that you won't enjoy looking at such lakes as Crowley, Grant and an empty Bridgeport, but those are the waters that were drawn down in the worst drought for California in many years.

Fall colors are beginning to show, and as this month passes, the colors now so noticeable in the upper back country will be seen along Highway 395 from Bishop northward.

The trout season in those two counties comes to a close in most waters at the end of this month, but if you travel on northward to the Nevada line, then Reno and Lake Tahoe, there will be other chances to fish and many places to enjoy the fall coloring.

If you should go northward through the Central Valley, there are numerous reservoirs that are open for fishing the year 'round. There are some where trout still may be taken, but fishing in those reservoirs poses problems. There are different limits and regulations for streams and lakes in many parts of California, and it would be advisable to look for such information in California Sportfishing Regulations for 1977.

WHEN UNION CARBIDE Corporation accidentally spilled some chemicals into Pine Creek (Inyo County) early in August, it ruined one of the most popular streams south of Bishop. Tom Larkin of North Long Beach, who fishes there often, wants to know what kind of punishment is being, or will be, meted out to Union Carbide. Bishop sources say "probably none." It will be up to the Department of Fish and Game to file any action against the company.

Incidentally, Union Carbide is doing all in its power to clean up the stream, but it will take a good runoff this winter to flush out the sediment that was deposited in the creek bed. Stream samplings reveal that some brown trout and invertebrates (trout food) still exist.

The DFG will make no plans in the streams until tests are completed next spring. DFG biologists are hoping that the brown trout remaining in the stream will produce an adequate spawn to rebuild that population. The DFG plants naturally will be rainbows.

Union Carbide is cooperating with the DFG to monitor the creek. One thing not known is that Union Carbide worked on the stream long before the spill to provide better access and a cleaner creek bed. The spill from a tungsten mill just above Kovana was responsible for the nearly 100 percent fish and invertebrate kill.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—Frank Ashley, noted alpine backpacker, will start another of his backpacking classes for beginners Wednesday night at the El Dorado Park Nature Center. Hours will be from 7 to 9:30 and the course will last for five weeks. There will be a fee of $11 for the five weeks. Ashley is familiar not only with the back country of this state, but has led expeditions into others.

Free movies at 1 p.m. on two Saturdays are Jacques Cousteau's Singing Whale Oct. 15, and Walt Disney's Nature's Half Acre Oct. 22. The films will be shown at the Nature Center.

One thousand pounds of rainbow trout were chuted into Irvine Lake Thursday as an experiment. "If the fishermen have good luck with those trout," says Alice Carlson, lake manager, "we will start stocking every week." She also announced that 2,000 pounds of channel catfish had been planted. Fishing at Irvine has been good for catfish and small bass.

Hunters returning from Northern California say that salmon and steelhead fishing on the Klamath, Scott, Shasta, Trinity and Sacramento Rivers has never been better, which bears out what John Reginato, Shasta-Cascade Wonderland Association manager, has been telling me. If you want more information on fishing up that way, call Reginato at (916) 243-2643.

Headhunters after Waltrip in National 500

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, after outracing Donnie Allison to victory Saturday in a rain-shortened 300-mile sportsman race, said he felt like a marked man going into Sunday's $250,000 National 500.

Waltrip, who has been nicknamed "Jaws" because of his no-holds-barred racing style and outspokenness, figures Lennie Pond has joined Cale Yarborough in the group that might be headhunting for him the Grand National stock car feature.

Waltrip and Pond got together, after Pond had been leading the race for 42 laps, and Pond wound up in the guardrail.

"Jaws Waltrip done it again," Pond charged. "It looked like he slipped up and slammed into me, I had nowhere to go."

Waltrip felt the way Saturday's race ended was some sort of retaliation against him.

"At Bristol, it started raining 25 laps from the finish, so they ran it out under yellow with me following Cale. Here it starts raining 25 laps from the finish with me leading, and they stop the race," Waltrip complained. "Why can't they be consistent?"

Waltrip and Allison tried to outrace each other and an approaching rain storm in the 300-mile NAS-

CAR Late Model Sportsman race. Waltrip managed to hold off Allison by a car length until the yellow flag was displayed.

The red flag came out to stop the race three laps later. After a lengthy wait, officials decided the race could not be finished and named Waltrip the winner of the $130,000 event.

HER DAILY ritual, collecting a basket of oranges, soon will be but a fond remembrance for Mrs. Frances Bennett of El Toro. Path of population and progress has crossed the oldest existing orange ranch in the area. When she relocates, her large collection of early American glass, porcelain and collectibles (below) no longer will sparkle at passersby from the front window.

Time runs out at citrus ranch

DOGGEDLY pursuing his duties as ranch foreman despite the encroachment of new housing across the road, Avelino Lopez adjusts water sprinklers at edge of the Bennett orchard. He does not like to think about the forthcoming end of his 27 years with the ranch.

Built in 1909, the stucco and brick ranch house at Second and Cherry in El Toro possessively hugs the land. It is the last of its vintage in the area. In back and up the road on both sides, rows of orange trees march in a dark green swath covering 30 acres.

The Harvey Bennett spread is the oldest working orange ranch in El Toro. The others have disappeared under developers' bulldozers. A similar fate awaits the Bennett ranch early next year. Rising taxes and insurance, less return on sale of oranges, developers eager for more land in the rapidly growing community all contributed to the hard decision to give up a way of life that had seen few changes in almost 80 years.

"Before my husband died seven years ago, he told us we'd be lucky if we could keep the ranch another 10 years," remembers Mrs. Frances Bennett, 83. "Ours is the last working orange ranch between Capistrano and Irvine. It has been in the family since 1898. My husband's father bought the 15 acres we live on for $25 an acre."

Across the street from her land 123 expensive two-story homes under construction rub shoulders on 20 acres.

"Our ranch used to be in the sticks. El Toro has a population of 75,000 now. There were only 300 people back then, from Trabuco to Laguna Canyon. It was a wonderful life for the children. They were free to roam the hills. Everyone knew everyone else. There was such loyalty. Basque, French, Mexican,

Scholars set local record

Academic scholarships valued at more than $3.6 million have been won by high school graduates of the class of 1977 in the Long Beach Unified School District.

According to school district figures, individual graduating class sizes are smaller than previous years while the value of scholarships won has increased.

Dr. Doris Gregory, director of guidance services, says the $3.6 million represents a 100 percent increase over 1974. (Class size was 5,149 in 1974 and 4,401 in 1977.) It represents a $713,948 increase over last year, she says. (Class size dropped by 363 students from 1976.)

She says, "Special commendation is due the high school counselors who serve as scholarship coordinators. They have worked closely with teachers and administrators who serve as advisers on local scholarship committees."

Many of the academic awards cover tuition and expenses to such schools as Harvard, Yale, UCLA, USC, and the United States Air Force Academy. (The total figure does not include the several million dollars in athletic scholarships awarded to high school seniors, she says.)

In addition to the 833 academic scholarships awarded, local high school graduates accumulated more than 1,000 nonmonetary awards for outstanding student achievement.

Nonmonetary awards included honors at entrance to Harvard, USC and other major universities, Rotary certificates of appreciation, Bank of America finalists, Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizen awards, Exchange Club Boy and Girl of the Year awards, Lions Club awards, Uptown Kiwanis Good Citizen awards, National Merit finalists and commendations, American Legion Scholastic awards, State Champion-Driver Education, and other medals, plaques, trophies and awards presented by service clubs, civic groups, and state and national organizations.

Scholarships awarded to top winners at each local high school are as follows:

Jordan — Deborah Anderson, honors at entrance to USC, State Commission Scholarship, English Teachers

Scholastic Writing Award, Long Beach Bar Association Scholarship.

Lakewood — identical twins Michael and Patrick Fitzgerald; Michael won a full scholarship to Harvard University, Lakewood Elks Award, State Commission Scholarship, California Teachers Association Representative, Long Beach Bar Association Scholarship, National Merit Scholarship, Lakewood High School Faculty Outstanding Student Award, and Lakewood Lancer Award.

Patrick won a full scholarship to Harvard University, Lakewood Elks Award, State Commission Scholarship, Long Beach Bar Association Scholarship, National Merit Scholarship, General Mills Family Leader of Tomorrow, Lakewood High School Jeweled L Pin, and Lakewood High School Hall of Fame.

Millikan — David Friedman, UCLA Alumni Association Dykstra Memorial (UCLA's highest alumni award), Bank of America plaque for math and science, B of A Zone Award for math and science, Exchange Club Outstanding Boy of the Year, UCLA Regents Scholarship, Tuohy Scholarship from Claremont Men's College, and National Merit Commended Student.

Long Beach Polytechnic — Gayle Montgomery, honors at entrance and scholarship to Scripps College, State Commission Scholarship, California Scholastic Federation Seymour Award, Long Beach Bar Association Scholarship, Bank of America finalist, and Harnett Memorial Scholarship.

Wilson — Ralph Koenker, Seymour Memorial Award finalist, Long Beach Bar Association Award, one of two students from Long Beach to be selected by the American Academy of Achievement, Bank of America plaque for math and science, B of A Zone Award, and Furjanick Music Scholarship.

In addition, the 42 June graduates of the Program of Additional Curricular Experiences (PACE) at Poly won more than $330,000 in scholarships.

Responsible for counseling seniors on scholarships last spring were Ray Chess at Jordan, Mary Wille at Lakewood, Mary Price at Millikan, William Miller at Poly, and Marcine Landon at Wilson.

JACKIE ONASSIS, with frequent escort and friend, Pete Hamill — she may finally 'tell all' in a book if the price is right.

'ROOTS' author Alex Haley, above left, his son, Army Sgt. Bill, and grandson, William Jr. — time spent writing book caused strained family relations.

COMEDIENNE Phyllis Diller — newspaper editor did her a favor.

Q: Has William Holden really given up his two-fisted drinking?

A: Yes — and it's all due, apparently, to the power of his love for actress Stefanie Powers. Holden now drinks only lemonade, coffee and an occasional beer, and likes to tell a story about his drinking days: "I used to have a friend with a mind like a computer," he recalls. "He asked me how much I drank and when I told him, he asked, 'Over how many years?'"

I told him, and he said, 'Good grief — do you realize you've drunk enough to float your own yacht?' I had a 48-tonner at the time . . .

Q: How many children today take behavior-changing medications?

A: Current sales of pediatric amphetamines for hyperactive kids indicate at least 500,000 and probably closer to a million American children, mostly under 10 years of age, are in pharmaceutical straitjackets. Some schools even have cots for children who habitually fall asleep in class.

Q: Is it true Alex Haley's son is bitter about his father's success as the author of "Roots"? If so, why?

A: Sgt. Bill Haley, 31, who teaches race relations at Fort Dix, is proud of his father's achievement, but says the 12 years of writing resulted in a somewhat rootless adolescence. The year his parents were divorced — 1965 — he lived in a Greenwich Village apartment with his father.

"I lived in one room," he recalls, "and he was in another, writing . . . I always told my father that one day before he died he'd walk down the street and people would say, 'That's Bill Haley's father.' He's made that kind of difficult now."

Q: I'm engaged and my fiancée is demanding a prenuptial contract to divide the income and the housework — is this legal?

A: In June 1976, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that contracts dividing property are valid as long as they do not promote divorce. Lawyers say requests for them have increased three to five times since 1971, and that they cost between $250 and $2,500, depending upon their complexity.

Q: How true is it that Jackie Onassis is finally going to write her memoirs?

A: It's more likely than at any time in the past for two reasons: money (agent Irving Lazar has already offered her $5 million), and her new friendship with columnist-author

Pete Hamill, whose longtime love interest has been actress Shirley MacLaine.

Hamill, whose books include the soon-to-be-published "Flesh and Blood," would be invaluable in helping Jackie flesh out the drama of her incredible life. A current joke has it that Mrs. Onassis is thinking of calling her book, "The Story of O." . . .

Q: A journalist-friend swears Phyllis Diller worked on a smalltown newspaper with him some years ago — is that true?

A: Although her newspaper career was short-lived, Diller was once a reporter for the San Leandro News Observer in California. "An editor took a deadly dislike to me and busted me down to putting together the movie schedule," she recalls. "It was impossible because the theaters never answered their phones. Then he fired me, and from then on it was onward and upward. That man today is working as a cactus in the Mojave Desert."

Q: Whatever became of Liza Todd, Elizabeth Taylor's daughter by Mike Todd?

A: Liza, a headstrong 19-year-old, has set up housekeeping in Los Angeles with ruggedly handsome Spencer Segura, 24, son of tennis pro Pancho Segura, and is studying at the Otis Art Institute. The love-in relationship has the blessings of mama Liz and ex-stepfather Richard Burton — hardly surprising, perhaps, in view of their own torrid tryst on the "Cleopatra" set 15 years ago.

LIZA Todd, daughter of Elizabeth Taylor, — her living arrangement has mother's approval.

ACTOR William Holden, below right, and his love interest, actress Stefanie Powers — she's responsible for his sobriety.

'Julia'—the story of two extraordinary women

"Why don't they make movies like that anymore?" is the lament one hears from Newark to Nairobi when disgruntled former moviegoers try to explain why they have become disillusioned over the kinds of films Hollywood is turning out in the '70s.

Well, somebody has made one. It's "Julia," and it's wonderful.

Lillian Hellman's dramatic and moving reminiscence of wartime, friendship and intrigue in Europe, based on a chapter from her memorable biography "Pentimento," has been transferred to the screen with awesome grace, style, sensitivity and class by that great director Fred Zinnemann, and the result is the kind of movie those of us starving for a good one have been praying for.

I shudder to think what future generations will think when faced with the challenge of programming a film retrospective of the '60s and '70s. They'll be faced with a surplus of noise, sex, violence and body odor, a farrago of flying limbs and blood-splattered mindlessness in which the female half of the human race is missing.

"Julia" is likely to make them weep with gratitude that somebody, in 1977, actually dared to make a movie about real people feeling real emotions and making real commitments to each other.

"Julia" is one of the few films of recent years I'd like to place in that time capsule. It proves a few people still care about quality in this world of trashy commercialism, that good and worthwhile movies can still enrich our lives at a time when we seem to be drowning in a tidal wave of mediocrity.

"Julia" is touching, richly vibrant tapestry of the late '30s and of the time, places and events that shaped the lives of two headstrong girls and turned them into extraordinary women. It is not a woman's picture, but it does return the distaff side of the human race to the screen with a graceful and respectful countenance.

ALVIN SARGENT spent three years on the screenplay and the work shows. Not a hair is out of place, not a line of dialogue seems forced or unnatural. At a time when few movies give their characters a chance to grow and develop on-screen before our eyes, "Julia" devotes its first half hour to showing how two childhood friends — tough, determined, middle-class Lillian Hellman and rich, impetuous, class-conscious, free-spirited Julia — go their separate ways, developing their separate goals in life. Lillian becomes a writer, and lives with Dashiell Hammett, the hard-drinking and chain-smoking spirit of competition and the drive to succeed with her first play, "The Children's Hour," first begins to show in the early lines in her face and around her lips.

Julia, awakened earlier to her destiny to help others less fortunate than herself, goes to medical school at Oxford and later Vienna, where the first stages of Fascism were already at work. Both women are purging their souls in different ways, but Hellman always worried that hers was the less meaningful way to affect social change than her friend Julia's.

While Hellman's cold coffee, dawn walks on Martha's Vineyard, and back-breaking hours hunched over a typewriter in a windswept beach house result in the achievement of personal ambition, Julia's battle with life ends in the discovery of world disillusionment. Yet Julia is the winner, because her cause is more noble. It is this resolution that leads Lillian in search of her childhood friend.

FOLLOWING a glorious opening-night triumph at Sardi's, Lillian restlessly wanders to Europe with Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, where in the lobby of the Hotel Meurice on a frosty morning, she finally gets her chance to help when a mysterious stranger with a foreign accent asks her to smuggle some of Julia's money to Berlin on an overnight train. Knowing the funds will aid desperate refugees fleeing Nazi-ravaged Germany, Lillian accepts the challenge.

When she meets Julia again, in a smoky and perilous cafe near the Berlin depot, the fine ruddy glow of rebellion has been hardened by the cruelties of life. This is a reunion scene charged with electricity and muted passion, one of the finest pieces of dramatic footage to appear in any film in recent memory.

Desperately ill after a savage beating from the Fascists, Julia has lost a leg, but her indomitable spirit still shines like a beacon, lighting the way for others who are stumbling in the dark. It is the last impression Lillian will ever have of Julia, and even after the war, after Julia has been murdered and Lillian has unsuccessfully searched for her orphaned child in the rubble of post-war Europe, it is an X-ray picture on Lillian's brain that will haunt her forever and keep her awake nights, wondering whose commitment to life was more meaningful — that of Lillian, who carried her social conscience to literature or of Julia, who carried her heart to the front lines and died for her beliefs.

JANE FONDA does a masterful job of portraying the varying stages of a great writer's life — torn between her work and her love for both Dashiell Hammett and her courageous, eccentric friend Julia. The lines we interpret as the excesses of wisdom and turmoil in Hellman's face today are just beginning to show through Fonda's rouge.

In her proud and triumphant impersonation of a great authoress-playwright grappling with her own inner turbulence, Fonda shows us how Hellman's garden grew. It is an impassioned, complex, almost agonizingly dedicated performance that reinstates Fonda as perhaps the finest young film actress of her generation.

Vanessa Redgrave has a smaller role as Julia, but she seizes the screen with her vibrant presence and makes us realize with the smolder in her eyes how possible it was for men and women to love her loyally and unconditionally. As Hammett, Lillian's soulmate and severest critic, Jason Robards carves an indelible impression of strength and support.

Hal Holbrook and Rosemary Murphy are rather flavorless as the Campbell-Parker team on a champagne-soaked tour of Algonquin-weaned giddiness. Maximilian Schell brings the perfect battered dignity to the role of Julia's mysterious courier from Germany.

"Julia" is a movie that has everything. Cloaked in Douglas Slocombe's muted, lyrical cinematography, it transforms Hellman's memories to film with rare sensitivity. There is terror on the rain-soaked train passing through Nazi checkpoints with the frightened Jewish Lillian on board clinging to the forbidden money sewed into the lining of her hat.

There is gaiety, nostalgia and Hellman's tough, unblurred vision, too. But most of all, there is warmth and humanity in the love these two friends share for each other. "Julia" is, in the final analysis, a love story about the secret intimacy only two friends can share.

FRED ZINNEMAN, one of the legendary Hollywood filmmakers, only works sporadically these days. It's a bad time for men of taste and vision in an industry unsure of its audience and greedy for profit. But when he is lucky enough to get the right money and the right artists together, Zinnemann is unparalleled. With "Julia," the man who guided such films as "High Noon," "The Nun's Story," "The Member of the Wedding," "From Here to Eternity," "The Men," "Oklahoma!" "The Sundowners" and "The Search" to movie greatness returns with consummate skill to take his place among the cinema giants.

'Work' key to Ebell success

By Mark Clutter
Staff Writer

Ebell of Long Beach is a bit choosy about its members. It bars women under the age of 40.

The Ebell Juniors, however, might be called "apprentice" members. It is made up of young women, 18 to 40, who are daughters or friends of members.

"Young women have different interests," a member explained.

Ebell also discriminates against men — but rather lightly. Men attend many programs and there are "Gentlemen's Days."

Ebell of Long Beach, organized in 1896 by 17 young women who believed that women needed more education and opportunity, remains one of the oldest and most active social clubs in the city. It has approximately 900 members. (Emphasis on youth slowly declined over the years.)

Many clubs tend to lose their vitality with the passage of time. What is Ebell's secret?

"Work!" said Muriel Y. Martin, president. "Just plain hard work."

THE WORK divides into two general classes. The club is "liberationist" as it was in the beginning, seeking full opportunities for women. Its members have freedom to increase their knowledge through study groups, lectures and films.

But there are also good works, including support of the Tiehenor Clinic for children and the purchase of braces, specially-made shoes, etc. There is a scholarship fund. Large print books and recorded books are supplied to Alamitos Branch Library.

"We have a $60,000 a year budget," said Martin, "which certainly cannot be covered by $25 a year dues. We are fortunate in having some oil money and being remembered in will."

The charming clubhouse and theater are in the best California-Spanish architectural style of the 1920s. The spacious building was finished in 1924.

Hard work has characterized Ebell since the beginning, said Lois Guyser, historian. When a clubhouse was needed the young women pitched in with fund-raising projects including some well-attended beach parties. The first clubhouse, a frame building, was completed in 1905 at the corner of Ocean Boulevard and Daisy Avenue.

Twelve years later, the building was condemned. On the advice of a real estate man, the present site at Cerritos Avenue and Third Street was purchased. The site was almost rural in those days. The problem was to raise money for the $100,000 building. They did it by hard work — luncheons and dinners, rummage sales and bazaars, a successful musical comedy.

ALL BUT $28,000 of the mortgage had been paid when the earthquake struck in 1933. Unlike many buildings in Long Beach the stalwart building stood, but there was considerable damage. Borrowing money was not easy during the Depression, but the club managed. The last of the mortgage was paid in 1946.

An essential part of the club's function is the 1,000 seat theater. It provides space for City College concerts, religious groups and many other nonprofit organizations. And it is regularly used for events by its members and their guests.

New members are obtained through the recommendations of members. The backgrounds of many members are impressive. Many have had teaching careers. Others represent other business and professions.

"The Ebell of Long Beach is the oldest and largest cultural and social club in the city," said Guyser. "It is a great privilege to be a member."

Ebell clubs are named for Adrian Ebell, a man of Dutch-English ancestry, who was deeply interested in wider horizons for women. He organized study classes for women in the East and during a visit to Oakland in 1876, established a study group there. After his death at the age of 37, the clubs called themselves Ebell. There are many Ebell clubs, but since each is autonomous, they vary greatly in scope and interest, Guyser said.

VENERABLE Ebell of Long Beach has been meeting the social and cultural needs of Long Beach women since 1896. Pictured in patio of the clubhouse at Third Street and Cerritos Avenue are Muriel Y. Martin, left, current president, and Lois Guyser, historian and past president.

Age is no deterrent to productive lives

EDITOR'S NOTE: A recent request on the Life-style pages asked readers to let us know some of the activities of the area's senior citizens. Following is a part of the response to that request.

One way to start feeling young again is to read letters by or about older people who are pulling their weight in the world and finding joy in living.

Here are some excerpts or summaries of letters which should make you happier, no matter when your birthday is.

"I am Bessie Denison, and I will be 93 years old on Feb. 19. I am trying to keep myself busy. I have been going out to Willow Lake Rest Home every Friday for six years to teach crafts and help in any way I can."

"I am just one of the average senior citizens that do not do anything spectacular but just enjoys the many activities provided for us in Long Beach. My hobbies are dancing and playing cards, so I do a little of both, health permitting as my health is very poor. But I do my best to try to get out and mingle with people as I find it does me a lot of good and keeps me from sitting home worrying."

"And most important, I have my faith to sustain me. I try never to miss Mass on Sunday as it affords me the spiritual comfort and strength I need to keep going. I know God has something beautiful in both worlds, so I do my best to take advantage of the beauty in this one and look forward to the beauty in the next."

Carol A. Hart, 69
Cancer patient, Long Beach

"Alex Litrov of Alex Litrov & Associates, public relations, writes about a friend:

"Kirk Lillie is 75 but he's still working and enjoying himself because he's working with and helping his fellow senior citizens. Kirk is assistant sales manager of the medicare department of the Family Health Program. He was in the oil business for more than 20 years and was sales manager of Harbor Oil in Long Beach when he retired."

"He did nothing for a few years then decided to get back in sales and joined the marketing department of FHP in 1968. He says he's a lucky man for having been in sales because even as a senior citizen he can still work at what he knows best. 'A bricklayer or truck driver isn't as fortunate. People should give some consideration to how their life's work will fit in with their twilight years,' he says."

And from another reader:

"My hobby is creating things with beads. My latest venture is jeweled Christmas trees, which are mounted on velvet and framed. A picture light is at the top. I do not sell these, but loan them so many persons may enjoy them. One will be on display at Obispo Clinic. I am 75 years young. This project keeps me occupied and happy despite an aggravating health problem."

Evelyn Sherard
Long Beach

"Life begins at retirement, regardless of age. We sold our home and retired to a 30-foot trailer. We roamed this country for 12,000 miles, made new friends and explored new places. I had been competing in senior track and field until arthritis caught up with me. I can still play tennis."

"For the past two years, I have been enrolled in Santa Ana College in creative writing. I have a little folding boat which affords me additional recreation. Recently I was commissioned to ghost-write a book. Also I am on the sixth chapter of my experiences in the British Merchant Marine."

Yachters lead way in honoring new officers

By Barbara Bradley
Staff Writer

IT WAS OUT with the old and in with the new recently at the commodore's cocktail party for members of the Alamitos Bay Yacht Club at the home of Tick and Georgette Weber.

Tick is the outgoing commodore and he and Georgette entertained some 150 guests including Wynne and Chuck Wardle, David and Sue Crockett, Roy and Margaret Conn, Chas and Alice Merrill, Chuck and Adra Kober and Gordon and Linda Brown.

Also enjoying the festivities were Francis and Elsie Merchant, John and Audrey Hand, Lex and Jill Kamball, Fred and Linda Mihaylo, Henry and Bernice Weiss, Ron and Karen Fox, Gary and Pat Winterrowd, Scott and Marilee Gillespie, Darrell and Markey Neighbors and Dick and Linda Landes.

At the subsequent installation, center spotlight, of course, was on Commodore-elect Bill Nicolai and his lady, Mary Lou.

PARTIES HAVE BEEN going on about town for the Nightingales Junior Organization to the Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

John and Carolyn Holmes opened their home for a fall couples party. A Hawaiian luau theme was established through decorations of orchids and lots of exotic foods.

Honored were new provisionals and their husbands, Don and Jean Arnett, Ken and Paula Barnes, Tim and Janet Foley, Terry and Sandi Foust, Rick and Dolores Harris, Riley and Diane Quayle, Alan and Sharon Reents and John and Diane Rogers.

Dance music for the festivity was provided by Paradise Lost, a group whose drummer is Bill Graber, son of Nightingale Edie and Allen Graber.

The new provisionals and their husbands also were honored recently at a pool party at the home of Joe and Judy Moore given by the 1976-77 provisionals. The couples got better acquainted over dinner and a swim.

THERE'S NEW royalty in town. Thelma Dunlap, who has been enjoying her retirement doing archaeological research on rock writings, has been made a Dame of Justice of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, better known as the Knights and Dames of Malta.

The Knights and Dames of Malta, says Thelma, belong to the world's oldest religious Order of Chivalry. Thelma earned the distinction for her community work as past president of the Belmont Shore Business and Professional Women's Association and a founding member of the Legal Secretaries Association.

ACROSS TOWN, the staff of the Doctor's Hospital of Lakewood honored the women's auxiliary with a luncheon at their first meeting of the fall season. The luncheon group made a special recognition of donations made by friends and family of the late Lester Fisher who was a patient at the hospital. The contributions will be going to a scholarship fund in his memory.

MORE ON THE party scene: Les Nason celebrated his 80th birthday with some 75 guests at a bash put on by his wife, Fran. The party was complete with San Francisco pianist Norma Teagarden who made a special trip down to play for Les' octogenarian celebration.

Ranch owner remembers bygone years

Spanish. American families were here on ranches for many years. If anyone needed help, the El Toro Women's Club put a fruit jar in the market. We always raised enough money to take care of the problem.

Coudominiums pepper the hills of Mission Viejo on the horizon. The Bennett ranchhouse faces these hills.

"Everyone around here once raised grain and beans and took them by mule to a warehouse. The lead team of mules wore bells. You could hear them coming to the warehouse from all over the hills, from all the ranches. I knew by the tone of the bells whose team was whose."

Down the road a piece nestles the pleasant home of Avelino Lopez, the ranch foreman.

"Lino's been with us 27 years. He is a superb rancher and irrigator. He came to the ranch as a young boy. His children were born and raised here. Our families grew up together. He may stay on until the whole ranch is developed; then he will have to move somewhere else. Of course he feels bad about it. We all do."

To a stranger walking the ranchland, the little pocket of sycamores and tangled weeds near Aliso Creek which runs through the ranch is no more than an inviting shaded clearing.

creeks. If heavy rains damaged the bridges we sometimes couldn't get out for 24 hours."

She surveys her grassy lawn, the old fashioned rose garden and her beloved trees.

"Harvey and I planted that carob tree near the road 50 years ago. I'm sure they will widen the road, and the tree will go. The apple tree is even older. Seventy years, at least. It bears wonderful apples. I'm not going to stay here when they start tearing out my trees."

"That old shed over there? It's 100 years old. Made of redwood and hand hewn shingles, held together with square nails. It used to house tractors.

"Yes, that old hand gas pump still works. A dozen people at least have stopped by, wondering what we'll do with it when the ranch goes."

Pale green walls and draperies lend a cooling effect inside the ranch house. Splashes of color dance on the walls of the porch as the sun streams through casement windows lined with Frances Bennett's prized collection of antique colored glass tumblers, plates, vases, pitchers and wedding bowls.

"These are all known as 'dust catchers.' But I love them. I didn't think much about antiques until my mother-in-law died and left me some. With six children to raise, I didn't have much time to study about glass collecting, so a friend helped me start. I've been collecting for 30 years."

She wanders through the dining room to the kitchen to make iced tea.

COOL WALK down the orange lanes on a warm El Toro afternoon still beckons Helen Harvey and her mother, Frances Bennett. After escrow closes early in 1978, ranch will be subdivided. And what will become of old hand gas pump still in use at the ranch? It's claimed by a Bennett son.

"This was an apricot camp once. We girls from Santa Ana would come down to pit apricots. It was like a vacation, and we got paid, too. We lived in tent houses and were properly chaperoned. There was a cook house for our meals. The high school boys worked threshers nearby. There were lots of parties among the apricot camps. This is where I met my husband in 1913. I'd been accepted for nurse's training, but Harvey changed all that. He was struggling to keep the ranch going after his father got pneumonia. My father wasn't too happy about our getting married because it meant giving up nurse's training, but I have never regretted it. It has been a beautiful life."

One reason the Bennett ranch has been able to continue its operation longer than the others is its abundance of water. A rush-fringed pond on the land holds half a million gallons of water.

"Years ago, if you stored water the government paid a portion of what it cost to construct a pond. The Agricultural Preserve Act created by the state 10 years ago gave ranches a tax break to farm the land. That deal still stands until the land is sold.

"We were able to keep our orange groves this long because of this reservoir. Wells every 10 acres were not enough.

"There used to be a couple huge widemouth bass in this pond. The countryside around it used to be home for lots of dove, deer and bobcats.

"We think this part of our land around the pond will become a little park. Already some family in that new home there has put its pet ducks in the pond."

Frances Bennett saunters back to her home on the corner, remembering bygone days.

"This corner where the house is was nothing but dirt lanes. During rains we slithered up and down the road. Sometimes we had to be pulled out of the mud by a team of horses. Our groves were between two

We kept our wood stove even though we got an electric one when electricity came in here in 1927. I baked 14-egg angel food cakes a lot in the early years and knew just when to put in the last stick of wood to help finish the cake. We got wood for the stove from our eucalyptus grove on the ranch.

"The fireplace in the living room still heats the house. We don't have central heating. The sun warms it in the morning.

"From 1913 to 1927 I cleaned and polished the lamps. No self-respecting housekeeper had dirty lamps. We heated water outside in a copper tub for the washing in the early years.

"The house is sheltered from the wind, but gets breezes from the beach. The weather is perfect for raising good Valencia oranges. Warm in the day, cool nights. The men in the packing houses used to wait to eat the good El Toro oranges."

She glances across the road to the grove, each tree loaded with new, green fruit following the June harvest.

"My husband's father bought the first 50 acres of this land in 1898 when El Toro was subdivided. We respected each other's property. Nowadays people steal our fruit. Some of the newcomers send their children with sacks to pick oranges. They think they are the only ones, but when hundreds of people have the same idea, it gets to be a serious problem.

"We're fenced on only one side. It would cost more to maintain fences than what they steal. We just figure on not getting any fruit from three to five rows of trees in from the road."

The time is approaching for sorting through a family's accumulation of possessions and treasures spanning several generations. Much will be dispersed among the six Bennett children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, including Harvey Bennett's vast collection of early California maps, books, first editions of California history and photographs.

Frances has not definitely decided where she will relocate, but it will probably be somewhere in Orange County, close to the familiar flatlands and hills but far enough away to avoid witnessing the uprooting of the acreage and the inevitable new construction.

Since it is the last of its era, there is a slim possibility the old ranch house may be saved and moved to Heritage Hill already occupied by El Toro's first two room schoolhouse which was once the Episcopal church, and the Serrano adobe. The El Toro Women's Club is attempting to raise money to move the house when its time comes.

Maybe it had better get out that old fruit jar again.

Teacher sorority sets Founders' Day lunch

Body adapts well to change in sleeping habits

Dear Dr. Menninger:

Because of his job, my 30-year-old husband sleeps only three to four hours a day, four days a week. The other three days, he gets "normal" sleep. He works

dr. walt

about 80 hours a week, the greater portion of it in four days.

He feels he is in good health and has no complaints other than occasional sleepiness. But he has lost 20 pounds in the last six months while on this job. Is this type of sleeping (or lack of sleep) all right over an extended period of time?

I'm concerned about him. He often has a low level of concentration and occasionally "falls asleep" in a chair or on the couch while I'm talking to him.

Nothing I say will make him change. He feels he must do his job even if it means skipping sleep. What can you say about "correct" sleep habits? And what can happen to you if you don't get enough sleep on a regular basis?

Thank you. — Mrs. K. L.

DEAR Mrs. K. L.,

The human being is an extremely adaptable creature, and this is true for sleep habits, too. Through studies of sleep in the last 20 years, we know that there is no one "correct" sleep habit.

People can adapt to different sleeping patterns and function quite well. Although the average young adult sleeps seven and a half hours a day, some people get along on much less.

Also, there is no absolute need for sleep to be taken in one uninterrupted stretch. One can survive on less than the usual amount, if a nap is added. Some persons find a catnap at the letdown period at the end of a workday quite restorative.

You generally do develop a sleep rhythm, and that rhythm does not get turned on and off overnight. Rather, a sleep pattern tends to persist for several days. The constant shifting of your husband's sleep schedule could explain the periods of lowered concentration and falling asleep.

Studies of people who have gone without sleep find behavior resembling drunkenness — slurred speech, mispronunciations. And they can be irritable and difficult to live with. They may remain quite alert when faced with competition, or some incentive or some active, interesting task.

MONOTONOUS or repetitive work, or something which is less important is performed less efficiently by the person who has gone without sleep.

Despite the mental symptoms, sleep loss causes no permanently deleterious physical effects. No important biochemical changes have been found, nor are there abnormalities in heart action, body temperature, basal metabolism, etc.

Summarized one researcher, Nathaniel Kleitman, "It is clear that a person can remain practically awake for as long as 10 days without any detrimental effect on his physical health." Thus, your husband's weight loss is more likely the result of more physical activity on the job and less eating, then lack of sleep.

How long does it take to make up for lost sleep? Actually, a sleep "debt" appears to be paid off with many fewer hours than the hours of lost sleep. That recovery sleep is a deeper sleep than usual.

In closing, your husband's job hours and irregular sleep patterns should not affect his physical health detrimentally. But he should respect your concern, and the "cost" of that pattern on his home life, in deciding whether it is really worth the effort.

Health calendar

Focus is on handicapped

Following is a listing of health-related organizations. To be included, meeting notices must be received in the Life/Style section the Wednesday before publication.

CAPH UNITS

Two chapters of the California Association of the Physically Handicapped Inc. will meet this week.

Beach-Wood chapter has scheduled its program for today from 2 to 5 p.m. at Crippled Children's Society, 3770 E. Willow St.

A film titled, "Get It Together," will be shown. Assemblyman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles/Commerce, will be guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of Rancho chapter at 6:30 p.m. in 500 Assembly Hall, Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, 7601 E. Imperial Highway, Downey.

He will discuss legislation dealing with the needs of the disabled.

DIABETES GROUP

The Long Beach Educational Unit of the American Diabetes Association meets Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room at Los Altos Hospital, 3340 Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Charles Oliverius, D.P.M., an alumnus of the California College of Podiatry, will speak on "Foot Care for the Diabetic."

ORIENTATION

An orientation on Natural Family Planning, a new method of birth control, will take place Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at St. James Annex, Garnet Avenue and Anza Street, Torrance.

The Natural Family Planning method relies on women being taught to become aware of their own fertility and employs no potentially harmful pills or devices.

The research into the program is being conducted at seven Southern California hospitals under a grant from the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Among hospitals participating are Little Company of Mary, Torrance, and St. Joseph's, Orange.

PANEL DISCUSSION

"The Behavioral Disorders of Children and Adolescents" will be the theme of a panel discussion at Del Amo Hospital, 3270 W. Lomita Blvd., Torrance, Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

The conference will attempt to discuss family dynamics which prevent parents from understanding their children and the problems of drug abuse and suicide among the young.

Participating in the round-table are Laurence S. Brody, M.D., former chairman of the Department of Adolescent Psychiatry at Del Amo Hospital; Edwin Caine, M.D., assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at UCLA, specializing in child and adolescent problems; Saul Leopold, M.S.W., director of clinical social work at Del Amo Hospital; Henry G. Moeller, clinical director of the adult psychiatry program at the hospital, and Stephen Staten, M.D., in private practice in the South Bay area.

The program is open to the public free of charge, with advance reservations requested.

New drug cuts angina pectoris incidence

A drug called perhexiline maleate continues to show up well in the treatment of angina pectoris, the severe chest pain associated with coronary heart disease.

Dr. Michael L. Armstrong of Sydney, Australia, reports on 25 angina patients who had not responded to medical treatment and who were on the waiting list for coronary bypass surgery.

These patients were treated with perhexiline maleate in addition to their other therapy.

Results: an 80 percent reduction in the average number of anginal attacks. Also, same thing for reduction of nitroglycerin requirement. Nitroglycerin is a drug used to treat angina.

By the fourth week, six of the patients had no anginal attacks at all. Two cancelled scheduled surgical operations.

The doctor labeled the improvement of the patients as "dramatic."

The drug is also known by the name Pexid.

The report appears in Current Medical Research and Opinion, a medical journal.

Lecithen myth

Lecithin has been touted by the health food industry as effective in lowering blood cholesterol and preventing heart disease.

But, says an authority, there is no scientific evidence at this time to support either of these contentions.

So says Dean C. Fletcher, Ph.D., of Washington State University, Pullman.

Fletcher says lecithin is not an essential nutrient in man since it is made within the body in adequate amounts.

"There is no nutritional or medical reason for supplementation of the diet with it (lecithin)," says Fletcher.

His comments appear in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Avoiding infection

Handwashing with ordinary soap and water before and after contact with a patient is the most important factor in prevention of hospital-acquired infections.

That's on the authority of George F. Mallison of the bureau of epidemiology at the Center for Disease Control.

Hospital employees should be instructed to lather and rub their hands with soapy water for 15 seconds. They should dry their hands with a paper towel and then turn off the water with the towel to avoid contaminating their hands.

Polio in Ghana

Immunization against polio must be given a high priority in Ghana and other tropical countries where the disease is present, researchers say.

The researchers have found that the total number of cases of paralytic polio occurring in the world each year has been reduced by only 25 percent since the advent of the polio vaccine.

And in Ghana, a tropical nation, they found a high prevalence of lameness attributable to polio.

PCA appoints Alexander as executive director

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Michael E. Alexander, currently general manager of the Aman Folk Ensemble, has been named executive director of the Public Corporation for the Arts.

Laura Killingsworth, interim president of the recently reorganized PCA board, announced the appointment Wednesday at a public meeting in the Main Library.

She said, "One reason the PCA has not had a strong voice in the community is that it has not had a strong executive director. We now have such a person. In addition, we want to avoid small committees. On a board with only 15 members, such as this, we want all members to feel free to come to all committee meetings. We will have a total board function."

She also credited John Hyer, manager of the Long Beach Symphony who has served the troubled PCA as interim consultant since Sept. 1. "He has served us absolutely fantastically during these weeks."

Commenting on Alexander's appointment, Hyer told the board and audience, "Time is of the essence. We couldn't tolerate a three to four month time lapse. It was essential to find an executive director immediately."

HE EXPLAINED that a job description was circulated nationally through professional publications and personal contacts. Of the 18 applications, he narrowed the field to 3 primarily by an hour-long, rigorous oral test which covered the complicated business of arts management, both artistic and financial. These applicants he presented to the board for personal interviews Tuesday. "They were three winners. Each would do an outstanding job."

Alexander, 30, manager of the Aman dance group since 1969, built the company from an ensemble with a budget of zero dollars to one with a current arts

quarter-of-a-million dollar budget, Hyer said. His job has required him to be all of these: booking manager, tour coordinator, producer, publicist, personnel and business manager, and performer.

The new executive director will assume his duties here Nov. 1 and will move with his wife and 17-month-old daughter to Long Beach.

The job description gave a salary range of $17,500 to $20,000. Alexander told the board that he is seeking a job with growth opportunity.

ANOTHER PCA job to be filled as quickly as possible is that of secretary to the director. Although there has been no executive director, Carol Anderson has maintained the office as secretary but resigned after her marriage Aug. 11. She is staying on until a replacement is hired.

A THORNY QUESTION facing the board since its four former officers resigned Aug. 11 is that of replacing board members. At the time of the resignation, one vacancy existed because A. James Bravar had accepted the position of dean of the School of Creative Arts at San Francisco State University. Wednesday, Killingsworth read a letter of resignation from board member Judith Musafia who has moved from Long Beach and therefore is disqualified to serve. Thus, there currently are six vacancies.

As originally structured, the board was made up of eight elected members, two each from four categories of the arts groups: dance/drama, visual arts, multiple arts and music. Seven were appointed by the mayor making a total of 15.

The elected members represented 47 arts groups which comprise the Congress of the Arts. The PCA was designed as an umbrella organization for these groups.

Wednesday, Hyer reported that he had met with the mayor to clarify how vacancies will be filled. "The mayor reserves the right to make all appointments and pointed out that in an earlier meeting with the reorganized board he had agreed to the release of $37,500 budgeted for the PCA on the condition that in the future all board members will be appointed. He is seeking strong people to serve. This probably is for expediency: to go back to the Congress of the Arts for election would take time."

TO MEMBERS of the audience who are in Congress of the Arts groups he explained, "Your power is not eroded. You are in the same position (in dealing with the city) as oil companies or any other business. You will have to lobby strongly for your candidates. I agree with the plan at this time, but look forward to the time when a strong Congress of the Arts will have more voice."

Killingsworth added, "The mayor had asked us to submit a list of possible board members. He was delighted with our suggestions and he will listen to suggestions from the Congress of the Arts."

Hyer said Mayor Clark considered present board members as permanent — in other words as though he had appointed them. In addition to Killingsworth they are Vivian Yunker, Virginia Muchmore, Ed Ilyka, Jerome Leff, Beryl Brooks, James Morris, Lois Venne and Fred Ohlendorf. Leff and Ohlendorf did not attend the session Wednesday.

"We are in a 30-day period of transition," said Hyer, "working from two offices, the symphony office and the PCA office. If you phone during this time and are answered by a recording, please be patient. We are reorganizing as quickly as we can."

Added Killingsworth, "We have had a traumatic, difficult period. Our chance to survive as an organization was 1 to 200,000. It is a miracle. We proved to the mayor that we must go forward. We're unique. The only organization of its kind in the United States. We are patterned on no one. Now, we must be a strong organization, effective, available to arts groups, serving for their benefit."

Lyric Trio to perform

The Lyric Trio will open Covenant Presbyterian Church's concert series next Sunday at 4 p.m. in the church sanctuary, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue. Members of the trio are pianist Marilyn Seranton; cellist Delores Thomas; and soprano Sarah Ganz.

Seranton and Thomas will perform "Adagio" by Bach, Sonata, Op. 4 for piano and cello by Kodaly, "Intermezzo" by Granados, "Piece" by Ravel and "Andalusie" by Nin.

Accompanied by Seranton, Ganz will sing four songs by Debussy and an aria from the opera "Fidelio" by Beethoven.

Organist Darrell Orwig will play Prelude and Fugue in D minor by Mendelssohn and "Suite Breve" by Jean Langlais.

There will be no admission charge for the concert but a free-will offering will be received.

VIOLINIST Camilla Wicks 'comes home' for concert.

Lakewood Philharmonia

Wicks, Polay in concert

Camilla Wicks, world-famous violinist and native of Long Beach, will be soloist when Lakewood Philharmonia begins its seventh season Saturday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

To open the program, Bruce Polay will conduct the orchestra in Ravel's "Bolero" and Bela Bartok's "Dance Suite."

Wicks then will play Beethoven's Violin Concerto in D for Violin, Op. 61.

Early this year, Wicks returned from Norway where she filled a three-year appointment by the King of Norway to the position of professor of violin at the University of Oslo. She was chosen over hundreds of applicants. Recently, she bought a home in Carmel where she teaches violin, leaving for frequent concert tours.

WHEN SHE WAS 3, her late father, violinist Ingwald Wicks, placed a violin in her hands. Her mother, Ruby, was a pianist. After only a year of study, she made her first public appearance. In an interview in 1960 Wicks said, "I remember my first public concert when I was 4. It was sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club at Ebell Theater. I popped up out of a big seashell, wearing a pink flower petal dress, and played the Vivaldi Concerto in A minor."

That was the beginning of a prodigious career. When she was 9, she was given a special fellowship to the Juilliard School of Music in New York and five years later made her debut in Hollywood Bowl with the Los Angeles Philharmonic. On her first European concert tour when she was 17, the violinist played 84 concerts.

Her career burgeoned, filled with hundreds of performances in this country and Europe until she moved with her husband and children to Dallas. During this period, she performed less frequently in order to devote more time to her family.

IN RECENT YEARS with her children adults, she has resumed her concert tours but on a less frequent schedule. She has had many recordings in the United States and Europe.

The Philharmonia's season will include six concerts. Future programs will be Feb. 4, May 13, Dec. 3, March 18 and June 17. Season tickets are priced at $13 and $16; single tickets are $3 and $2. For further information, write to Lakewood Philharmonia, P.O. Box 487, Lakewood 90714 or phone 860-5301.

Drawing earns place of its own

Eight artists show diversity of styles, techniques and media in the show which will open Monday at Long Beach City College Fine Arts Gallery, 1901 E. Carson St.

The 26 works in "Drawing: Various Approaches" are by contemporary artists Martha Alf, Ray Bravo, Stuart Caswell, Martin Harden, Don Hendricks, Jerry McMillan, Astrid Preston and Jeffrey W. Rubio. The show will hang through Oct. 28.

In his "Notes on the Exhibition," LBCC art instructor Ladd Terry says that in the past drawing often has been considered as preliminary to a finished work of art. However, during the past 25 years drawing has earned a place of its own and takes precedence in such areas as documentation, concept art, mail art and word art, he adds. It has, he says, "become a tool of expression rather than a self-conscious preoccupation."

Gallery visitors may see the various approaches from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays, and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Wednesdays.

ALICE ASMAR, an artist whose work is at once witty and mysterious, delights in working in many media. She describes her work as "lines and colors in sun, moon, stars, birds, flowers, places, faces, the obvious, the hidden, touching fragments of thoughts and feelings that float in time and space as textures of the imagination, centering on the mysteries of being."

The 15 works she will show at the Senior Eye Art Gallery at Palmetto House, 3501 Cedar Ave., beginning Wednesday were reproduced by Haddad's Fine Arts Inc. Recently, Asmar was invited to show the first worldwide release of her Haddad prints in the International Arts Exhibition on Humor and Satire at Gabrova, Bulgaria. Pinton Preres in France is weaving some of her designs in Aubusson tapestries; they will be released in 1978.

Museum directors and art critics have struggled unsuccessfully to describe this highly individual artist whose works are in private and public collections throughout this country. Some are in executive offices of the Security Pacific International Bank in New York, the Franklin Mint in Pennsylvania, Joseph Magnin in Santa Barbara, the Roswell Museum and Art Center in New Mexico and the Southwest Museum in Los Angeles.

There will be an opening reception Wednesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.; the public is invited. Other hours, through Nov. 30, will be from 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays through Wednesdays.

SO THAT ARTISTS will have early notice, Long Beach Art Association is announcing its open juried Floral Exhibition to be held Nov. 2 through 29. Only work with a floral theme will be accepted for "Springtime in November," an all-media show. It will include not only the art work to be shown in the gallery and adjacent Fireside Room, but also living flowers and ferns provided by flower and plant societies in the area.

Entries for the art show will be received Monday, Oct. 31, from noon to 7 p.m. at the gallery, 155 Queens Way Landing. There will be validated parking across from the Catalina Terminal. Entry fee with pre-registration is $3; for artists who simply walk in with their work it will be $4. Juror will be artist Dorothy Browdy Kushner. For prospectus or entry form write to Long Beach Art Association, P.O. Box 8219, Long Beach 90808.

The public is invited to the opening reception Nov. 2 from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

WATERCOLORS by Muriel Stuart Mosher are on display at Los Altos Branch Library, 5614 Britton Drive, where they may be seen through October. Hours are noon to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays. The library is closed Fridays and Sundays.

It was not until she retired from a business career that the artist could devote her full time to painting. Her work has attracted many viewers — and buyers — who add her paintings to their private collections.

THE OLD WEST comes to life once again in an exhibit scheduled for the Pomeroy Art Gallery, 5651 A. Lincoln Ave., Cypress. There will be a public reception for the artists, Fred Duran and Wes Campbell, Saturday from 7 to 11 p.m. Of Indian descent, Duran was born in Los Angeles. His oil portraits of Navajo, Hopi and other Indians are in the collection of Paramount Studios and private collections of Burt Reynolds, 'RUBBLE VII' was drawn in pencil by Stuart Caswell in 1977. It measures 22 by 28 inches. It may be seen in LBCC exhibit.

James Brodin and Jack Palanca.

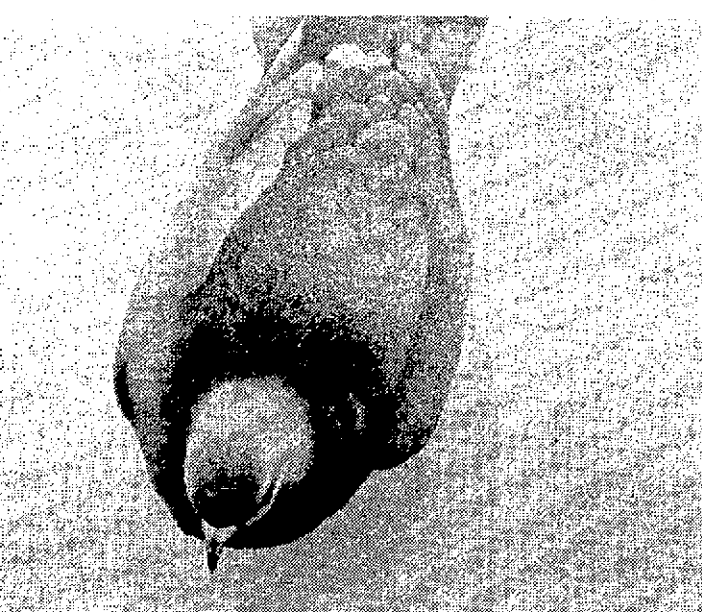

Campbell, a native of Ohio, has tried his hand at mining, cattle ranching, flying and adventuring by freighter to study art and sculpture in European museums.

This exhibit will hang at the Pomeroy Gallery through Nov. 9.

TONY APOSTLE
King Arthur loved quality roast beef

IT HAS LONG BEEN BELIEVED that when the legendary King Arthur and his knights sat at the round table they talked only about great deeds in battle or the rescuing of fair maids in distress.

Not true. They also talked about thick, juicy steaks and great roasts of the finest beef. Those stirring battles and brave rescue missions were hard work that built up roaring appetites. Sometimes the knights spent hours at the round table feasting and quaffing wine or mead from big tankards.

When the people of the Long Beach area want a similar feast, they visit a restaurant dedicated to Arthur and his heroes. It is King Arthur's Steak House on Spring Street just east of Bellflower Boulevard, decorated with shields, lances, banners and other British touches that recall the Arthurian legends.

For over 20 years, King Arthur's most popular entree has been the king of roasts — juicy, savory, tender prime rib au jus. People travel to the restaurant from miles around because they know King Arthur's is the best. Co-owner and host Tony Apostle always keeps this thought uppermost: quality, quality, quality! He buys the finest quality beef. And executive chef Paul Lamoreux, a French-Canadian with 25 years experience in top kitchens, roasts that beef with loving care.

Currently the roast prime rib dinner is on special for $5.45 Sundays through Thursdays from 5 to 9 p.m. That dinner would cost at least $8 elsewhere. The prime rib slice is thick and generous, served with soup du jour and a big tossed salad, a monstrous hot baked potato with all the trimmings and hot bread. That dinner is normally $6.45 and worth every penny. Other highly praised dinners include the steak-lobster combination, $10.50; the steak-crab legs combination, $7.95; abalone steak with almonds, $8.45, and a splendid pepper steak, $7.95, topped with sauteed green peppers, onions and mushrooms.

The artist who performs nightly at King Arthur's piano-bar is Joe (the Great) Cetani. He is a legend because of his ability to play every tune at least 20 different ways. Sometimes he hits the keys with his nose. Other times, he plays the piano standing on his head.

The daily luncheons at King Arthur's are imaginative and different. Among the treats are hot or cold sandwiches with soup or salad for $1.65 plus hot entrees, $2.25 to $2.50, that change daily, such as: Mondays, braised sirloin tips with mushroom sauce; Tuesdays, liver and onions; Wednesdays, lean prime rib bones; Thursdays, grilled steak chips, and Fridays, fish and chips. All come with soup or salad.

SHE IS A PETITE BRUNET with dark eyes. She's Cathy Dimas, chief hostess as well as manager at the Ranch House, 1600 Pacific Coast Highway, Seal Beach.

When Cathy seats the dinner guests at their table, she says with a charming smile: "Hey, we've got a terrific surprise special tonight. Would you like to try it?"

The special is so delicious that it's a sellout nearly every night. Cathy came up with the idea of the surprise special a few months ago. It's determined according to what foods are fresh in the markets. The surprise entree is different every night, such as teriyaki brochette, Pacific red snapper, Swiss steak, beef Stroganoff or a variety of other choices. They are $4.50 to $4.75, served with soup or salad, potato or rice and other items.

For many years, the Ranch House — a large restaurant decorated with many genuine antiques — has featured a nightly dinner special on a schedule that remains the same week after week. Here's the sked: Sundays, Grecian roast chicken with sauce, $4.25; Mondays, juicy, savory, tender prime rib au jus, $4.75; Tuesdays, top-sirloin steak, $4.75; Wednesdays, chicken-fried steak, $4.50; Thursdays, veal parmigiana, $4.75; Fridays, baked halibut, $4.95, and Saturdays, choice tournedos of beef, $5.95.

Each of those specials is a top value because of its quality, freshness and the cooking skills of No. 1 chef Ramon Gomez. Young Ramon is conscientious, hard-working and is never happier than when he's planning something interesting for the Ranch House's customers to taste. He receives numerous compliments for his cioppino, a robust Italian seafood stew which is loaded with fresh vegetables, spices, herbs and a variety of seafoods, including fish, clams in the shell, crab leg, a piece of lobster, shrimp and scallops. It's a meal by itself, served a la carte for $6.95. Included is plenty of hot garlic bread. Cioppino connoisseurs like to dip the bread in the stew.

Open for luncheon, dinner, cocktails and entertainment, the Ranch House is owned by Mike Comminos, who also owns the completely redecorated Clover Room restaurant on Woodruff Avenue near Carson Street. The main dining room at the Ranch House is being remodeled. When the project is finished before long, the walls will be decorated entirely with mirrors and all the tables will be in booths. Temporarily, the customers are being seated in the rear dining and banquet rooms and in the cocktail lounge.

Flea Market Finds

Pitcher prices silver lined

Q. "My most recent find is a lovely silverplated syrup pitcher with matching underplate." — Louise, Binghamton, N. Y.

A. Early silverplated syrup pitchers bore more than a slight resemblance to English milk pots. Those manufactured between the 1850s and 1870s came complete with their very own drip plate. However, the drip plate all but disappeared following the introduction of the patent cut-off on the interior of the pitcher.

Syrup pitchers, displaying chased, engine turned or plain forms of decoration, sold for a mere $5 each in the mid-1800s. They fairly poured out of factories in various styles until about 1900, when they suddenly fell from favor. Nowadays, they are anything but slow movers despite their $30 to $40 price tags.

Q: "Did we bag a bargain when we purchased a mahogany sleigh bed for $125?" — Madge and Hank, Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Cabinetmakers introduced this Empire style bed to American consumers about 1820. The term "sleigh bed" is most descriptive, for it had a headboard and footboard of equal height, curving outward in a manner suggestive of a horse drawn sleigh. Formal furniture makers showed a preference for mahogany or walnut, while country crafters were obliged to utilize a variety of softwoods, particularly pine. Your discovery rates as a fortunate find, for mahogany models glide out of antique shops, even at prices hovering in the $350 bracket.

Q. "Has the Lalique 1965 annual plate performed admirably in the plate collecting field?" — Mr. and Mrs. T.M., Murfreesboro, Tenn.

A. Plate collectors greeted the first annual crystal plate from this prestigious French factory with expected enthusiasm in 1965. There were only 2,000 plates comprising this truly limited first edition. And they were offered for an affordable $25.

Their "Two Birds" plate has really soared in value for rarely is one offered nowadays for under $1,350. The Lalique Annual Plate, 1966, fetches a respectable $200, while the Annual Plate for 1967 sells for about $125.

Q. "We would be most grateful for any assistance from you regarding prices on antique traps." — Don and Mary, Seattle, Wash.

A. Flea market browsers are discovering that antique traps can be quite catching. Value guide: bear trap, Newhouse No. 15, $160; beaver trap, double-spring, $45; bobcat trap, interlocking teeth, $50; box trap, handwrought, circa 1880, $50; gopher trap, spring loaded, $6; mole trap, circa 1890, $7; mouse trap, "The Delusion", tin, circa 1877, $50; wolf trap, double spring model, $50; wolverine trap, "Sutter", circa 1890, $45.

Appraise your antiques with Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide, "The ABC's of Victorian Antiques," Dodd, Mead & Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Crown Syndicate, Inc., No. 5 Crown Road, Weatherford, Texas 76086. Please include a check or money order.

At Wit's End
No treasure expendable

I was going to clean the house a few years back, but I thought, "What the heck. Might as well wait until the children are grown."

The other day my husband said to me, "When are you going to get rid of the potty seat with the ducks on it in the hall bathroom?"

"When the baby no longer needs it."

"The baby" is a sophomore at USC.

"He comes home on holidays, doesn't he?"

"Look," he said, "you're being unrealistic to hang onto all this junk. When I get home tonight, I want to see how strong you really are. Just close your eyes and start tossing."

I wanted to throw away my report cards from the first eight grades — I really did — but I rationalized if they ever fell into the wrong hands, I'd be ruined.

I toyed with the idea of discarding three maternity skirts with the cut-out fronts and the drawstrings, but the way my body was going, I figured it was only a matter of months before I could turn them around and wear them backwards.

I wavered over whether or not to toss out a signature of Imogene Coca on a cocktail napkin, a linen kitchen calendar from 1969, and a french fry basket that needed a handle.

On some things, there was no decision to be made... the melted candles, the rain-soaked Halloween masks, a single boot, and 35 used adhesive bows from Christmas packages... all would be saved.

Other things I wasn't so decisive about... the pre-hips bikini suit that would make wonderful coasters. The 15 navel bands (still in pre-soak) that would come in handy if one of the kids suffered from an umbilical hernia.

But I was ruthless. At the end of the day I was proud as I stood beside four neatly stacked boxes of junk!

My husband's eyes glistened when he saw it. "I told you you could do it," he said. "It's just a matter of being realistic and saying, 'I'm never going to use this again.' Wait a minute! Are those my golf scorecards from pre-Pearl Harbor? And the composition books from the first class I ever taught? Good Lord, woman, what are you doing with my loafers with the pennies in them? And my porkpie hat? And the picture of Gale Storm that came with my billfold and

Ira Corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: We held this hand at our weekly rubber bridge session and missed the slam. How do you suggest the slam be reached? — Cold Feet, Peru, Ind.

Most times it's best to cover; other times it's not. No general rule can always point the way.

Dear Mr. Corn: Contract bridge is based on the former game of Whist. In Whist, how was the trump suit determined? — Old Timer, Raleigh, N.C.

Answer: In Whist there was no bidding. The trump suit was established by the dealer who turned his last card face up on the table to make that suit trumps. After play to the first trick, the exposed card could be returned to dealer's hand.

Dear Mr. Corn: How many world championships have The Aces played in? How many have they won? — Fan Mail, San Antonio

Answer: The Aces played in five world championships as a full team. They won in 1970 and 1971 and were runners up in 1972-73-74. In 1975 (Bermuda), the U.S. team was second and all members of that team were Aces or former Aces.

In 1976, the U.S. team defeated the Italian Blue Team with two former Aces on the team. In seven out of the eight years, I served as captain or deputy captain and Joe Musumeci (Aces' Coach) served as U.S. team coach.

Answer: The bidding could go in various ways and many would have trouble identifying the key controls. A possible rubber bridge sequence is:

West East
2♦ (forcing) 1♠
Pass

The jump to six diamonds over Blackwood shows one ace and a void in a suit higher ranking than the agreed trump suit. In duplicate, East might show a preference for hearts because of the higher score potential in hearts.

Dear Mr. Corn: Is there a rule that requires one to cover an honor with an honor? — Appellate Court, South Holland, Ill.

Answer: A general beginner's rule is cover an honor with an honor. However, this is only a beginner's guideline and there is nothing mandatory about it. Covering honors is a changing situation which depends upon particular circumstances.

Advice to the Taxlorn

Best to sell before marriage

DEAR Mr. Smith: In 1973, I sold my home and took an over-65 tax exclusion which reduced the cost basis of my new home.

I am now engaged to a lady (over 65) who has her separately owned home which she plans to sell after our marriage. Then we will both reside in my home. 1) Will my over-age 65 tax exclusion four years ago prevent my wife (to be) from taking an over-age-65 tax exclusion on her next income tax report? 2) Also, would she be eligible to take the tax exclusion if we decide to file a joint return? — R.S.H.

You are incorrect in your belief that the tax basis of your present house was reduced because you claimed the once-in-a-lifetime exclusion years ago.

But it may have been reduced if the acquisition of your present home resulted in a separate tax deferral.

No, your new wife will not be able to claim her once-in-a-lifetime credit, no matter whether you file separately, or jointly, and even if she is otherwise eligible and never claimed the exclusion before.

The law says that neither an individual, nor a married couple, can claim that credit more than once. With fancy interpretation, the Treasury Department says that your fiancée had better sell while single. After you marry, she can't claim the credit even once. Because you once claimed the old $20,000 exclusion, your new wife would be foreclosed from claiming the $35,000 exclusion she is entitled to. But if you later get divorced or separated, she's back in the ball game and can claim the credit.

DEAR Mr. Smith: In 1959, I inherited a piece of property in Germany worth $3,516 then. In December, 1976, I sold it for $23,116. I received a check on Jan. 14, 1977. I have already paid a capital gain tax in Germany. Is this a tax-free inheritance or do I have to report a long-term capital gain on $19,600? — H.E.W.

If you are a U.S. citizen or resident, you must report the gain on the sale. Make sure that $3,516 was the full value at date of death in 1959. If not, your gain may be less than $19,600. Obtain IRS Publication 514 to determine if some or all of the German tax can be claimed as a credit on Form 1040. IRS form must be filled out to claim the credit.

DEAR Mr. Smith: I have a few questions for you. 1) My husband and I teach at local universities but were on sabbatical leaves in 1973, teaching at National Taiwan University at reduced salaries. Why did the state disallow $1,218 of our moving expense — the part not reimbursed? Your article said it was all deductible. 2) We inherited properties in 1972 and applied to the Court to sell one of them to pay inheritance taxes. We sold it two and a half months after court release and had a short-term loss. Why does IRS say it's long term? As a result, we are allowed only half the loss? — D.P.W.

I have a few answers for you. 1) If your Taiwan income was included on your 1973 state (California) return, you should have claimed all your transportation and Taiwan expenses as either business travel or as education expense. Depending on the precise facts, your earned income while living abroad may have been fully or partially tax-free, federal and state. You should read carefully, IRS free publications 54, 463 and 520. 2) The law states that any gain or loss on the sale of inherited property is long term, but that should not reduce your deductible loss by 50%, and here's why:

Real estate sold soon after the owner's death, is either income or business property, or it is real estate held for sale. Either way, a loss would be a fully deductible, ordinary loss. Any sales commissions, title costs, etc., that you may have paid were, before 1977, specifically allowable, even if the estate deducted from them on Form 706 to compute federal estate tax.

Also, when the estate was closed, there may have been other losses and expenses of the estate you (and any other beneficiaries) would be entitled to deduct. Taxpayers with difficult facts and issues may have to protest and ask for hearings with District Conference or with the Appellate Division (federal) and with the Franchise Tax Board (state).

DEAR Mr. Smith: In respect to the death of a spouse, do I have it correct that half the estate is not taxed by IRS (if the half is $250,000 or less) and the other half is taxed? Also, is there some exemption on the remaining taxable half? Also, I do not understand — "white half the value of lifetime gifts between spouses are tax free". — L. L.

You are correct about federal estate tax, but only if the spouse who survives receives the half of the estate that is not to be taxed. The "taxable" half is further reduced by the exemption (currently for 1977 $120,000), as well as certain other costs and expenses. Annual gifts to a spouse up to $3,000 are completely tax free. The gifts each year after 1976 that exceed $3,000 are added up to a maximum of $100,000, and half is taxable in the estate of the donor, since federal gift tax is deferred on the first $100,000 gifts to a spouse.

The workshop

Ice cream stick creations are fast becoming a popular modern folk art. Every member of the family can participate in this easy craft, particularly with our full-size patterns.

All you need are sticks (readily available in craft shops, so you don't have to eat too much ice cream!), some glue, scrap wood, cloth and scissors. We show you step-by-step how to convert such throwaway items as coffee cans and margarine containers into the attractive items pictured.

The Hanging Planter, Wishing Well and the Pagoda Planter are created by fastening a can to a base and gluing the sticks around it. The covered basket is made by simply gluing sticks onto a wooden base. Our step-by-step photos and instructions will guide you through this simple handicraft.

To order the Craft Stick Projects, Pattern #611, send $2 (includes first class postage and handling). Handicraft bonus — order our special Craft Packet, C-37 (five different handicraft patterns ranging from string art to wall-hangings) all for only $3.75. Old mill lives on as hotel

By Herb Shannon
I.P.T. Travel Editor

BENMILLER, Ontario — Water power was the life blood of this Canadian pioneer village 125 years ago. The rushing streams of the Maitland River and Sharpes Creek turned the wheels of its wool and flour mills, providing the industrial endproducts of the fertile farm region on the eastern shore of Lake Huron.

Today industry has bypassed the town. Grain is trucked to the towering lakeside elevators of nearby Goderich for shipment via the St. Lawrence Seaway. The wool processing machinery which made Benmiller blankets famous around the world is long gone.

But the waterwheel of the four-story former flour mill on the river bank still turns. Its non-polluting energy source generates electric power to heat the swimming pool, sauna and radiant bathroom floor tiles of the new hotel on the floors above. The River Mill and the old Woolen Mill 100 yards upstream are now the complementary components of a unique rustic resort known as Benmiller Inn.

BOTH OF the historic structures were resurrected in 1975, after decades of disuse. Machinery was stripped out; the buildings were renovated inside and out; contemporary conveniences were installed. The result is a luxurious rural retreat on 75 acres of glorious wooded wonderland.

Because the basic original structures were preserved, no two of the 26 rooms of the Benmiller Inn are alike in size, shape or decor. Rafter beams angle rakishly in the upper floors. Furniture pieces are adapted from portions of authentic looms. Artistic light fixtures on close inspection prove to be composed of leftover spare parts for mill machines.

A self-service elevator is a modern concession in the River Mill. Drapery and bedspreads are linen replicas of old flour sack prints. The ground floor of the Woolen Mill houses an inconspicuous reception desk, a lounge bar and solarium in addition to two restaurants deserving of their local popularity. Dinner for two, with a drink before and wine during, will wound the wallet in the vicinity of $30.

AS AN alternative to paying for meals separately from the $48 daily double rate, the hotel offers package plans during the week which include accommodations and meals for three days from $145. For those on the run, the one-night room rent in the River Mill includes a get-away Continental breakfast of a fresh-baked loaf of bread and fruit juice, plus unlimited quantities of coffee, tea, creamer, butter and jam. A 1936-style non-automatic toaster is supplied in the room.

Benmiller Inn operates year around. Rainbow trout stocked in the pond behind the 25-foot dam above the Woolen Mill delight fisherfolk in summer. Coho salmon run in the river autumn and spring. Skating on the pond and cross-country skiing on nature trails in the forest preserve keep the action alive in winter.

The last of the working water-wheels in the village also runs all year. But the power of its 1910 generator does not extend to all devices of the 1970s. Instead of air conditioning, the Inn provides se-date ceiling fans of a bygone era. And a shelf of books in every room offers another old-fashioned idea in place of television.

Canadian travel specials

Air Canada will offer optional bargain-priced ground packages with its popular Charter Class fares from now through April 30. Passengers booking these flights may make special low-cost hotel and car reservations at the same time.

Charter Class Canada fares apply between Canadian destinations which are at least 700 miles apart. The low-cost round trip fares equal the one-way regular economy fare plus $31.

Banff season goes bangg

Banff, Western Canada

The Banff Springs Hotel looks like a French castle dropped in the majestic Canadian Rockies. "Actually we say it is Scotch baronial," says the Canadian Pacific Hotels' public relations man.

It's imposing. Looks much like the Frontenac in Quebec. Gabled windows and Norman spires. Set at the splashy meeting of the Bow and Spray rivers.

It's been here 47 years. And with Lake Louise and the great glaciers of the Columbia Ice Fields, it's brought millions of tourist dollars to Canada.

Not only American dollars. The hotel has 534 rooms. "And we are absolutely full," says the manager. "We have 1,028 guests and we've had to turn down requests."

Of the lucky 1,028, it looked like half had marched right off the Ginza. Japanese are the world travelers today. Since they travel in groups, they tend to stand out.

They come in bunches.

A tour director said: "Japanese prefer to travel in groups. I don't think I've ever seen a couple traveling alone. They began as children on school expeditions. Always with a leader holding up an identifying flag — so they don't get mixed with another group."

ROOMS HERE are $42 to $56. (The better the view of the rivers, the higher the price.) Three restaurants. Excellent food but not inexpensive.

Americans get a small break: We buy the Canadian dollar for 92 cents U.S. Both currencies are used.

You hand the bartender an American $10 bill. He takes it and puts the full Canadian exchange on the bar. Then he takes out the $3.

Like all Canada, Canadian and American coins are used interchangeably: Dime for dime, nickel for nickel. They don't try to work out bank exchange differences except in bills or travel checks.

Usual one-week tourist route: Air Canada to Calgary. (Use the cut-rate ITT fares. A travel agent can explain it to you.) To Banff, 81 miles by car or bus. One full day to visit the ice fields. To Lake Louise for a day and night. You can leave a "sunrise call." If the sun is coming up on the lake, they'll call you in time to get up and see it.

Want a stack of scenic folders and costs on this area? Write Travel Alberta, 10065 Jasper Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

Might ask for ski information. This is the big ski country and there's a lot of cross-country skiing. (The kind where you push along on the level instead of sliding downhill and breaking a leg.)

Dear Abby

His line is poison

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and I'm going with a dude who just turned 18. He says he loves me and wants to marry me some day, but we fight almost every time we're together because he keeps trying to talk me into going all the way with him.

I told him I was saving myself for marriage and I wasn't going to change my mind, but he keeps trying to break down my resistance.

Abby, I really love this guy, but if he keeps hassling me to go all the way, I don't know what I'll do. How can I hold him off without losing him for good? — HANGING IN THERE

DEAR HANGING: Let's get one thing straight. A fellow who loves a girl doesn't hassle her to do something that's against her principles. If you lose him because you can't hold him off, you'll be lucky. Hold out for orange blossoms. He's offering poison ivy.

DEAR ABBY: Most men think nothing of wearing a suit for four or five years — or even longer. So will you please tell me why a woman won't wear last year's dress? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Some don't want to. And others can't.

DEAR ABBY: I have a darling 5-year-old granddaughter I'll call Lisa. My son is Lisa's father, but he and Lisa's mother were never married and do not live together. Lisa's mother has lived with one man after another. Right now, the one she's living with belongs to a motorcycle gang.

You wouldn't believe the terrible filth this child lives in. She's dirty and hungry much of the time, and sleeps on a filthy mattress (which she wets) amid roaches and mice. She also has a chronic kidney condition. We live 85 miles away, and Lisa's mother sends her to visit us occasionally. When it's time to take her home, she cries and begs to stay with us.

Our doctor has prescribed medicine for the child's kidney ailment, but her mother "forgets" to give it to her.

We appealed to the Child's Protective Service in the community where Lisa lives, but were told that since our son was never married to the child's mother we are not the child's grandparents, so it is none of our business! What can we do? — FRANTIC IN ARIZONA

DEAR FRANTIC: This is clearly a case of child abuse. Had you disclosed

your name and address, I would have reported it promptly. I urge you to phone PARENTS ANONYMOUS at this toll-free number: 1-800-421-0353, and tell them Abby told you to call. And write again to let me know what is done. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people place so much importance on manners? From the time kids learn to walk and talk, adults hassle them about manners and being polite.

I don't see what good it does to stand up when an older person or lady comes into the room. And there are dozens of other rules that come under the heading of "manners" that make no sense at all.

Maybe you can explain it to me. — DON'T GET IT

DEAR DON'T: To answer your question, no one said it better than the late and great Amy Vanderbilt:

"Good manners are the traffic rules for society in general. Without good manners, living would be chaotic, human beings unbearable to each other. Reduced to a phrase, good manners is consideration of other people in respect to their feelings, their safety, their privacy and their full social rights and privileges."

[LITTON] It's A Game

Make this exciting Christmas season the best yet by taking advantage of this great offer from the Columbia Record & Tape Club! Take your pick of ANY 11 of the records or tapes shown here—they're yours for only $1.00, plus shipping and handling. And just look at the selection you have to choose from... latest best-sellers, oldies but goodies, year-round favorites... music to suit every taste. Each one will make an ideal gift for someone on your Christmas list... or an exciting addition to your very own collection!

To order your 11 selections, simply mail the application in an envelope, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's $1.00 for your first 11 records or tapes, plus 86¢ to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy as few as 8 more selections (at regular Club prices) in the coming three years... and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

Once the Club opens every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternatives from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened... the selections you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $6.98 or $7.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

You'll be eligible for our bonus plan upon completing your enrollment agreement—a plan which enables you to continue getting the records and tapes you want at the greatest savings possible! So act now—mail the application today!

THE BIBLE

Says

J. T. Smith

JWs ALSO CLAIM INSPIRATION

Just like the Mormons and many other religious groups today, the Jehovah's Witnesses claim inspiration from God today. This will be proven by some questions asked in a Scotland court trial held in November, 1954. A Jehovah's Witness sued the Ministry of Labour and National Service to keep from being drafted into National Service. It was a test case brought by the Society, actually, to set a precedent for future Witnesses, as they have done in this country. Those who testified for the Society were Fred Franz, the Vice-President; Hayden C. Covington, the head of the legal counsel of the Society at the time; Grant Suiter, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Society; A. P. Hughes, the British Branch Servant; and Douglas Walsh, the Congregational Servant that brought the suit. In this article and others to follow, we will be quoting from the trial and note some of the answers given to direct questions about the JWs teachings.

Q. Who is responsible for the interpretation in case of doubt, or in general, of scriptural writings for the guidance of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Jehovah God is the interpreter, but he guides his people upon this earth, and in this case the editorial committee of the Society, they study the Scriptures continually, and they examine and re-examine the evidence as it appears, and under this Divine guidance with the help of the Holy Spirit they arrive at the understanding of the Scriptures (Fred Franz, Scotland Trial, pp. 22-25).

Also, in this connection, Charles Taze Russell, the founder of the JWs, wrote six volumes of Scriptures Studies and said of this work: "Furthermore, not only do we find that people cannot see the divine plan in studying the Bible by itself, but we see also that if anyone lays the Scripture Studies aside . . . and ignores them and goes to the Bible alone, though he has understood his Bible for ten years, our experience shows that within two years he goes into darkness (The Watch Tower, Sept. 15, 1910, page 298). This is interesting in view of the fact that the Society has now rejected these writings of Russell. Wouldn't that mean, according to Russell, that they have rejected God-inspired writings? Yes! Wouldn't that mean that they are in darkness? Yes!

Should she keep crippled foot?

Girl faces toughest decision

Debbie Phillips is facing a choice between two heart's desires that is unique for anyone. It's basically a choice between horse-shoes and dancing slippers.

She must soon choose between continuing her highly successful and beloved avocation as an expert horsewoman—and wearing a pair of matched shoes for the first time in her life.

Seventeen-year-old Debbie is the victim of a rare birth defect that left one leg half the length of the other and an undersized foot where a knee would normally be. She walks with a metal brace strapped around her waist.

In spite of this "difference" (she does not consider herself handicapped), Debbie has become an award-winning equestrian, as well as an outstanding competitor in half-a-dozen other active sports.

Part of her dramatic story, with Debbie starring as herself, will be told in "I Can," the premiere broadcast of "The Winners," a series of monthly half-hour dramatic specials directed to young viewers, Thursday at 3 p.m. on Channel 2.

Drama is an everyday occurrence to this redoubtable teen-ager. But the matter of the shoes, as she enters young adulthood, is her current Big Question.

"The problem is," explains Debbie, matter-of-factly, "that I am not sure how an artificial leg would fit into my everyday schedule. If I were not so involved in the horse show world, I am positive that I would have one right now."

The change would require amputation of her small, undersized foot so that her leg would fit into the knee socket of an artificial limb. This would interfere with riding, because her foot aids the support of her body weight in the stirrup.

"It would probably be the greatest thrill of my life to look down and see a pair of shoes or a pair of skates the same size on my own two feet," she says. "For the first time in my life, I would be able to bend both legs and walk with the same grace that most young ladies do."

Debbie admits that it is probably the hardest decision she will ever have to make. Is it going to be her life-long desire of a career with horses, or is it going to be that fighting desire to be like everyone else?

While she ponders that decision, Debbie is talking with experts, both medical and equestrian, about some kind of special equipment that would solve both problems.

"I CAN," says Debbie Phillips, a 17-year-old with a birth defect who plays herself in the story of her determination to overcome her "difference" and become an equestrian champion.

"After 45 days in intensive care, I don't know how we could have paid my medical bills without Blue Shield's Coronet 365."

Calvin and Evelyn Lum, Niland, California.

Coronet 365

"When we moved from Hawaii four years ago our health coverage ran out . . . and during that time our daughter spent 14 days in the hospital, and we had to pay a $7,000 medical bill. We decided then we wouldn't settle for anything less than a health plan that included not only basic coverage but also catastrophic coverage for the really big bills."

"Last winter I went to the hospital where they gave me 30 minutes to live. After 45 days and three different operations I'm back home . . . without having to worry about the bills."

"We're farmers, and we never know if weather might wipe out a crop. But we are confident that medical expenses won't wipe us out financially. We picked Blue Shield's Coronet 365, and I'm glad we did. I think everybody needs that kind of protection." Evelyn Lum, Niland, California.

Fearless forecast

Critic picks hits, misses

By Jay Sharbutt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's cancellation of "Sanford Arms," as reported Thursday, suddenly reminded us that once again it's time for the annual Fearless Forecast on the new, somewhat had television season.

As in the past, we, ah, guess which new series will poop or prosper. "Sanford," of course, already is disqualified from the forecast.

As in the past, all new-show forecasts are made without benefit of tea leaves or their equivalent ratings. The forecasts now begin.

SUNDAY — "On Our Own," starting today on CBS, concerns two young ladies who work in an advertising agency. They'd be wise not to plan any Christmas sales campaigns.

MONDAY — CBS' "Young Dan'l Boone" will be permanently lost in the woods by November. "Rafferty," a medicine show, also will expire then, but "Betty White" gets a full season, maybe two.

TUESDAY — CBS' "Fitzpatricks," a close-knit family, will not be around for Thanksgiving dinner. But "Lou Grant" and his newspaper are good for at least a season's circulation.

No call yet for a new Tuesday family, NBC's "Mulligan Stew," airing Oct. 25. But ABC's not-for-all-the-family "Soap" will float until January, then assuredly gurgle down the drain.

WEDNESDAY — NBC's "Oregon Trail" will be covered over before December, likewise "Big Hawaii," which started on aloha note.

THURSDAY — NBC's "CHiPs," a motorcycle hour, roars into oblivion in November, at which time "Rosetti and Ryan" will be disbarred. "Man From Atlantis," in what seems a salvage operation, moves to Tuesdays on Oct. 18. But the man from Atlantis will sink for keeps in December.

At ABC, "Carter Country" will be plowed under by January. A month earlier, Redd Foxx, who made a much publicized network shift last spring, will prove that NBC's loss was ABC's loss.

FRIDAY — CBS' modernized "Wonder Woman" and new "Logan's Run" obviously aimed at the "Star Wars" trade. But The Force is not with them. Out they go in November.

SATURDAY — A similar fate awaits CBS' "We've Got Each Other." But it'll take at least another month before ABC's "Operation Petticoat" is pink-slipped and "Love Boat" joins the Titanic.

Ah, there's good news for viewers who hate "Tonight" but dug "Fernwood 2-Night," the syndicated Norman Lear series that ran 13 weeks this summer in only 31 markets.

Lear's office says the show, a spoof of talk shows, will start taping again at the end of this year, with comic Martin Mull back at the podium.

Rich people buy new houses.
Smart people remodel their old ones.

When you buy new, you're paying an inflated price for a structure of unproven quality. But when you remodel, you're simply making something that you already know is good... better!

We at Alamo have been making Southland houses better for over 9 years. People depend on our remodeling services for several simple, but important, reasons:

- SAFETY... every job is individually bonded. Protects you from labor or material liens and assures your job will be completed.
- SERVICES... our creative designing ability is confined when you visit any of our beautiful showrooms. Of course, we give free estimates and home consultation.
- EXPERIENCE... Alamo builds more jobs than 99% of the remodeling contractors in the United States. No business can do this unless they are selling a quality product at a fair price.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I have heard a strong rumor that sometime next year Jimmy Carter will pardon John Mitchell and Bob Haldeman. Is it true that Carter will not permit these two men to rot in jail while Nixon enjoys the daily golf and swimming and the other delights of the sporting life in San Clemente?—E.L.P., Long Beach, Cal.

A. Carter has the right to pardon Mitchell and Haldeman at any time and may do so in the future. But only Carter knows whether he entertains any such intention. Mitchell and Haldeman are not rotting in jail. They are working on their respective books. As for Nixon, life for him is no tea party. He may have earned $1 million as his share of the David Frost interviews. He may earn another $2-3 million in royalties from his forthcoming memoirs. But his heart is heavy and, as a primarily mental man, his conscience must surely twinge.

HOWARD COSCELL

Q. What mystical hold does Howard "The Mouth" Cosell have that he continues to work for ABC Sports especially when he irritates so many fans?—Glenn A. Peil, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A. Cosell is knowledgeable, builds up the people who work with him, has become a TV celebrity by attracting and repelling many television viewers.

He is not bland. His voice and style stimulate emotions, some positive, some negative. Roone Arledge, his boss at ABC, considers him valuable to the network. That is the extent of his "mystical hold."

Q. Doesn't Bert Lance have enough information on his fellow Georgians in the White House to pull the plug and sink the Carter Administration?—S.L., Alexandria, Va.

A. T. Bertram Lance is the last man in the world to pull the plug of vengeance. Despite all that has happened, he remains one of Carter's closest friends.

Q. Is Bette Midler going to play the life of that weirdo, freaked-out Janis Joplin in the movies?—T.L., Marble Falls, Tex.

A. Twentieth Century-Fox plans to star Bette Midler in a film based somewhat on the life of the late Janis Joplin.

PHYLLIS DAVIS AND DEAN MARTIN

Q. Is there any chance that at 60 Dean Martin will marry a young chick, Phyllis Davis?—Kay Silver, Clifton, N.J.

A. Over the years Dean Martin has been partial to marriage. He's had three to date, will undoubtedly, as a creature of habit, progress to a fourth. Whether Phyllis Davis will prove the lucky winner is uncertain at this time. Mr. Martin has been known to change his loves.

Q. How many Senators and Representatives were offered gifts, girls, campaign contributions, and free trips to South Korea by South Korean lobbyists? And haven't the lobbyists from Taiwan and Israel been offering the same inducements for years?—D.E., Washington, D.C.

A. It's been estimated that more than 100 Representatives and Senators were approached by South Korean government lobbyists. How many accepted various contributions Leon Jaworski and his staff will determine in the weeks to come. Taiwanese and Israeli lobbyists have also waged lobbying campaigns, but not as blatantly.

Q. About the late Groucho Marx—did he really drive his three wives to drink? Was he an impossible man to live with?—A.H., Dayton, Ohio.

A. The truth about Groucho is that he was not a particularly good husband. His three marriages ended in recrimination and acrimony. In a manner of speaking, he wore brass knuckles on his tongue. From time to time he could not resist the temptation of using his knife-sharp wit to humiliate even those he supposedly loved.

Q. Whatever happened to that beautiful Chinese CBS news reporter, Connie Chung?—Helen Ho Walker, Agawam, Mass.

A. Miss Chung lives in Hollywood, co-anchors the news programs with Joe Benti and Maury Povich on KNXT-TV, the CBS station in Los Angeles.

Q. I cannot believe that Tatum O'Neal is now paid $40,000 a week as an actress. Is this so?—Nina Moore, Los Angeles.

A. Tatum O'Neal is paid by the picture. The Superior Court in Los Angeles recently okayed her $400,000 contract for a 10-week stint in "International Velvet," a sequel to "National Velvet" in which Elizabeth Taylor starred as a child.

Q. Why won't the Russians sell arms to Egypt? Is it because Brezhnev dislikes Egypt's President Sadat?—C. V., Ocala, Fla.

A. Brezhnev believes that Sadat will be unable to survive Egypt's mounting economic difficulties, sees no reason to sell arms to Egypt, which under Sadat has a pro-American, anti-Soviet foreign policy. The belief is widespread in Europe that Sadat will be overturned unless Saudi Arabia or the United States provides Egypt with large transfusions of cash and credit.

JULIET PROWSE

Q. Juliet Prowse, the beautiful dancer who used to go with Frank Sinatra and Fred Astaire—what's happened to her? I don't see her in films anymore. —Louise Franks, Bayonne, N.J.

A. Juliet Prowse is married to John McCook. They have a 5-year-old son, Seth. Juliet earns about $1 million annually, dancing in the Las Vegas hotels formerly owned by Howard Hughes. She works about five months a year.

HANDWRITING ANALYSIS

Intelligence Report recently

asked James Bruno, a graphologist and professor at UCLA, to analyze the handwriting (above) of "this government employee."

Bruno, who has analyzed handwriting for think-tanks, lawyers, universities and corporations, was told nothing more of the subject's background.

Herewith his report: "The subject is obviously a man of strong ego, resourceful inner strength and great determination. He is not a man easily discouraged. He is sensitive but hides his sensitivity and tenderness.

"His handwriting indicates ambivalence. Most probably he is shy in private but appears on the surface to react openly with people. He is a man with an inner life who lives in private worlds he shares with few people, probably his wife and his children.

"He is well-organized and is probably an engineer, a military officer, a leader of men.

"He has an inquiring mind, will seek out diverse opinions; but once he makes up his mind, he is stubborn, resolute and adamant. At the same time, he also has the qualities of compassion and idealism. The slight slant of the handwriting is indicative of a man who plays his cards close to his vest. He is capable of great self-control and self-discipline. He is basically goal-oriented but capable of adroit maneuver to achieve his ends. He is capable of teaching and preaching and probably does.

"In many ways his handwriting shows he isn't the open, lay-it-all-out personality he appears to be. His is a complex personality. He can be uncompromising and crusading. One suspects that his obvious self-confidence may be compensatory for feelings of inferiority in certain fields. He may be a small-town boy in the big city.

"He chooses friends carefully and has only a very few to whom he is devoted and endlessly loyal.

"Subject appears to be a self-made man who takes things step by step. Given information that he is a 'government employee' prompts the prediction that he can rise to the top of his department, if, in fact, he is not already there."

The handwriting, of course, is Jimmy Carter's.

BANKING HABITS

A survey of financial services in four different markets of the U.S. by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., reveals that the most desired of six banking services is free checking, followed in order by drive-in banking, evening and Saturday banking hours, cash machines, automatic loan arrangements, and free credit cards.

The survey also reveals that three out of every 10 customers switch banks because of deficiencies in human relations or personal service.

Of the customers who switched, 19% did so because of errors in their accounts; 16% because of poor service; 13% because of rude or unhelpful employees, and about 12% to get higher interest rates.

BREAST CANCER

According to Dr. Theodore C. Bernstein, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, breast cancer will develop in one of every 15 women.

"In advising women about their chances of getting breast cancer," he says, "a physician should not lean too heavily on the statistics of risk. One cannot make predictions about a person based on statistics. It is wise to advise every woman to pay close attention: 'Examine yourself each time you bathe and report to me without delay any irregularity you encounter.'"

WITH PASSENGERS STRAPPED IN SEATS ... LIFEBOAT IS CATAPULTED INTO THE SEA

SAFER LIFEBOAT

Being lowered from a sinking ship in an ordinary lifeboat may be more pleasant, but it's not as safe as being catapulted into the sea in a completely enclosed and waterproofed lifeboat.

Scandinavian shipbuilders have developed such a cigar-shaped lifeboat. It holds 35 passengers who are strapped into upholstered bucket seats and fastened down with belts around head and torso.

Test shots from a tower prove that the lifeboat and its passengers can be ejected from a sinking vessel at a height of 82 feet without injury. Once in the water, they're protected from the elements until rescue is effected.

WHAT CHIC DOGS WEAR ON THE CHAMPS ELYSEES: UMBRELLAS, GLASSES AND JUMPSUITS

DOG LOVERS France has the largest dog population of any country in Europe, somewhere between 7.5 and 8 million.

To feed this growing canine population, France boasts 17 dog-food factories. In Paris there are many high-quality shops that prepare pâté, turkey and beef Bourguignon for dogs. There is also a truck that travels from district to district, serving up food for canine consumption.

Numerous beauty salons specialize in making dogs look their best. In Paris several drugstores sell eyeglasses and sunglasses for dogs, and there are tailors who will run up special garments for Fido.

Why have dogs become so popular in France? As more Frenchmen move to the cities, they find it necessary to retain some contact with nature and some anodyne for loneliness and urban isolation.

WEAPONS REPORT

The U.S. is the world's leading arms salesman.

From 1966 to 1975 we sold $34.9 billion worth of weaponry to foreign nations, more than all the other major arms suppliers in the world combined.

In the last fiscal year we agreed to sell $14 billion worth of military hardware overseas.

What alarms many U.S. Senators is the identity of those nations that are purchasing our weaponry. Originally designed to help our major NATO allies, our military arms sales program is concentrating on Third World nations. In the past decade, the developing countries have purchased 53% of their weapons from Uncle Sam.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D., Wis.) recently pointed out that "more than half of our foreign military cash sales in recent years have been made to the newly oil-rich nations of the Persian Gulf and Mideast.

By fueling local arms races," he explains, "the United States advances the potential for the creation or exacerbation of regional tensions and conflicts, which in turn increases the likelihood of major-power confrontation.

"In addition, the United States is selling increasingly destructive and sophisticated military equipment," Nelson adds. "In contrast to the days when the United States drew only on surplus stocks for military sales, we now sell some of our most advanced missiles, warplanes and electronic gear. This policy has deleterious effects on our own armed services' readiness as well as our overall national security."

Nelson knows that President Carter wants to restrain the heavy flow of arms abroad but suggests that decisions as to which nations get what include deliberation by the legislative as well as the executive branch of the government.

ARGUMENTS What do members of your family argue most about? In West Germany half of all family arguments concern the house or apartment.

A poll of 2000 Germans conducted by the magazine "Better Living" (Schoener Wohnen) reveals that most disputes involve opinions on how loud the television or stereo set should be turned up.

The question of which TV program to watch is argued in 32% of the families, and it's usually the man who wins. In one of every 10 families there is an argument about who should sit in the most comfortable or favorite chair.

WAYNE TO ABC-TV

Competition for big names has become so keen among the three major TV networks that they are offering millions to the superstars of yesteryear even though they may have no specific programs or projects in mind for them.

John "Duke" Wayne, 70, is a case in point. Wayne recently signed a two-year exclusive agreement with ABC-TV. The deal calls for Wayne to appear as himself --not playing a role--in six two-hour spectacles over the next two years. Wayne has also agreed to appear as a guest in two variety programs.

The network will not reveal how much it is paying "Duke"--guesstimates go as high as $3 million--but Wayne, who this year became the commercial TV spokesman for Dairil 500, feels that now is the time to make the jump from feature films to TV.

At 70 there are relatively few major Westerns being produced in which he can star as the heroic man of action. Wayne and his family own Batjac Productions, and it is that company which will probably produce a majority of the six ABC-TV spectacles or at least contribute to them. "Duke" Wayne's son Michael is president of Batjac; another son, Pat, is an actor. One good possibility is that a Wayne spectacular will be devoted at least in part to the Wayne family, all of whose members are photogenic.

Last year, advertisers spent an astronomical $6.3 billion on television, a boost of 27.7% over 1975, which is why the networks have so much money to spend on programming.

JOHN WAYNE IN UNCHARACTERISTIC ATTIRE, WITH SONS MICHAEL (L) AND PATRICK

Country music mecca is the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, where thousands converge to watch—and participate in—the longest-running radio show in history.

Tomorrow's the Big Night For Country Music

by Herbert Kupferberg

WHAT kind of music is simple, sentimental and nostalgic—and also slick, commercial and contemporary? If you listen to radio, you probably know the answer—country music, an indigenous form of American pop music which has reached an all-time audience peak at home and is starting to make inroads abroad in countries from Australia to the Soviet Union. Country music has developed in the last 50 years from a kind of rural folk song with an appeal mainly in the southeastern U.S. to a gigantic, $300 million industry centered in Nashville. Its millions of fans throughout the U.S. and Canada listen over 1150 radio stations that broadcast almost incessantly the twanging, plaintive ballads about thwarted love, shattered dreams and other human calamities.

"For years a stigma was attached to country music," says Eddie Kilroy, one of the dozens of recording executives based in Nashville. "It was regarded as redneck or hick music, and people in Cleveland, Chicago, New York, Detroit or Houston were ashamed of liking it. Even here in Nashville, drivers used to tune it down on their car radios when they stopped for a red light so the guy in the next car couldn't hear what they were playing. Nowadays, people admit liking it, and it's drawing younger performers and audiences more than ever before."

The payoff

Adds Chet Atkins, the Seg via of country guitarists: "When you start making money, you get respectable."

Tomorrow night country music's biggest bash of the year takes place when the CBS television network carries nationwide the Country Music Association Awards Show, at which the industry presents its annual citations to top performers and composers. Unlike the various Oscars, Emmys, Grammys, and Obies of other branches of the entertainment business, the Country Music Awards have no nickname.

One will be 'Entertainer of the Year'

KENNY ROGERS

RONNIE MILSAP

DOLLY PARTON

MERLE HAGGARD

WAYLON JENNINGS

"What could they call them," asks one detractor of the music scornfully, "the Hillbillies?" On the other hand, some people in the industry argue that having the citations designated simply as the "CMA Awards" gives country music a touch of class all its own.

Awards, which are made by vote of the more than 5000 CMA members, are given in 10 categories. This year's five finalists for the top award, "Entertainer of the Year," are Merle Haggard, Waylon Jennings, Ronnie Milsap, Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers. The host for the 90-minute show, expected to be watched by upward of 35 million viewers, will be veteran country singer Johnny Cash, whose wife June Carter will also appear on the program.

'Never let go'

"One thing about country music fans," observes band-leader Danny Davis, "is that they're loyal. They latch onto an artist and never let go. That's not the way it is in the pop field, where every three weeks there's a new genius-of-the-month. From the pure dollar-and-cents angle, country has one of the soundest economic floors in the business. A superstar like Loretta Lynn or Conway Twitty can earn a gross of $500,000 a year."

Davis himself is an example of what country music can do for its practitioners. A trumpet player who was born near Boston and raised in New York, he struck it rich when he went to Tennessee and organized a group called The Nashville Brass. Some country music purists look askance at Davis' group, for the traditional country instruments are fiddles and guitars, plus the human voice. But Davis has caught the spirit of country style and given it a modern sound, with the result that he plays 340 shows a year, flies around the country with his band in his own twin-engine Martin 404 airliner, has won the CMA Award for "Best Instrumental Group" six times and is up for a seventh.

While a few outlanders like Davis have managed to crack the country music ranks, most of the performers still come from predominantly rural or small-town areas, chiefly in the South. Chet Atkins and Dolly Parton are both native Tennesseans. Loretta Lynn, who has made so much money from country music that she owns a 3500-acre ranch in Tennessee, a seaside home in Mexico and a hunting lodge in British Columbia, is a Kentuckian who was a Coal Miner's Daughter—which happens to be the title of her recent, best-selling autobiography. Ronnie Milsap, who is blind, comes from Robbinsville, N.C., and Charley Pride, the top black star, was born in Sledge, Miss. Johnny Cash is Arkansas-born, and Roy Clark, who made a highly successful three-week tour of the Soviet Union in 1976, is a native Virginian, although he now lives in Tulsa, Okla., which has just named a new elementary school for him.

Traditionally, country music songs are just as homespun as their singers. Says Jack Stapp, head of Tree International, the giant Nashville music publishing house: "The themes are simple and they relate to people—the mother dying, trouble with a brother, a woman leaving, the baby sick, longing for home. It's not like rock 'n' roll, where you can't understand what they're saying."

Sophistication and sexiness

Nevertheless, sophistication and sexiness are starting to creep into country music, especially among younger artists like Barbara Mandrell, who sings "Married But Not to Each Other"; Crystal Gayle, whose hit number is "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue?"; and Bobby Borchers, with "Lunch Time Lovers" and "Women Gonna Be the Death of Me, But What a Way to Go!"

- More than 1200 full-color illustrations throughout
- Realistic drawings that make words easier to understand, more fun to look up
- Produced by an expert team of primary education authorities and dictionary specialists

The experts who put this dictionary together know words—and kids! So, they place the meaning right after the entry word, where children expect to find it. They use wording as close as possible to children's everyday language. And they show entry words exactly the way children see them—no confusing dots or spaces between syllables.

And there's more:

Little "stories" behind the words—where they come from, how they became part of our language, and other intriguing information. As well as a special feature: The Story of English—An Illustrated History of Our Language.

Yes, this is a gift for your favorite youngsters that's really "good" for them.

But they'll have so much fun using it, they'll never know!

MUSIC CONTINUED

The Mayor of Nashville, former six-term Congressman Richard Fulton, who once recorded a song entitled "Poor Little Newsboy" himself, says: "We have a diversified industrial climate here and are especially strong in insurance and printing; but wherever I go in the world, people ask me about Nashville music. A cabdriver in Jerusalem kept playing it for me on his car radio."

Country music has changed the face of Nashville, a city of 500,000, with the development of Music Row—a whole complex of recording studios, offices and publishing houses, as well as the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum, a spacious, modern edifice that attracts thousands of tourists who come to gaze upon such sacred relics as Chet Atkins' first guitar and Minnie Pearl's old hat.

The largest and most elaborate of the Nashville studios is RCA's, where the late Elvis Presley came to make virtually all of his recordings. Country music was only one of the elements that made up Elvis' unique style, which also was shaped by gospel, rock and his own personal magnetism to produce a hybrid kind of music some called "rockabilly." Because Presley wasn't pure country, he may never make it to the Hall of Fame, but he is already represented there by a gold Cadillac he once owned.

Flourishing Opry

Nashville's major musical shrine is the Grand Ole Opry, a remarkable institution which is to country music what Tiffany's showcase is to jewelry. The Grand Ole Opry is a radio program—the oldest continuous radio show in existence—that has also turned into one of America's great live entertainment spectacles.

Grand Ole Opry began in 1925 almost accidentally, when Nashville station WSM put on an hour-long program featuring a country fiddler named Uncle Jimmy Thompson. The show happened to follow a broadcast of Walter Damrosch's music appreciation hour from New York, so announcer George D. Hay started out by saying: "For the past hour you've listened to grand opera, now you're going to hear some grand ole opry."

Old-timer Roy Acuff brings down house with traditional fiddle-balancing act.

Soon local audiences began coming to the studio to watch the broadcasts by old-time groups with names like the Gully Jumpers, the Fruit Jar Drinkers and the Crook Brothers. Crowds got so big that the show had to be moved to larger and larger sites until it wound up in 1943 in the Ryman Auditorium, a barnlike downtown edifice with 3000 seats.

In 1974 the Grand Ole Opry really went big time, moving into a brand-new, specially designed, 4400-seat Opry House that is part of a huge entertainment complex, including an Opryland amusement park, a TV production center, and a 600-room hotel built by the Nashville-based National Life and Accident Insurance Co.

Tickets hard to get

Every Friday and Saturday night, when the Grand Ole Opry goes out live over the air, the house is packed with people who pay $5 a seat and often write months in advance for tickets. Tour buses from all over the U.S. and Canada jam the parking lots along with campers, trailers and family cars. Tomorrow night's CMA Awards show will naturally take place in the Opry House.

CHARLEY PRIDE

LORETTA LYNN

DANNY DAVIS

The Grand Ole Opry audience is probably the most informal and spontaneous in the country. People wander around munching hot dogs and popcorn; they dance in the aisles when they feel like it; and some even get onto the stage to take flash pictures while the acts—which just walk on without rehearsal—are in progress.

While new performers are greeted warmly, the most rapturous reception of all goes to old stars like Roy Acuff, 74, who, before he starts singing, creates pandemonium by balancing his violin bow on his chin, then putting the violin on top of the bow—a trick he has been doing for half a century.

Acuff, who is associated with such classics as "Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird," thinks that country music is going to last forever.

"Sure, it's changed," he says as he stands outside the Grand Ole Opry stage entrance, solemnly dispensing autographs to wide-eyed small boys. "You can't argue with progress. But you get the right song sung by the right person and you can't beat it. Nobody can define country music—but the people who listen know what it is." B

"I smoke. My wife doesn't. And she would remind me of the stories being told about high-tar cigarettes.

"Well, I began looking into those new low-tar cigarettes. I tried just about every one that came out. They didn't satisfy my taste.

"Then I read about Vantage. I didn't expect much but I tried a pack anyway.

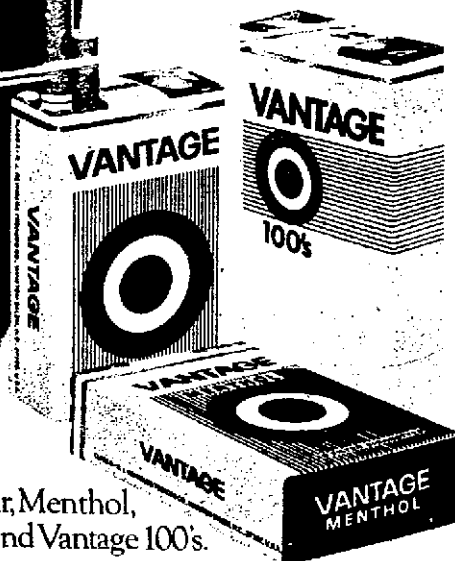

"They were quite a pleasant surprise. They tasted really good and they actually had less than half the tar of my old brand.

"So now I smoke Vantage.

NEW ROLE FOR AN OLD FAVORITE

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The famous Metropolitan Opera star Luisa Tetrazzini inspired a chef to create a dish which he named for her—and which was one of her favorites—Chicken Tetrazzini. In turn, we were inspired to create a new version of this recipe, varying the seasonings somewhat and giving turkey the starring role.

Turkey has become a year-round food, not only a holiday favorite. It is among the less expensive "buys" in protein foods and adds interest and flavor to many dishes. This recipe for Turkey Tetrazzini points the way.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1/2 turkey breast, frozen (about 3 pounds) | 1 can (3 ounces) sliced broiled mushrooms |
| 3 tablespoons butter or margarine | 8 ounces thin spaghetti |
| 3 tablespoons flour | 3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese |
| Turkey stock | 1/3 cup melted butter or margarine |
| 2 egg yolks | Parsley |
| 1/2 cup light cream | |

Defrost turkey breast in refrigerator. Simmer in salted water to cover until tender. Remove meat from bones; cut into fairly large pieces. Refrigerate turkey stock. Melt butter; blend in flour; add 1 1/2 cups turkey stock; cook, stirring until thickened. Combine egg yolks and cream; add slowly, continuing to cook and stir until thickened. Add mushrooms, mushroom broth and turkey. Season to taste. Heat to serving temperature.

Meanwhile cook spaghetti in remaining turkey stock with enough water added to meet package directions. Drain. Combine Parmesan cheese and melted butter; toss with spaghetti. Serve with turkey. Garnish with chopped parsley. Makes six servings.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

COFFEE, TEA OR VIVARIN?

There are times when nothing beats sitting down and having a cup of hot coffee or tea. Particularly first thing in the morning. It tastes good and gives you a lift.

But if, as the day wears on, you sometimes find yourself having a cup of coffee or tea just for the lift, you should know about Vivarin.

Vivarin is a gentle pick-me-up. The active ingredient that makes Vivarin so effective is the caffeine of two cups of coffee squeezed into one easy to take tablet. And a Vivarin tablet is more economical than two cups of coffee, and requires no preparation.

So when you want a lift, take Vivarin. It's convenient, inexpensive, easy to take, and it really works.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak. Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings". Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

A GENUINE GOLD PIECE

Honoring the First Free Flight of a Manned Space Shuttle

PRICED AT ONLY $20

A Limited Edition

On August 12, 1977, the United States took a giant step forward in the development of outer space for the betterment of mankind.

The First Free Flight of a Manned Space Shuttle was successfully tested. This Manned Space Shuttle has been designed to place our satellites into orbit and, more importantly, to retrieve malfunctioning satellites and repair them in orbit or return them to Earth. This capability will become extremely beneficial with the growing need for additional weather, communications and navigational satellites. Never again will it be necessary to write off a multi-million-dollar satellite due to a malfunction.

The Manned Space Shuttle will also be capable of carrying into orbit a Spacelab, designed to provide an environment for scientific and technical investigators to work in space. For lunar and planetary missions, the Manned Space Shuttle will be able to carry rockets into orbit which will propel probes and satellites farther into outer space.

Genuine 10 KT. Gold

Gold is the most treasured of all precious metals. Traditionally medals have been struck in gold only for the most important events. Because of gold's extreme desirability such issues have become quite rare and valuable. The Manned Space Shuttle Gold Piece is just such an issue.

Each gold piece will be minted in genuine 10kt. gold, measure approximately 7/8" in diameter and weigh more than 45 grains. The obverse will feature a replica of the Space Shuttle; the reverse will show the Shuttle's name "Enterprise," the test date and location, the Danbury Mint mintmark and certification of gold content.

An Original Work of Art

The Manned Space Shuttle Gold Piece is not only a rare and valuable collectible, but also an original work of art. Noted sculptor Alfredo Marino was privately commissioned to prepare the special sculpture required to produce this gold piece.

Custom Display Album

A custom display album and personalized certificate of registration is provided with each gold piece, absolutely FREE. This handsome album allows you to display the gold piece in your home or office for all to admire.

A Strictly Limited Edition

The Manned Space Shuttle Gold Piece will be issued in an edition strictly limited to the number of reservations postmarked by October 31, 1977. It will be available only by advance reservation and only from the Danbury Mint.

Priced At Only $20

Gold medals have in the past been priced beyond the means of all but a fortunate few. To bring the Manned Space Shuttle Gold Piece within the reach of more people, it is priced at only $20. We urge you not to miss this rare opportunity. Reserve your piece today and acquire a genuine gold commemorative you will be proud to pass on to future generations of your family.

Japan's Top Feminist Throws In the Towel

by Paul Raffaele

Misako Enoki dissolved her women's liberation movement—much to the relief of Japanese men—after defeat of all 10 party candidates in recent election.

TOKYO.

The "Pink Panthers," Japan's militant women's liberationists, have been turned into placid pussycats. Their leader, 32-year-old Misako Enoki, once the scourge of Japanese males, has formally dissolved the five-year-old movement and gone back to her husband and housework.

"I'll stay at home, at least for the time being," says the gentle-faced but strong-willed Ms. Enoki. "I want to recover from the physical exhaustion of the last five years working for the women's liberation movement. After that, I might go to the university to study archaeology or mathematics."

Ms. Enoki's retirement from the feminist battlefield has caused several million Japanese men to heave a collective sigh of relief. Her organization, known officially as the Chupiren Association—but popularly designated the "Pink Panthers" because its members wore a pink helmet bearing the female biological symbol—had won widespread hatred, but also considerable respect, in this country which has an ancient tradition of relegating women to a subservient role. The full name of the Chupiren Association may be translated as "Society to Fight for Women Who Would Otherwise Grin and Bear It."

The "Pink Panthers" did a lot of fighting in their brief but turbulent existence. Their original aim was to seek the legalization of The Pill—which under Japanese law is available only on a doctor's prescription. Ms. Enoki, a graduate in pharmacy from Kyoto University and the wife of a physician herself, decided to take on the powerful doctors' lobby, which opposes the over-the-counter sales of pills so as to protect the lucrative abortion trade.

Attacks straying husbands

Under Ms. Enoki's dynamic leadership, Chupiren quickly expanded its targets and launched an attack on straying husbands—a substantial portion of the Japanese male population. Many Japanese men consider it their birthright to engage in extramarital romances, ranging from flirtations with bar hostesses to the upkeep of geishas. Businessmen often measure their status by the extent—and expense—of their extracurricular sexual activities.

Japanese wives, however, have remained bound by a traditionally strict, one-way moral code which insists that married women remain completely faithful—even to errant spouses—or risk being discarded. Divorce, which means meager alimony, loss of face, and scant prospect of remarriage, is rising but still rare as compared to the U.S. rate.

In medieval Japan, a husband could divorce his wife merely by handing her a three-line letter of notification. Japan's postwar constitution—instituted by

Gen. Douglas MacArthur during the Allied occupation—bans sex discrimination, thus giving women equal rights in such matters as inheritance, divorce and voting.

Discrimination remains

Nevertheless, women today still suffer discrimination in jobs, politics and education. Office girls are expected to look pretty, prepare tea, do the drudge work and gracefully retire at age 30—making way for a new, youthful crop. Women's salaries are about half those paid to men of similar rank. Young women are employed by the thousands to stand at the doors of department store elevators and bow humbly to arriving customers—one girl will bow as many as 2500 times a day, according to a recent survey.

Only in medicine, where women make up 8 percent of the physicians, have there been even minor inroads. Women constitute an almost invisible 0.5 percent of Japanese lawyers and only 1 percent of managers in the civil service. Female high school graduates usually enroll in two-year private universities that are little more than marriage factories, concentrating on domestic science and literature.

So it's no wonder that the initial reaction to Misako Enoki and her pink-helmeted, blue-jeaned followers was so overwhelming. They were besieged with supporters, including cast-off wives and mistresses eager for revenge. In many early instances the Panthers concentrated their ire on playboy husbands, staging sitdown demonstrations inside their offices or parading with posters detailing explicitly the sins of the accused male. Their goal was to use public humiliation as a weapon to force the straying husband to end his affair or to grant his ex-wife substantial alimony.

They often succeeded, with their most notable case involving a wealthy real-estate man's wife who objected to the pittance of alimony she had received in her divorce settlement. Following a noisy, well-publicized Chupiren demonstration at the office, the wife received property worth $500,000. Misako Enoki claims that since 1972, Chupiren has successfully intervened in more than 2500 divorce cases and matrimonial disputes.

Ms. Enoki apparently attempted to accomplish too much too quickly. She herself acknowledges that she aimed at bringing about a complete reversal of Japanese customs and establishing "a female-dominated society." Some authorities on Japan, such as Harvard University's Edwin O. Reischauer, contend that Japanese women already exercise great, though indirect influence, serving as undisputed heads of the household, with control of family finances and children's education.

Tokyo TV star and author Miki Ayuro adds that the supposedly gentle, uncomplaining Japanese housewife actually is a schemer of great subtlety who puffs up her man to feel like a conquering samurai while she dexterously plays him like a dangling puppet.

But Ms. Enoki wanted women to exercise authority more openly, by moving increasingly into politics, business and labor unions. So Chupiren established a political arm, the Japan Women's Party, and fielded 10 candidates, including one ex-mistress of a powerful politician, in the recent elections for the nation's Upper House. The women campaigned in a distinctive, semi-military uniform with golden lanyards and, of course, the familiar pink helmets. They even learned karate to protect themselves against possible violence.

But despite a vigorous campaign, not a single party candidate was successful. The women elected to the chamber—a mere handful—were from the conservative ruling party. Only among younger and more independent-minded women did the Chupiren Association receive much support.

Dissolves the movement

Two days after her party's stunning defeat, Misako Enoki announced she was dissolving the movement. She also revealed that she had helped finance the campaign with $280,000 her husband had borrowed from a bank, using their house as collateral. Ms. Enoki says she took the money on the condition that if she couldn't pay it back, she would divorce either her husband or women's liberation.

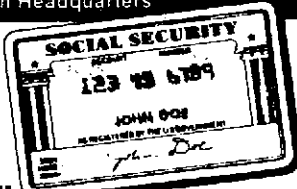

"I am not going to divorce my husband," she told me determinedly. "I will pay back the debt by doing housework for him."

Asked what her husband's reaction to her defeat had been, she replied: "He just said, 'Well, well.' I never know whether he is pleased or sorry."

Now, after five years of combat in a pink helmet, Misako is back to housework in a sky-blue floral kimono, looking the part of the typically well-brought-up, obedient wife in a typically well-ordered Japanese household. She says she's in political retirement; most Japanese males fervently hope she stays there. Nevertheless, many will continue to watch her activities warily, lest she exercise that most ancient of womanly prerogatives—changing her mind. P

One of these days you may find in your mailbox an envelope displaying the words, "U.S. Government Conducts Legal Lottery. Citizens Strike It Rich." A letter inside begins: "There is a source of hidden wealth in America that few people know exists, and you can have access to it."

The sales package is promoting the lottery run by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), a part of the U.S. Department of Interior. It gives citizens a chance, through monthly public drawings, to win leases on federally owned lands that may contain oil or gas.

These mailings don't come from the BLM, however, but from one of several dozen "leasing services" or "consultants"—companies which, for a fee, help entrants choose those lottery lands most likely to contain oil or gas. "Winners frequently sell their lease rights to large oil companies for fortunes," says the letter, quoted above, from American Standard Oil & Gas Leasing Service, Inc., of Scottsdale, Ariz., which claims to be the largest such consultant.

The promotional efforts of such companies, which include ads in Fortune, Business Week and Forbes magazines, have helped make the lottery increasingly popular in recent years—and profitable for the BLM and the leasing services, if not for the private citizen.

Abuses and fraud

Since the lottery system was begun in 1960, according to the Interior Department, it has been plagued by allegations of wrongdoing, abuses, and cases of actual fraud. Also, winners may wind up with worthless land.

Here's how the lottery works:

On the third Monday of every month, officials in 11 regional BLM offices around the country post a list and description of about 1000 land parcels ranging from 40 to 2560 acres. You can get a list of the available parcels in any state simply by mailing a small fee—usually $2 to $4—to the appropriate BLM office.

Once you've decided which parcel has the best chance of gushing oil or gas, you mail in a form with your address, the parcel number and a $10 filing fee. The winning number is drawn out of a huge rotating drum, the winners notified by mail, and the results made public.

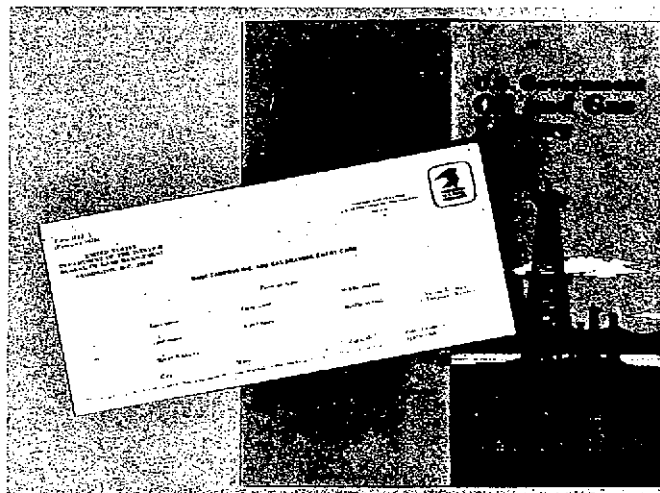

If you're a winner, you have 15 days to pay an advance yearly rental of $1 per acre before you take over the lease. The lease expires automatically after 10 years if no oil or gas is found.

Corporations can enter as well as individuals, but since the law limits entrants to one chance per parcel, an ordinary citizen is said to have as good a chance of winning as an oil company.

Should you win a lease, what are the chances of hitting a gusher? The U.S. Geological Survey says that lottery land is usually in areas where other oil and gas leases have expired and where the chances of finding oil are not good.

Even If You Win An Oil Lottery—So What?

by Allan Wolper

Every year millions enter government lotteries—many in response to mail solicitations from "leasing services"—hoping to win acreage that may contain oil or gas. But the lottery has been plagued with fraud and other problems.

Most people bet on leases in Wyoming, New Mexico, Colorado, Montana, and Utah—states where the land is considered to have the best chance of producing oil or gas. Nearly 3 million people tried to win leases in these states during the 18-month period ending in June 1976, according to the Interior Department—twice the number of the previous 18 months. The BLM took in $29.3 million in filing fees.

Hope oil companies buy

Typically, a person enters with the hope—often fortified by leasing service claims—that, if he wins, one of the big oil companies or a land speculator will offer to buy the lease for big money. Interior Department officials say oil companies do buy 10 percent of these leases at prices ranging from $1 an acre up to whatever they think the land is worth. If the winner doesn't get any offers, he must continue to pay his rent on the property in order to retain his rights to it.

The leasing services contend that they enter you for those parcels with the best potential for producing oil or gas.

What they don't tell you is that they may enter most of their customers for the same few choice parcels—which actually decreases a person's chance of winning. American Standard Leasing admits that it may file as many as 1000 to 2000 individuals for a single parcel.

Leasing services make money by charging a set fee for each entry they file for you. It's usually $10 to $20—in addition to the $10 filing fee that goes to the government.

But costs don't always stop there. After you send in their reply card, an American Standard Leasing "consultant" phones you. He explains that the company only signs customers for one-year contracts—at a cost of $1500. The company keeps $900 for its services; $600 is used to file 60 individual entries. Why don't they put their minimum price package in their brochure? "If you put something in the mail that says it costs $1500, no one would send it back," said company president Alfred S. Allen. "I don't think there is anything illegal about it."

The Securities and Exchange Commission has been investigating certain leasing services that file for individuals and then negotiate the sale of the leases with either land developers or oil companies.

The Federal Trade Commission, acting on information supplied by PARADE, says it will take a hard look at the leasing services.

In addition, the Interior Department, after years of refusing to acknowledge the widespread discontent with the way the lottery system is operated, finally decided to lay bare its shortcomings in a recent audit. Here are some of the problems it found at BLM offices:

- Some BLM offices allowed salesmen from leasing services to look through the list of losing entries to find potential customers.

- Some BLM bureaucrats forgot to put some entry forms in the lottery bin for a drawing and never refunded the filing fees to those left out.

- Some people won leases on more than one parcel against what seemed to be impossible odds. For example, one entrant won three leases in a month. One parcel had 1836 entries; another had 1365; a third had 498. (The audit wryly surmises that federal workers did a poor job of shaking the drum.)

As for the leasing services:

- One company entered the names of a number of people without telling them. The company then collected the lease in the name of the winner, who was never told about the transaction.

- Some consulting companies won leases for their customers and then bought from them the rights to those leases. The consultants then turned around and sold the leases to oil companies for a handsome profit.

Problems allegedly created by land speculators:

- Some land development companies filed names of relatives and friends to increase their chances of winning.

- One company won eight leases, then lost them because the Interior Department claimed several persons in the firm also bought lottery tickets.

No controls

BLM spokesman Charles O'Connor said there has been no real policing of the lottery since it was started. "We haven't had adequate controls."

Both the large and small oil companies would like to see the lottery abolished and have been lobbying in support of legislation to end it. They say they would rather pay the government for the leases than speculators or individual investors.

The watchdog General Accounting Office (GAO) thinks the Interior Department could make even more money if the lottery were replaced by a system that sold the lands to oil companies on a competitive-bidding basis. In a report that will be released to Congress next month, the GAO will repeat previous criticism of the lottery system and ask that it be abolished.

Perhaps Congress will listen this time. It killed one anti-lottery bill in 1974, but another one is expected to be introduced shortly. It may have been reluctant to legislate away a substantial revenue-producing program in the past, but now that the Interior Department has admitted to abuses, Congress may have found a reason to end it.

Merit Challenges Entire Low Tar Field To Match Taste.

'Enriched Flavor'TM tobacco makes MERIT[®] unique among low tar cigarettes.

For years, smokers have been promised good taste at low tar.

Yet despite the promises, the products just didn't measure up. Regardless of special filters and baffles, low tar cigarettes just couldn't deliver.

Until MERIT. Until work began on the tobacco end of smoking.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain flavor-rich ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

The result was 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers the kind of taste smokers can switch to. And stick with.

Dr. Karl Menninger banters with some friends from The Villages, a program he founded for abandoned youths.

In homes like the one above, children are "loved and feel secure," he says. "There's no physical punishment."

Dr. Karl Menninger Pleads: Stop Beating Your Kids

by Pam Proctor

TOPEKA, KAN.

The white-haired old man and the little boy who sat side by side at the piano could easily have stepped out of a Norman Rockwell painting. "Now play it like this," said the man, demonstrating one chord and then another. "Play it back and forth, like this."

As the boy started to play, the old man interrupted, "Wrong fingers. Wrong. Wrong." Then he became quiet as the boy fumbled with the keys.

"I can't do it," said the 10-year-old. "Yes, you can," said the man encouragingly. For 15 minutes the two sat glued to the piano bench—one teaching patiently, one learning ploddingly. This was not ordinary family scene.

The grandfatherly man was psychiatrist Karl Menninger, 84, a founder of Topeka's Menninger Foundation, the pioneering psychiatric complex which includes hospitals, a school of psychiatry and research facilities. The boy was not his grandson but a resident of The Villages, a program Menninger started in rural Topeka to provide a homelike setting for parentless kids.

Popularized psychiatry

Credited with popularizing psychiatry through his best-selling The Human Mind and other books, Menninger also helped upgrade treatment conditions in state mental hospitals across the country. In addition, he is regarded as a leading crusader for prison reform through such controversial writings as The Crime of Punishment.

"Dr. Karl" and his wife Jean. She co-authored one of his many books and now shares in his interest in The Villages.

Now, after years of treating patients and writing about psychiatry, Menninger is devoting himself to prevention—the prevention of violence. And violence, he says, begins with children.

He wants parents—all parents—to stop hitting their kids. And he erupts with indignation at the mere mention of spankings. "I think that's dreadful," he says. "Parents are so apt to justify what they do by calling it discipline." What they're really doing, he says, is sowing the seeds of vengeance in their children.

Commanding six-footer

"People repeat in adult life emotions they experienced in childhood," says Menninger, a six-footer with a commanding presence. "Many of the people whom I spent the last 30 to 40 years treating at so much per minute wouldn't have needed any treatment if they'd had the right kind of care as children."

"And these prisoners who have stolen purses, forged checks or raped people often come from homes where they didn't have any moral guidance or love. Most prisoners come from evil homes, broken homes, bad homes, cruel homes. You can almost be certain that the man who commits violent crimes has been treated violently as a child."

Menninger is making sure that at least some children are given a non-violent start in life. When a Topeka welfare worker complained to him that parentless and abandoned kids, many of whom had been battered or sexually abused, were locked in detention centers or jails because there was nowhere else to put them, Menninger was shocked. "What's their crime?" he asked. "Is it a crime not to have a mother and father?"

"I had no idea that there were so many children getting kicked around like that."

Founds The Villages

He rounded up money from friends and in 1964 started The Villages, where groups of 10 aged 6 to 18 live in homes as a family would. Some groups are coed, some aren't. Each home (there are now eight) is designed with comfortable middle-class amenities and has live-in houseparents who take the place of natural parents. The houseparents, who often have children of their own, take the entire "family" on trips, eat with the kids, meet their dates, encourage them in their studies, and give firm but loving guidance.

"We're trying to give these children a home where they're loved and feel secure with parents and other children around," says Menninger. "They're not hit. They're not whipped. We have no physical punishment. And we don't send them away like many foster homes or group homes do after a year or less."

Fourteen-year-old Bill, for example, lived in a succession of group homes and foster care situations before he came to The Villages a few months ago. Sitting in the warm, colonial living room of his home, one of a cluster of five here, he talked about how he sees his new family as his last chance for a stable life.

"I know I can stay here as long as I want," says Bill. "I've been moving practically my whole life, and it gets boring. You stay in one place for two or three years, make some friends and move on. After a while they forget you."

In the past, he says, the military-like regimentation of many of the juvenile centers he's been in has made him lash out with hostility. "They told you what to do and how to do it. My whole life I was being told what to do. Sometimes I hated it so much I'd break into someone's car or cuss them out."

Now when he gets angry, he goes off in the fields to cool off.

"I know if I blow this one, I'll never have a better chance," he says.

Menninger sees the family-oriented life-style of The Villages as a way to rescue youngsters from a life of delinquency.

'Would be in jail'

"I would probably have been messed up or ended up in jail," says Steve, 18, a top athlete who just entered college.

"I've been in 'the system' since I was 5 or 6 years old," he says. "It used to really hurt me—what happened in my past. My mind was twisted for a few years. When I first got here, I was hostile toward the outside. I would blow up a lot."

"But in the four years I've lived here, it's been like home," he says, recalling the many long talks he's had with his housefather, 30-year-old Bruce Linhos. "I can face [my past] now."

It was because of Steve that Menninger and his wife Jean paid a visit to The Villages to share in Steve's going-away party with his family: houseparents Carol and Bruce Linhos, their two baby daughters, and his seven "brothers."

At the dinner table, conversation lagged until Menninger exclaimed, "This is the quietest dinner I've ever been to! Does anybody know any table games?" He quickly came up with a series of alphabet games naming birds and insects, and soon the table was buzzing.

But Menninger is not just a kindly, grandfatherly sort who can keep kids enthralled with word games or piano lessons. He is also a volcano who can explode as he pursues his campaign against human violence. He hurls objects across his office. He shouts at his staff. He emphasizes points by pound-

Karl, an attorney who helps him do research on criminal justice issues. Ordering Karl to put away a book on crime, he throws the volume in the direction of his library, which has one large bookcase devoted to an assortment of Arabic, Portuguese, Japanese and German translations of the 11 books he has written.

he says, sweeping his hand toward a pile of books which he devours at the rate of 20 to 30 a month. "I've got several books to write, and I want to do some painting."

But his streak of impatience can't mask his all-consuming passion for the weak and the defenseless—whether it's the mentally ill, the American Indian, women, blacks or children. The roots of his compassion run deep in his stout Kansas upbringing.

His mother Flo, a noted Bible teacher, struggled with poverty as a child and taught him the virtues of hard work and concern for the less fortunate. "She set us an example," says Menninger, who recalls how she once harbored 40 flood victims for a month in their home.

This heritage led Menninger and his psychiatrist-brother Will in the 1940's and '50's to fight for reforms in state mental institutions that were notorious "snake pits."

A Presbyterian elder, Menninger says, "Thy kingdom come . . . on earth as it is in Heaven" is my notion of the way we human beings might live together."

Devoted disciple

One person who understands the paradox of Menninger's volatile personality is Bob Gillogly, a Presbyterian minister who gave up a flourishing congregation and youth program in California to work for Menninger at The Villages.

"For two years I resisted," says Gillogly. "He would get so mad on the phone—no one says no to Dr. Karl." But what finally convinced Gillogly to make the move was neither Menninger's fulminations nor his persistent demands, but the sincerity of his message.

"Look, Bob," said Menninger. "Everything I've done amounts to nothing unless we can make a difference for the children."

Menninger counsels that violence to children has bred the violence around us—whether it's the crime in the streets or the abuse of the elderly in nursing homes.

"The older generation, to some extent, is reaping what it sowed," he says. "Children do what they were taught by their parents."

"If there's one piece of advice I have to give, it's this: let's try to show a little more kindness to others. And give more thought to the fact that what's done to children, they will do to society." P

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

ing his fist on the desk or rapping his cane on the floor.

Rising at 6:30 a.m., he goes to his office at the Menninger Foundation, where he still serves as chairman, and by about 8:30 starts giving commands. "Mrs. Miller, I'm waiting for ya," he bellows to his secretary across a hallway. Next, he summons his grandson

At 84, he's a man in a hurry. "I'm aware of my age," he says. With the clock ticking toward "dinnertime," as he puts it, Menninger admits to a certain "uneasiness, because I'm afraid I'm not going to get some of the things done I want to. I don't know whether I'll have my ideas in shape for the world."

Playtime U.S.A.

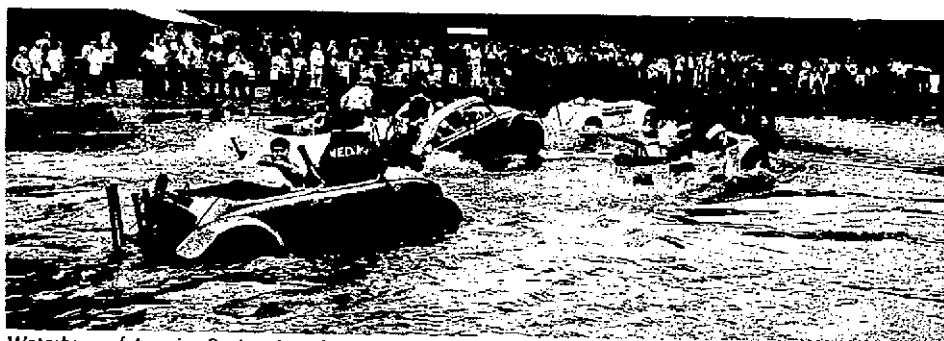

No others have become as ingenious and versatile at thinking up spare-time activities as present-day Americans.

That's the conclusion reached by author-photographer Mark Jury, who returned home in 1970 from a year spent in Vietnam and Cambodia. Jury says he heard while he was away that Americans had invented some unprecedented, not to say unbelievable, activities with which to pass their free time—that the "pleasure principle" had replaced the "work ethic."

Not quite convinced, he decided to set out on a tour of America with pen and camera to record the new and different ways that had been devised for having fun. The result is a paperback picture book entitled Playtime! Americans at Leisure, published by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich ($5.95), from which the photos on this page have been taken.

Jury says he discovered that many Americans still follow such traditional leisure pursuits as watching television, playing golf, attending sports events. But when they finish that, they still have time left over for other—more novel—leisure occupations.

And how, exactly, does Mr. Jury himself kill time? Well, for one thing, he claims it took him six years to write this book. . . .

Keeping Up... With Youth

LIZA TODD AND SPENCER SEGURA

Love in Bloom

Liza Todd, 20, daughter of actress Elizabeth Taylor and the late Mike Todd, has fallen in love with Spencer Segura, 24, son of Pancho Segura, the tennis professional and onetime coach of Jimmy Connors.

Liza met the young Segura last year in Gstaad, Switzerland, where her mother has a chalet. Liza, who studied sculpture at Middlesex Polytechnic in England, decided to join Segura when he returned to Los Angeles. She enrolled in the Otis Art Institute there and gave her friendship with Segura a chance to grow. It blossomed into a love affair and living arrangements suitable to their needs.

Spencer Segura, like his father, is an ace tennis player and plans to make his fortune in that sport. Apparently Liz Taylor and Richard Burton, who helped rear Liza after her father died in a 1958 plane crash, approve of the Liza-Spencer entente. They would not object to a marriage.

Liza, immensely attractive and photogenic, is the only daughter Elizabeth Taylor gave birth to in her seven marriages to six husbands. She has two sons by her second husband, Michael Wilding, and an adopted daughter.

To Admit Blacks

South Africa's Stellenbosch University, which numbers six prime ministers among its graduates, has finally agreed to admit black students under certain conditions.

The ivy-covered school, 45 miles from Cape Town, is the first of South Africa's five Afrikaans universities to admit blacks.

Stellenbosch will allow blacks, mixed-race and Indian students to register for all post-graduate courses. But they will only be allowed to take post-graduate courses not offered by South Africa's three black and two separate universities for coloreds (mixed race) and Indians.

Ghoulish

The commercial exploitation of Elvis Presley's untimely death was in many cases tasteless and sordid. But perhaps even more ghoulish, a few weeks ago the heavy-metal rock group Starz released a tune about Karen Anne Quinlan, the girl who remains in a seemingly endless coma after being kept technically alive by a variety of medical machinery. Title of the song: "Pull the Plug."

How To Wake Up The Financial Genius Inside You

"Millionaires Are Not 100 Times Smarter Than You, They Just Know The Wealth Formula."

We've never met and probably never will, but I think we share a common interest. That interest is in achieving complete and total financial freedom.

Because of this common interest, I think we can be of great help to each other. You see, a little over twelve months ago my net worth reached the magic million dollar mark, and it only took me 48 months to achieve that.

That might not impress you, but if you had seen me six years ago, you might wonder how I did it. I lived in Denver then, in a cramped, tumbled down house at 2545 South High Street. My wife was expecting our second child and we were so broke we had to borrow $150.00 from a relative just to buy food and pay the rent.

By the way, I know I didn't make a million dollars because of my superior intellect — I barely got through Ames High School (Ames, Iowa) with a C average and I think that if you'll stop and think, you'll realize and agree, there is not a single millionaire that is 10, 20, or 50 times smarter than you, or that works 10, 20, or 50 times harder or longer than you.

Now, how can we help each other? I am willing to share everything I have learned and know that would help and guide you to achieve your own financial freedom and independence. But the only way I would ever give you my secrets, methods and formulas is if I benefit also. Because as you will find when you reach your ultimate financial goals, you really don't want to stop there but you are motivated to go and make more. It seems that most people who are charging for financial advice have studied how to "do it" but have never actually "done it" themselves. You will find as you read my formulas, that since I have actually achieved total financial freedom myself, that you will receive from me more than just the motivation to achieve your own financial independence, but a workable step by step plan to actually do it.

You may have seen part of my formulas advertised in the nation's most prestigious financial journals such as Forbes, Barrons, Money, Fortune and the Wall Street Journal. This work is entitled How To Wake Up The Financial Genius Inside You. The various formulas contained in the volume will show you exactly how you can do each of the following:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without any cash.
- Put $1,000, $10,000, or even more cash in your pocket when you buy (without selling property).
- Double your assets regularly and consistently.
- Legally avoid, reduce or postpone paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at a fraction of their market value.

If you apply these formulas and methods you could spend three weeks out of every month doing anything you care to do, and I think, at that time, you will find as I have, that spending several weeks on the beaches of Hawaii, or on the ski slopes of Colorado, or just sightseeing in Europe, or any other place in the world, you begin to understand what real freedom is all about.

Most people think that it would be impossible to do some of the things listed above. For example, to buy a property, and at the same time put $10,000 (or more) cash in your pocket without selling the property, or to buy a property with little or no cash down.

Believe me, it is possible for you to do it. This is exactly how most wealthy people actually do make 10, 20, or 50 times more money than you do.

These formulas of mine do not have to be used with income properties only. They actually can be applied to virtually any asset.

While I was struggling on making my first million, I often thought how nice it would be to have the personal advice and counsel from someone like Howard Hughes or J. Paul Getty.

What would I have been willing to pay for this service? I can tell you one thing for sure, it would have been a lot more than the $10.00 that I'm going to ask you to invest in your financial future.

What will this $10.00 actually do for you? It will give you a complete step by step plan that you can follow to become totally and completely financially independent.

Please try to understand my dilemma. I'm not a New York advertising agency, with all their professional skill and manpower to write a powerful and persuasive ad to convince you that I can make you financially independent. I am just somebody who has actually 'done it' and can really show you how to 'do it'.

What would you do, if you were in my shoes. You have in excess of $1,000,000 net worth, you have a desire to share your formula with others, because you not only have a simple, honest and workable method whereby others too can enjoy the riches of this land, but you also want to benefit and make money from sharing this information, so you can continue to grow financially.

I think you might do what I'm doing — that is to write a simple message to the type of people who share similar goals as mine asking them to try the formulas for themselves, to see if they work as well as the claims described. Because, I know, as you would know if you were in my shoes, that if I can just convince you to test my formulas and methods, you will see for yourself that they will work as easily for you as they did for me.

It's really quite frustrating to have something so valuable as I know I have, but lack the skill to convince people to try it for themselves. I hope by my simple, direct approach, I can convince you to try my formulas.

It seems the majority of the people in our rich country lose, not because they lack intelligence, or even will-power, but because of procrastination, or lack of action — please don't be like the masses. Make a decision while you have this paper in your hands. Make a decision now to either act now and send for my material or immediately round file this paper. If your decision is to subscribe, do it now, not later. Otherwise, you may lose, just by default.

To order, simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom Package", and send it along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept. E-946, Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 South Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material immediately, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow substantial amounts of cash at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

Mark O. Haroldsen

P.S. If you are still somewhat skeptical, and believe me, when I started out I certainly was, (because of the many people in the world trying to deceive others) I would encourage you to postdate your check by 30 days, and I promise and guarantee that it will not be deposited for at least those 30 days, and if for any reason you do not think that what I have sent you lives up, in every aspect to what I told you in this letter, send the material back, and I will quickly, without question, refund your money and send back your own uncashed check or money order. Also, if you would like to check a few of my references, I have listed some below.

Harvest secret. What makes the U.S. the world's most efficient food exporter? The Soviets employ many more farm workers than we do, yet they harvest only 80 percent as much grain and get but 65 percent as big a grain yield per acre. They use 15 pounds of grain to produce 1 pound of livestock—we do it for half that. A farm worker in the Soviet Union feeds seven people; each American farmer, 55.

Here's the answer. America's secret is partly weather and climate but largely the widespread use of fertilizer and suitable machinery in our superbly efficient agricultural system. Soviet farms also suffer from being too large, adds agronomist Ronald Nairn of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars: they're generally run by planners too far away to make quick, critical decisions. Russian farmers produce prodigiously on their own private garden plots but not on the "collectives," demonstrating once more that free enterprise is a powerful economic spur to producing bounty for all.

The key: energy. Nowhere is the dependency of economic growth on energy growth more evident than in feeding America. Growing and processing food now account for 16.5 percent of the energy the U.S. consumes. Part of this goes to fuel ever-more-complex machines, and for crop-drying, irrigation, and transportation. Much goes, too, for pesticides, herbicides, fungicides, and fertilizers made from petroleum feedstocks.

"It's our new five-year plan. Sow a little, reap a little, and buy grain in America."

Food for thought. The lesson is clear. If American agriculture is to continue to prosper, farmers must have secure energy supply: one reason the American Farm Bureau Federation wants an end to petroleum price controls so there'll be incentive to find more energy in this country. For U.S. farmers recognize what Russian farmers are trying to tell their own government: nothing brings out supply quite like a marketplace freed from excessive government regulation. What works for grain works also for oil, gas, and coal.

EDITOR'S NOTE: There isn't anyone, especially a celebrity, about whom a derisive comment can't be made—and no one knows this better than Don Rickles. For instance, he recently said about a man sitting ringside at a performance: "This schnook wears a wash 'n' wear suit and gets a gravy stain on his new silk tie!"

Rickles is currently starring in "CPO Sharkey" on NBC-TV. He can frequently be seen performing at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas and other top clubs, plus concert halls.

In his own version of Will Rogers' famous line, Rickles says: "I never met a man I couldn't dislike."

Here he is tossing—and receiving—some barbs:

To his audience: "Thanks for the applause. My maid gets a bigger hand when she runs a rag over the piano keys."

To Lee Marvin: "Hello, old-timer. Come in and watch a big star in action."

To Bob Hope at a gala event: "What are you doing here? The government has no troops stationed here."

On a new movie: "I came in late, but I wish I had missed it from the beginning."

About George Burns: "There's a guy who came to California for arthritis 30 years ago, and he's finally got it."

About his mother: "When I was a kid, she used to visit my teacher so often that the other kids elected her class president."

To Harry James: "So what if your lip is gone? You can still hum, can't you?"

To Frank Sinatra: "Frank, I've seen you in nightclubs, I've watched you in movies, I've listened to your records—and I say this from my heart: You're dull."

Seeing Tony Curtis in his audience: "I remember Tony when all he did was run around with a sword, dueling. In those days his Bronx accent was so bad that it embarrassed his butcher."

Spotting TV emcee-philanthropist Monty Hall in the stands during a football game: "Monty, there are three underprivileged kids in the bleachers. Pull out a tablecloth and throw a benefit dinner for them."

To Johnny Carson: "I really like your show. I turn it on and use the TV as a night light."

About Bing Crosby: "He has made so much money singing 'White Christmas,' Bing Crosby now owns his own snow."

To Steve Lawrence: "Don't worry, Steve. Some day your throat will heal and you'll be able to get along without Eydie."

SOME CELEBRITIES PUT DOWN RICKLES

Dean Martin: "Rickles was so ugly when he was born that the doctor slapped his mother."

Red Buttons: "I understand Rickles went to Belfast recently and sold the IRA the rights to the perfect bomb—his TV show."

Jack Carter: "Don's the kind of guy who would buy his mother a swimming pool and put sharks in it."

Pat McCormick: "The reason Don Rickles was late in arriving at his last show was that he was out walking his pet rat."

The late Jack E. Leonard: "Don has a great comedy style—mine. He's one of America's greatest unknowns."
